Text of Prince Lichnowsky's Startling Revelations, Proving Kaiser Guilty of the War

First Detailed Publication of the Now Famous Suppressed Memorandum of Emperor's Former Envoy at London Telling How England Strove to Avoid the Conflict

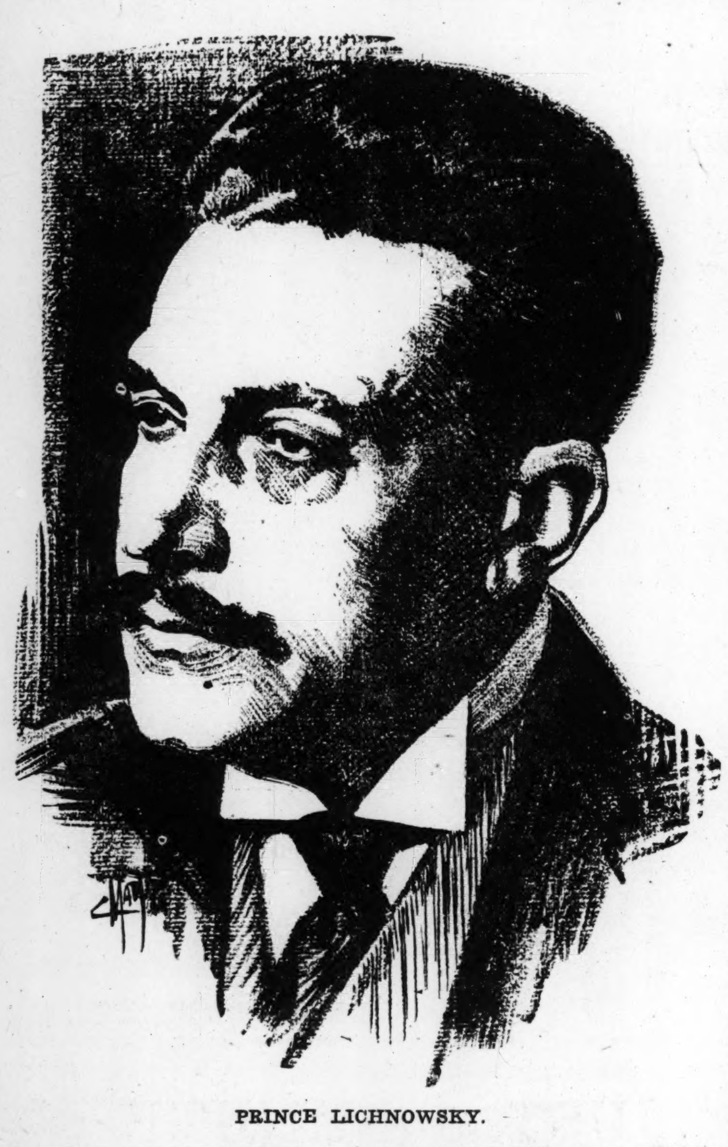
Ambassador Recites Difficulties He Encountered in Efforts to Convince British of German Friendship and Interest in Face of Meddling Diplomatic Acts That Kept the World in Turmoil and Made the "German Peril" an Apparent Menace With Which There Could Be No Compromise.

THE Post-Dispatch prints below the complete text of the famous memorandum written by Prince Lichnowsky, former German Ambassador in London in August, 1917, and first published in recent issues of the Stockholm newspaper Politiken. According to the Berliner Tageblatt:

"It was an officer, member of an old family, decorated with the iron cross of the first class, who had become a pacifist in the course of his war experiences, who first circulated Prince Lichnowsky's memorandum without the Prince's knowledge, laboring under the delusion that he was doing something useful and necessary."

The Volksstaimme (Mannheim, Socialist) says of it:

"Whilst it cannot be regarded as a final judgment, it is an important testimony. The Prince's testimony with regard to Germany just prior to the war is based on hearsay, while what he says of the English policy is the result of the Prince's own knowledge. Of two theories, only one is possible; either Prince Lichnowsky, the German Ambassador to London, is the most incurable idiot who ever sat in the Ambassador's chair, or else not a shred remains of the fiction that the outbreak of the war was due to intrigues of Germany's enemies.



PRINCE LICHNOWSKY.

Ambassador Prince Lichnowsky's Memorandum in Full.

"KUCHELNA, Aug. 16, 1917.—Baron Marschall died in September, 1912, having held his post in London for a few months only. His appointment, which was due mainly to his age and the plotting of a younger man to get to London, was one of the many mistakes made by our Foreign Office. In spite of his imposing personality and great reputation he was too old and tired to be able to adapt himself to a purely foreign and Anglo-Saxon milieu.

"He was more of a bureaucrat and a lawyer than a diplomat or statesman. He set to work to convince Englishmen of the harmless character of our German fleet, and naturally succeeded in strengthening an entirely opposite impression.

"To my great surprise I was offered the post of Ambassador to England in October, 1912. After many years of work I had withdrawn to the country, as no suitable post had been found for me, and I spent my time on my farm and in my garden, on horseback and in the fields, but I read industriously and published occasional political articles. Thus eight years passed, and 13 since I had left Vienna as Ambassador. That was actually my last political employment.

I do not know to whom my appointment in London was due. At all events, not to His Majesty, as I did not belong to his immediate set, though he was always gracious to me. I know by experience that his candidates were frequently successfully opposed.

"As a matter of fact, Herr von Kiderlen-Wachter wanted to send Baron von Stumm to London. He met me at once with undisguised ill-will, and tried to frighten me by rudeness. Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg was amiable to me, and had visited me shortly before at Gratz. I am, therefore, inclined to think that they settled on me as no other candidate was available. The moment was obviously favorable for an attempt to come to a better understanding with England.

"Our obscure policy in Morocco had repeatedly caused distrust of our peaceful intention, or at least, had raised doubts as to whether we knew what we wanted or whether our intention was to keep Europe in a state of suspense, and, on occasion, to humiliate the French. An Austrian colleague, who was a time in Paris, said to me:

"'The French had begun to forget their revanche (revenge). You have regularly reminded them of it by trampling on their toes.'

"After we had declined Delcasse's offer to come to an agreement regarding Morocco, and then solemnly declared that we had no political interest there—an attitude which agreed with Bismarckian political conditions—we suddenly discovered in Abdul Aziz a Kruger number two. To him also, as to the Boers, we promised the protection of the mighty German Empire, and with the same result. Both manifestations concluded as they were bound to conclude, with a retraction, if we were not prepared to start a world-war. The pitiable conference of Algeciras could alter nothing, and still less cause Delcasse's fall.

"Our attitude furthered the Russo-Japanese and Russo-British rapproachment. In face of the 'German peril' all other considerations faded into the background. The possibility of another Franco-German war had been patent, and, as had not been the case in 1870, such a war could not leave out Russia or England.

Prince Lichnowsky's Blistering Reflections on German Diplomacy

"We (the Germans) had always backed horses which it was evident would lose."

"Trade jealousy, so much talked about among us, rests on faulty judgment of circumstances."

"On Aug. 2, (1914,) when I saw Asquith in order to make a final attempt, he was completely broken, and although quite calm, tears ran down his face."

"Of course it would only have needed a hint from Berlin to make Count Berchtold (Austrian Foreign Minister in Aug., 1914,) satisfy himself with a diplomatic success and put up with the Serbian reply."

"The impression became ever stronger that we (Germany) desired war in all circumstances."

"Thus ended my London mission. It was wrecked not by the perfidy of the British, but by the perfidy of our policy."

"I had to support in London a policy which I knew to be fallacious. I was punished for it, for it was a sin against the Holy Ghost."

"The valuelessness of the Triple Alliance had already been demonstrated at Algeciras and, immediately afterward, the equal worthlessness of the agreements made there when the Sultanate fell to pieces—which was, of course, unavoidable. Meanwhile the belief was spreading among the Russian people that our foreign policy was weak and was breaking down under 'encirclement,' and that cowardly surrender followed on haughty gestures.

"It is to the credit of Von Kiderlen-Wachter, though otherwise overrated as a statesman, that he cleared up the Moroccan situation and adapted himself to circumstances which could not be altered. Whether the world had to be upset by the Agadir coup is a question I do not touch.

"The event was hailed with joy in Germany, but in England caused all the more uneasiness in that the British Government waited in vain for three weeks for a statement of our intentions.

"Mr. Lloyd George's Mansion House speech, intended to warn us, was a consequence. Before Delcasse's fall and before the Algeciras conference we could have obtained harbors and bases on the West Coast but that was no longer possible.

"When I came to London in November, 1912, people had become easier about the question of Morocco, especially since an agreement had been reached with France and Berlin. Lord Haldane's mission had failed, it is true, as we demanded promises of neutrality instead of contenting ourselves with a treaty which would insure us against a British attack or any attack with British support.

"Sir Edward Grey had not, meanwhile, given up the idea of coming to an understanding with us, and made such an attempt firstly on economic and colonial grounds. Through the agency of that qualified and expert Councillor of Embassy, Von Kuhlmann, an exchange of opinions had taken place with regard to the renewal of the Portuguese colonial treaty and the Bagdad Railway, which thus carried out the unexpected aim of dividing into spheres of interest both the above-mentioned colonies and Asia Minor.

"The British statesman, old points in dispute with France and Russia having been settled, wished to come to a similar agreement with us. His intention was not to isolate us, but to make us in so far as possible partners in a working concern. Just as he had succeeded in bridging Franco-British and Russo-British difficulties, so he wished to remove German-British difficulties, and by a network of treaties — which would finally include an agreement on the miserable fleet question—to secure the peace of the world, as our earlier policy had lent itself to a co-operation with the Entente, which contained a mutual assurance against the danger of war.

"This was Sir Edward Grey's program in his own words, 'Without infringing on the existing friendly relations with France and Russia, which in themselves contained no aggressive elements and no binding obligations for England, to seek to achieve a more friendly rapprochement with Germany, and to bring the two groups nearer together.'

"In England, as with us, there were two opinions, that of the optimists, who believed in an understanding, and that of the pessimists, who considered war inevitable sooner or later. Among the former were Mr. Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, Lord Haldane and most of the Ministers in the Radical Cabinet, as well as leading Liberal organs, such as the Westminster Gazette, the Manchester Guardian and the Daily Chronicle.

"To the pessimists belong especially Conservative politicians like Mr. Balfour, who repeatedly made his meaning clear to me; leading soldiers such as Lord Roberts, who insisted on the necessity of conscription, and on 'the writing on the wall', and, further, the Northcliffe press, and that leading English journalist, Mr. Garvin of the Observer. During my term of office they abstained from all attacks and took up, personally and politically, a friendly attitude.

"Our naval policy and our attitude in the year 1905, 1908 and 1911 had, nevertheless, caused them to think that it might one day come to war. Just as with us, the former are now dubbed shortsighted and simple-minded, while the latter are regarded as the true prophets.

Balkan Questions.

"The first Balkan war led to the collapse of Turkey, and with it the defeat of our policy, which had been identified with Turkey for many years. Since the salvation of Turkey in Europe was no longer feasible, only two possibilities for settling the question remained. Either we declared we had no longer any interest in the definition of boundaries in the Balkan Peninsula, and left the settlement of the question to the Balkan people themselves, or we supported our allies and carried out a Triple Alliance policy in the East, thereby giving up the role of mediator.

"I urged the former course from the beginning, but the German Foreign Office very much preferred the latter. The chief question was Albania. Our allies desired the establishment of an independent state of Albania, as Austria would not allow Serbia to reach the Adriatic, and Italy did not wish the Greeks to reach Valona or even the territory north of Corfu.

"On the other hand, Russia, as is known, favored Serbian, and France Greek desires. My advice was now to consider the question as outside the alliance and to support neither Austrian nor Italian wishes. Without our support the establishment of Albania, whose incapability of existence might have been foreseen, was an impossibility. Serbia would have pushed forward to the coast; then the present world war would have been avoided.

"France and Italy would have remained definitely divided, as to Greece, and the Italians, had they not wished to fight France alone, would have been obliged to consent to the expansion of Greece to the district north of Durazzo. The greater part of civilized Albania is Greek. The southern towns are entirely Greek, and at the time of the Conference of Ambassadors, deputations from the larger towns came to London to carry through the annexations to Greece.

"In Greece today whole groups are Albanian, and the so-called Greek national dress is of Albanian origin. The amalgamation of the preponderating Orthodox and Islamic Albanians with the Greek State was, therefore, the best solution and the most natural, if one leaves out of account Scutari and the northern part of Serbia and Montenegro. His Majesty, the Kaiser, was also in favor of this solution on dynastic grounds.

"When I encouraged the monarch by letter to this effect, I received violent reproaches from the Chancellor for supporting Austria's opponents, and he forbade all such interference in the future, and even direct correspondence. We had eventually, however, to abandon the tradition of carrying out the Triple Alliance policy in the East, and to acknowledge our mistake, which consisted in identifying ourselves with the Turks in the south and the Austro-Magyars in the north; for the continuance of that policy, which we began at the Congress in Berlin and subsequently carried on zealously, was bound in time, should the necessary skill in conducting it fail, to lead to a collision with Russia and a world war.

"Instead of uniting with Russia on the basis of the independence of the Sultan, whom the Russians also did not wish to drive out of Constantinople, and confiding ourselves to economic interests in the East, whilst at the same time refraining from all military and political interference, and being satisfied with a division of Asia Minor into spheres of interest, the goal of our political ambition was to dominate in the Bosphorus. In Russia, therefore, the opinion arose that the way to Constantinople and to the Mediterranean lay through Berlin.

"Intead of encouraging a powerful development in the Balkan states, which were once free and are very different from the Russians, of which fact we have already had experience, we placed ourselves on the side of the Turkish and Magyar oppressors.

"The dire mistake of our Triple Alliance and our Eastern policies, which drove Russia—our natural friend and best neighbor—into the arms of France and England, and kept her from her policy of Asiatic expansion, was the more evident, as a Franco-Russian attack, the only hypothesis justifying a Triple Alliance policy, had to be eliminated from our calculations.

"As to the value of the alliance with Italy, one word only. Italy needs our money and our tourists after the war, with or without our alliance. That our alliance would go by the board in the event of war was to be foreseen. The alliance consequently was worthless.

All Profits to Austria.

"Austria, however, needed our protection, both in war and peace, and had no other point d'appui. This dependence on us is based on political, national and economic grounds, and is all the greater in proportion to the intimacy of our relations with Russia. This was proved in the Bosnian crisis. Under the influence of a properly conducted German policy which would keep us in touch with Russia, Austria-Hungary is our vassal, and is tied to us even without an alliance and without reciprocal service; under the influence of a misguided policy, however, we are tied to Austria-Hungary. An alliance would therefore be purposeless.

"Little as the Slavs living there love us, they wish just as little for a return to the German Kaiserdom, even with a Hapsburg-Lorraine at its head. They are striving for an internal Austrian Federation, on a national basis, a condition which is even less likely of realization within the German Empire than under the Double Eagle.

"Austro-Germans look on Berlin as the center of German power and kultur, and they know that Austria can never be a leading Power. They desire as close a connection as possible with the empire, but not to the extent of an anti-German policy.

"We had no need to heed the desires of our allies. They were not only unnecessary, but dangerous, inasmuch as they would lead to a collision with Russia if we looked at Eastern questions through Austrian eyes. The transformation of our alliance, with its original purpose into a complete alliance, involving a complexity of common interests, was calculated to call forth the very state of things which the constitutional negotiations were designed to prevent, namely, war.

"The contrast between dynastic and democratic ideas had to be given clear expression, and, as usual, we stood on the wrong side. Matters stood in the same position in Serbia, where, against our own economic interests, we were supporting an Austrian policy of strangulation.

"We had always backed horses which it was evident would lose, such as Kruger, Abdul Aziz, Abdul Hamid, Wilhelm of Wield, and finally—and this was the most miserable mistake of all—Count Berchtold.

"Shortly after my arrival in London, in 1912, Sir Edward Grey proposed an informal exchange of views in order to prevent a European war developing out of the Balkan war, since, at the outbreak of that war, we had unfortunately declined the proposal of the French Government to join in a declaration of disinterestedness and impartiality on the part of the Powers.

"The British statesman maintained from the beginning that England had no interest in Albania, and would, therefore, not go to war on the subject. In his role of 'honest broker' he would confine his efforts to mediation and an attempt to smooth away difficulties between the two groups.

"He, therefore, by no means placed himself on the side of the Entente Powers, and during the negotiations, which lasted about eight months, he lent his goodwill and powerful influence toward the establishment of an understanding. Instead of adopting the English point of view, we accepted that dictated to us by Vienna. Count Mensdorff led the Triple Alliance in London, and I was his second.

"The German Came Too Late and the War Destroyed the Possibility of His Catching Up."—Prince Lichnowsky

"And what result have we to expect from the struggle of people? The United States of Africa will be British, like the United States of America, Australia, and Oceania; and the Latin States of Europe, as I said years ago, will fall into the same relationship to the United Kingdom as the Latin sisters of America to the United States. They will be dominated by the Anglo-Saxon; France, exhausted by the war, will link herself still more closely to Great Britain. In the long run, Spain also will not resist.

"In Asia, the Russians and Japanese will expand with their limitations and their customs, and the South will remain to the British.

"The world will belong to the Anglo-Saxon, the Russian, and the Japanese, and the German will remain alone with Austria and Hungary. His sphere of power will be that of thought and of trade, not that of the bureaucrats and the soldiers. The German appeared too late, and the world war has destroyed the last possibility of catching up the lost ground, of founding a Colonial Empire."

"On every point, including Albania, the Serbian harbors in the Adriatic, Scutari, and in the definition of the Albanian frontiers, we were on the side of Austria and Italy, while Sir Edward Grey hardly ever took the French or Russian point of view. On the contrary, he nearly always took our part, in order to give no pretext for war—which was afterwards brought about by a dead Archduke. It was with his help that King Nicholas was induced to leave Scutari. Otherwise there would have been war over this matter, as we should never have dared to ask 'our allies' to make concessions.

"Sir Edward Grey conducted the negotiations with care, calm and tact. When a question threatened to become involved he proposed a formula, which met the case and always secured consent. He acquired the full confidence of all the representatives.

"Russia has been obliged to give way to us all along the line, as she never got an opportunity to advance Serbian wishes. Albania was set up as an Austrian vassal State, and Serbia was driven away from the sea. The conference was thus a fresh humiliation for Russia.

"As in 1878 and 1908, we had opposed the Russian program without German interests being brought into play.

"The dissatisfaction then prevalent in Russia was given vent to during the London Conference by an attack in the Russian press on my Russian colleague and on Russian diplomacy.

"Count Benckendorff possessed many of the qualities of a good diplomat—tact, worldly knowledge, experience, an agreeable personality and a natural eye for men and things. He sought always to avoid provocative attitudes, and was supported by the attitude of England and France.

"I once said, 'The feeling in Russia is very anti-German.' He replied. 'There are also many strong influential pro-German circles there. But the people generally are anti-Austrian.'

England Conciliatory.

"The British Government was most accommodating in regard to our interests and wishes. Sir Edward Grey wished to show us his good will, but also wished in the main to further our colonial development, the while England hoped to lead the German development of power from the North Sea and West Europe to the Atlantic and Africa. 'We do not grudge Germany her colonial development,' a member of the Cabinet said to me. The British Government's honesty in striving to respect our rights shows itself in that Sir Edward Grey before the treaty was completed and signed indicated to us English business men who were willing to invest capital in the districts conceded to us by the new treaty, and thereby wished for British support, with the remark that the treaty in question belonged to our sphere of interest.

"Even before his majesty, King George's visit to Berlin—that is, in May, 1913—the treaty was practically ready. Under the presidency of the Chancellor a discussion took place in Berlin in which I also took part, when further requests were agreed to.

On my return to London I succeeded, with the help of Herr von Kuhlmann, who had worked out the details of the treaty with Mr. Parker, to carry through our latest proposal, so that the whole treaty was ready to be initialed by Sir Edward Grey and myself before my leave.

"But now new difficulties arose to prevent the signing, and only after one year, that is, shortly before the oubreak of war, could I receive authority finally to conclude the treaty. It was, however, never signed. Sir Edward Grey would only sign on condition that the treaty was published, together with both treaties of 1898 and 1899. England has no secret treaties, and it was contrary to existing principles to keep secret a treaty. He could, therefore, conclude no treaty without publishing it. On the question of time and the manner of publication, he was also ready to consider our wishes, on the condition that the publication took place within a year of the signature.

"But at the German Foreign Office, where my successes in London created increasing distrust, it was stated that the publication would jeopardize our interests in the colonies, where, further, the Portuguese would give us no more concessions. The treaty, which offered us exceptional advantages, the result of more than one year's work, consequently fell through.

"At the same time, I was negotiating, with the effective co-operation of Herr von Kuhlmann, the so-called Bagdad Railway treaty. This aimed, in fact, at the division of Asia Minor into spheres of interest, although this expression was carefully avoided in consideration of the Sultan's rights. Sir Edward Grey declared repeatedly that there was no agreement between England and France aiming at a division of Asia Minor.

"In the presence of the Turkish representative, Hakki Pasha, all economic questions in connection with the German treaty were settled mainly in accordance with the wishes of the Ottoman Band. The greatest concession Sir Edward Grey made me personally was the continuation of the line to Basra. We had not insisted on this terminus in order to establish connection with Alexandretta. Hitherto Bagdad had been the terminus of the line.

"By this treaty the whole of Mesopotamia up to Basra became our zone of interest, whereby the whole British rights, the question of shipping on the Tigris, and the Wilcox establishments were left untouched, as well as all the district of Bagdad and the Anatolian railways. The economic territories of Great Britain included the coasts of the Persian Gulf and the Smyrna-Aiden Railway, those of France, Syria, and those of Russia, Armenia. Had both treaties been concluded and published, an agreement would have been reached with England which would have finally ended all doubt of the possibility of an Anglo-German co-operation.

German Fleet Menace.

"Most difficult of all, there remained the question of the fleet. It was never rightly judged. The creation of a mighty fleet on the other shore of the North Sea, and the simultaneous development of the Continent's most important military power into the important naval power had at least to be recognized by England as uncomfortable. This presumably cannot be doubted.

"To maintain the necessary lead and not to become dependent, to preserve the supremacy of the sea which Great Britain must have in order not to go down, she had to undertake preparations and expenses which weighed heavily on the taxpayer. A threat against the British world position was made in that our policy allowed the possibility of warlike developments to appear. This possibility was obviously near during the Morocco crisis and the Bosnian question. One had become reconciled to our fleet in its definite strength. Obviously it was not welcome to the British and constituted one of the motives, but neither the only nor the most important motive, for England's joining hands with Russia and France.

"On account of our fleet alone, however, England would no more have drawn the sword than on account of our trade, which it is pretended called forth her jealousy and finally brought about war.

"From the beginning I adopted the standpoint that, in spite of the fleet, it would be possible to come to a friendly understanding and reapproachment if we did not propose new votes of credit, and, above all, if we carried out an indisputable peace policy.

"I also avoided all mention of the fleet and between me and Sir Edward Grey, the word was never uttered. Sir Edward Grey declared on one occasion at a Cabinet meeting: 'The present German Ambassador has never mentioned the fleet to me.'

The Naval Holiday.

"During my term of office the then First Lord, Mr. Churchill, raised the question of a so-called naval holiday, and proposed, for financial reasons, as much as on account of the pacifist inclinations of his party, a one year's pause in armaments. Officially, the suggestion was not supported by Sir Edward Grey. He never spoke of it to me, but Mr. Churchill did so repeatedly. I am convinced that his initiative was honest, cunning in general not being part of the Englishman's constitution. It would have been a great success for Mr. Churchill to secure economies for the country and to lighten the burden of armament, which was weighing heavily on the people. I maintain that it would have been difficult to support his intention. How about the workmen employed for this purpose?

"How about the technical personnel? Our naval program was settled, and it would be difficult to alter it. Nor, on the other hand, did we intend exceeding it. But he pointed out that the means spent on portentous armaments could equally be used for other purposes. I maintain that such expenditure would benefit home industries.

"I also succeeded, in conversation with Sir William Tyrrell, Sir Edward Grey's private secretary, in keeping away that subject without raising suspicion, although it came up in Parliament, and preventing the Government's proposal from being made. But it was Mr. Churchill's and the Government's favorite idea that by supporting his initiative in the matter of large ships we should give proof of our goodwill and considerably strengthen and increase the tendency on the part of the Government to get in closer contact with us.

"But, as I have said, it was impossible, in spite of our fleet and without naval holidays, to come to an understanding. In that spirit I had carried out my mission from the beginning, and had even succeeded in realizing my program, when the war broke out and destroyed everything.

"Trade jealousy, so much talked about among us, rests on faulty judgment of circumstances. It is a fact that German's progress as a trading country after the war of 1870 and during the following decades, threatened the interests of British trade circles, constituting a form of monopoly with its industry and export houses. But the growing interchange of merchandise with Germany, which was first on the list of all European exporting countries—a fact I always referred to in my public speeches—had brought to maturity the desire to preserve good relations with England's best client and business friend, and had gradually suppressed all other thoughts and motives.

"The Englishman, as a matter of fact, adapts himself to circumstances and does not tilt against windmills. In commercial circles I found the greatest good-will and desire to further our common economic interests. No one there interested himself in the Russian, Italian, Austrian, or even the French representatives, in spite of the imposing personality and political success of the last named. Only the German and American Ambassadors attracted public attention.

"In order to get in touch with the most important business circles I accepted invitations from the United Chambers of Commerce, the London and Bradford Chambers, and those of the great cities of Newcastle and Liverpool. I had a hearty reception everywhere. Glasgow and Edinburgh had also invited me, and I promised them visits. People who did not understand English conditions and did not appreciate the value of public dinners, and others who disliked my success, reproached me with having done harm by my speeches. I, on the contrary, believe that my public appearances and my discussion of common economic interests contributed considerably toward

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Message of the Biblical Prophets.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In last Sunday's Post-Dispatch a correspondent applied a passage from the Book of Revelation to events in the present and supposedly immediate future. Agreeing with that writer that the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments are in many ways applicable to the present time, I can hardly agree with the application made in that instance.

Let me say at the outset that recent study of the Old Testament prophets has changed materially the estimate of their character and messages. Instead of being seated on an eminence far above the turmoil of their times, they were in the thick of the strife, dealing with present issues, giving and taking hard blows in defense of what seemed to them right. In their times church and state were united, and they were not only religious teachers, but statesmen and politicians. This is especially true of the earlier and greater prophets, Amos, Hosea, Micah, Isaiah and Jeremiah. Read with this thought in mind they become intensely real and their words will burn like fire.

Later came apocalyptic writers, with some of the qualities of the prophets, quite different from them in some notable points. Reckoned among the prophetic writings, the Book of Daniel is the apocalyptic book of the Old Testament, as Revelation is that of the New. With all their peculiar, often fantastic imagery, both these books had an intensely practical aim. The Book of Daniel was written to encourage the Jewish people in their resistance to the attempts of Antiochus Epiphanes to turn them from the worship of Jehovah to that of the Greek divinities. The Book of Revelation, written near the end of the first Christian century, was meant to strengthen the early Christians in their loyalty to Jesus Christ, when subjected to persecution and death for their refusal to join in the worship of the Roman Emperor. It was not meant to foretell distant events, the writer expressly declaring that the time was close at hand. Just how the teachings of the book are applicable now I might state, but will hardly attempt to do so here, only saying that I do not agree with the writer above referred to.

FAYETTE HURD.

The Descent of Man.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

In 1872 Darwin published a work in two volumes with the above title. In the preface to the second volume he makes a confession of "a serious and unfortunate error" in the first volume. The title of that work was also unfortunate. It should have been "The Ascent of Man."

Some of us who cannot deny that our ancestors came from countries which are now invading surrounding countries in what they term a "defensive war" should give those ancestors credit for their intelligence and good sense. They have helped us to realize that we have ascended from a lower order of animals. F. E. N.

To Conserve Shipping Space.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

Having noted recently in the press that the tonnage of eatable sent to our forces in France is reaching an enormous figure (by eatables I mean candy and the like sent by friends), the idea came to my mind that a campaign could be started to lessen this burden for our ships and still the boys could be supplied with the things they need and want in the way of sweets.

We have "Smileage" coupons. Why not start a new kind of book containing coupons good at any of the Y. M. C. A. huts or like canteens in France? A mother, sister, etc., could send these over with the knowledge that the recipient could get what most he wanted.

The demands of the boys could be met, and the tonnage, while being not necessarily smaller, would be so controlled that it would be a less burden to our ships. Also things would not be apt to spoil, as they would if shipped by a person not experienced in making up packages for ocean transit. C. Y. C.

Last Chance to Say Good-By.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

I heartily agree with the person who protested against the manner in which the citizens of St. Louis have been treated recently when trying to welcome their soldier boys. It is very unjust and unfair when the soldier boys are in their home town and their folks cannot even tell them good-by for the last time; their flesh and blood. It is just as heart-breaking to the soldier boys as it is for the parents, wives, brothers and sisters and sweethearts. They are giving their share to help win the war and I think they ought to be treated humanely.

A FRIEND.

THE SENATORSHIP.

It is to the credit of Speaker Clark that he put away the United States senatorship, proffered him by Gov. Gardner, in order that he might remain at his post as Speaker of the House of Representatives during the war crisis through which the country is passing.

Speaker Clark has enjoyed the honor of long service in the House and of the longest service in the Speaker's chair, with two exceptions—Henry Clay and Joseph G. Cannon. He has been Speaker for four Congresses. A term in the Senate, no matter how brief, as a rounding out of his public life undoubtedly was tempting, but he chose to continue his service in the House. There may be difference of opinion as to Champ Clark's disability as a Senator. His opposition to conscription and his speech against it, with his subsequent conduct, are dark spots in his record, but there is no doubt of his record as Speaker. The assurances of Republican leaders that they would not oppose the election of a Democrat to the chair, in order to free his hands for acceptance of the senatorship, is eloquent testimony to the Speaker's fairness and his popularity among his fellow Congressmen.

It is highly creditable to another Missourian, Ambassador Francis, that he remains on duty at a post of unusual difficulty and danger at the special request of Secretary of State Lansing. Mr. Lansing held that the Ambassador's capacity and experience made him so valuable in the present delicate Russian situation that he could not be spared from his place.

As Chief Justice of the Supreme Court Judge Graves has reasons to consider whether it would not be better to stay at his post than to relinquish it for a brief term in the Senate. It is true that his transfer would be a distinct loss to the Supreme bench, but in character, capacity and unquestioned loyalty he measures up to the senatorial test. There is opportunity in the Senate for valuable service for a man with Judge Graves' qualifications, and if he rendered service he would be in strong position for election. Continuance in the office would probably rest with his record and will.

Make no mistake. Missouri does not step into the Liberty Loan ranks as a "Mysterious Stranger." The only mystery is that there should be any surprise that the Central West, including Missouri and other states in the St. Louis district, should be leading the way in the big drive. The alleged "lukewarmness" of the interior states was always a fiction.

PRACTICAL WIN-THE-WAR WOMEN.

The Kansas Federation of Women's Clubs met at Salina the other day and started enrollment of its members who are willing to "work on farms to win the war." After the plan was explained, a number of women volunteered service, offering to go themselves or send their daughters, as the employer preferred.

These women, many of whom have lived on the farms, and most of them within sight of farms all of their lives, have no visions of Maude Muller nor of the farmerette in her charming, specially constructed overalls. They have enlisted to work where they can do the best, in the farm kitchens. One of the experienced and practical women belonging to this federation warned when the topic was suggested that women were not wanted to help in the fields, but in the kitchens. She told the club women that the women now on the farms could, in most cases, do their own work better than anybody else. But most of these women could also do a lot of chores around the place, which the men now have to do. On a two-man farm, this chore work was estimated at the equal of one day a week for each man. The housewife, the advisor said, could do this work if they had help in the kitchen and that a town woman could supply that help and thus contribute materially to the work in the field.

The volunteers were warned that they "probably would be horror-stricken the first time they observed the quantity of food they will have to cook for a party of hard-working farmhands, but that they will get used to it after awhile." Some of the volunteers already have been called into service and others will go when the harvest begins.

FATHERS AND MOTHERS OF SOLDIERS.

A soldier and the father of a soldier stood on the dock. The ship was waiting which was to bear the soldier away for the third time to the battlefields. "If you knew that I was to be killed within the next month," the soldier asked, "would you rather I went or stayed?" "Much rather you went," the father of a soldier answered.

W. J. Dawson, the father of that soldier, who sorrowed when the war called his son, has found that there is, in being the father of a soldier, an exaltation and pride that compensates for sorrow. It is an exaltation and pride, he has come to believe, that comes to every father of a soldier and every mother of a soldier with a richness that requites the sorrow and the anxiety and soothes anguish.

Being an author, the father of an author-soldier, Lieut. Coningsby Dawson, he is telling the fathers of soldiers and the mothers of soldiers in a book which he calls "The Father of a Soldier," about the exaltation and pride that will come to them after the sorrow and the anxiety. He has weighed the worth of his sons given to war, and has considered the havoc of war, and his appraisement is that he, the father of a soldier, and all fathers of soldiers and all mothers of soldiers, and the world, are overpaid in spiritual results for all the cost.

War in a righteous cause, as he visions it, "revealed a constructive force, steadfastly at work beneath visible destruction. I saw its elemental fires burning out the unrealities from the thoughts and lives of men. I saw it consuming a vast holocaust of human shams • • • It was clean flame, attacking all that was unclean—the plague of decadence, the corruption of cowardice, the foolish pride and the still more foolish complacency of stagnant lives. And it did more than destroy the evil; it made room for the good to grow and thrive. The world lay scorched and sterile for a time, as it did when the primal creative fires had spent themselves; but the verdure of a new Eden began already to appear, and Beauty trod behind the footsteps of Destruction."

CROPS AND BONDS.

A former Southerner has been checking up on the Liberty Bond records in the Third Loan drive and he reports that the communities that were first to go "over the top" were chiefly those where diversified farming has been accepted and practiced. He points out especially that Arkansas and Northern Mississippi made especially good records and that both of these communities long ago welcomed the farm agent and his doctrine of home living.

This condition is an interesting commentary on the successful campaign that has been conducted to win the farmers from the line of least resistance. It is proof that by jarring a man out of the rut you make him alert and more prosperous. The real facts probably are that many men in the one-crop districts are as willing to help win the war as those in the diversified districts, but they have not the money to do so. Doubtless they had much money last fall when they sold their cotton for high prices, but it has all been spent in feeding the family at war-time prices, while the diversified farmer had to spend little of his smaller crop revenue because he raised enough provisions for the family, and perhaps had some other produce to sell.

It all goes to show that if a man be a true patriot, he must begin serving his country in a time of peace by judicious labor and thrift.

RECIPROCITY.

That was a fine idea of an Iowa lawyer to offer his services free for 30 days to some farmer needing help on his land. It is to be hoped that other lawyers will follow his example. If every lawyer would give 30 days to crop raising it would go a long way towards solving the food problem.

But the thing oughtn't to be one-sided. Would it not be equally advantageous when farm work is slack next winter, for every farmer to give 30 days towards helping the lawyers out? Think what it would mean to have a lot of hard-headed, practical farmers finding short cuts towards ending all the litigation in the country. By next summer, perhaps, the lawyers could afford to put in at least 60 days each at the cultivator or bullrake.

CREATING A NEW CORN STATE.

C. A. Cobb, a Mississippi farm expert, started last fall to give his neighbors an appreciation of corn as a crop. His goal was 5,000,000 acres of corn in that State this year, an increase of perhaps 100 per cent. Most of this land would be withdrawn from the cotton acreage, a most difficult task, but it appears now that Mr. Cobb will come within hailing distance, at least, of his goal.

During the winter Mr. Cobb did his missionary work without reference to cotton. He talked to bankers who loan money to farmers and to the larger farmers on the economy proposition of corn growing, plus the patriotism. In this case, he pointed out, patriotism would be profitable. He showed that the corn consumption of the State was 100,000,000 bushels and constantly increasing. The largest crop raised, that of 1917, was 86,000,000 bushels. He declared that the payment of profit to corn-growing farmers of other states for this excess consumption, and the freight tolls, were waste. Also, he pointed out the well-known fact that owing to the drying season, Southern-grown corn is the best milling corn and always sells at a premium.

In his last drive Mr. Cobb is favored by circumstances. He shows the recent fall in the price of cotton, the fact that there is a surplus of 3,000,000 bales of cotton and that the people of the world are too busy buying things to eat to think much about any but the utmost necessaries of cotton manufacture. He is asking why farmers should raise a crop that is likely to be added to a reduced-price surplus when there is an opportunity to raise a crop that is certain to be scarce and for which there is a tendency towards increased price.

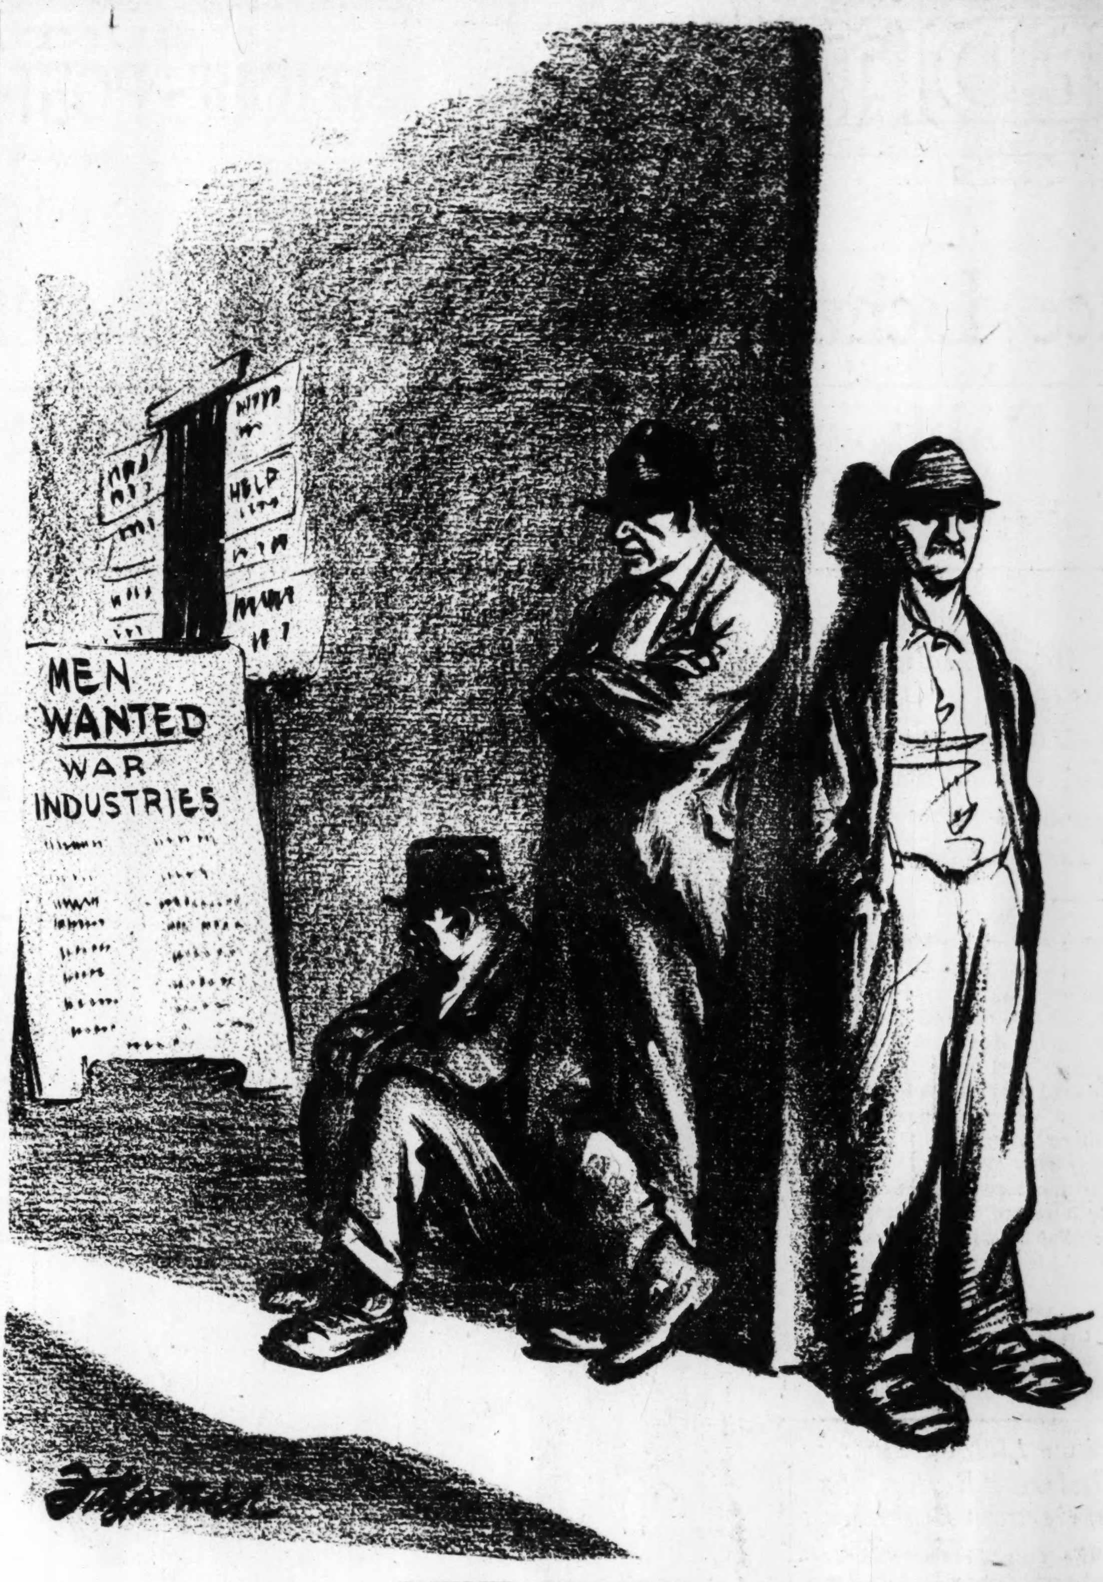
AMOUNT OF THE INDEMNITY.

We cannot help feeling sorry for Count von Roedern, Secretary of the German Imperial Tresury. The Count is in a bad fix. He is doing his best to reconstruct the imperial finances and he cannot get anywhere because he doesn't know the amount of indemnity the foraging Huns will bring back with them.

Think what the man is up against, trying to balance his budget with the indemnity item all gummed up and nobody at hand to straighten it out. Perhaps we are not doing just right to keep him in suspense. Somebody ought to tell him about that indemnity. We have known for some time the amount. If the Count wants to know so badly and it will help him any with his bookkeeping, we don't mind telling him. It will be $0,000,000,000.00, or the equivalent in marks.



ENEMY HELPERS.

JUST A MINUTE

Written for the POST-DISPATCH
by Clark McAdams

THE SILENT MILLION.

THERE'S a million husky youngsters sleeping "light" throughout the land,
There are strains of "goodbye" music from each regimental band.
There is near a million serving with the allied hosts in France,
And a goodly number sailing on old ocean's broad expanse.
One may hear the bugle blowing and the tread of countless feet,
As the boys in brown go marching down the camp-town's dusty street.
One may hear the shouts of banter or a farewell whispered low
When the engine shunts the coaches to the siding just below.
One may hear the draw-heads clicking and the whistling blast of air
As the long train rumbles eastward to the ports for "Over There."

You may see a sweetheart smiling as a camouflage for tears;
Or a father's brave endeavor, in the huskiness of cheers.
There's the little mother waiting for the fatal "All Aboard,"
Steels her heart to meet the issue as a Spartan meets the sword.
Then we turn to sundry duties, to the humdrum of the day;
Somehow life has lost its romance since the troop trains steamed away.
Listen, there's a silent legion, in our midst—a million strong,
Men who serve with scanty tribute, seldom known in verse or song.

You have seen them, in the evening, when their daily toils are o'er,
Marching silently, yet grimly, down the street before your door.
Maybe twenty, maybe fifty of the city's elder sons
Meet to train for "Home Guard" service, sans the uniforms and guns.
If perchance the Kaiser conquered, crushed the allies in his might;
Wrecked all Europe, flanked the armies we had sent across to fight,
If his greedy eyes turned westward to this land as yet unscarred,
He would face this silent legion of the country's faithful guard.

He would meet a vicious welcome from a bristling wall of steel.
And a million hearts undaunted by the war lord's ruthless heel.
He would find the Home Guards ready, with the homes all manned and barred
By the grimly-waiting million of the men who form the guard.
Men will go and men will muster, some will die and some will live,
Some will seek to dodge the issue, some will give and give and give.
There are heroes yet unwritten in the nation's great discard
In the "pat hand" of the fireside, of the men who stand on guard.

SOME QUEER EPITAPHS.

In a cemetery in New London County, Conn., is a lot containing five graves—one in the center and the others nearby at the points of the compass. The inscriptions on the latter read respectively, after the names of the deceased:

My I wife My II wife
My III wife My IIII Wife

The central stone bears this inscription:

Our Husband

In an old Baltimore cemetery there is a burial lot containing three graves in a row. Above the center one are two index fingers pointing to the graves on either side, and below each finger the words, "She's Mine." Above the outside graves index fingers point to the center grave with these words: "He's Ours."

Inexpert verse writers frequently get into difficulties composing epitaphs. This is what one of them did to Thomas Woodcock:

Here lie the remains of one Thomas Woodhen,
The most lovable of husbands and excellent of men.
N. B. His real name was Woodcock, but it wouldn't rhyme.—His Widow.

This was done to a young man at Fairfax, Vt., who passed out in a shooting accident:

O fatal gun, why was it him
That you should kill so dead?
Why didn't you go off a little higher
And shoot over his head?

Near San Diego, Cal., an inscription on a tomb reads:

> This yere is sakrid to the memory of William Henry Skaraken, who caim to his death by bein' shot by Colt's revolver—one of the old kind, bras mountid and of sutch is the kingdom of heavin.

A man in Berkshire County, Mass., after having three wives, put this testimonial upon the tombstone of the third:

The best wife I ever had.

Ben Jonson had one of the most famous of epitaphs, as did his friend Shakspeare. Jonson was buried in an upright position under the pavement of one of the aisles in Westminster Abbey. A plain pavement stone not over two feet square covers the grave, and on this are the words:

O Rare Ben Jonson

Jack Young, a friend of Jonson's, afterward knighted, is credited with this singular appraisal. Young is said to have been walking in the Abbey when a mason was fitting the stone over the grave. He handed the workman 18 pence, together with the inscription, saying of the latter, "Put this on the stone." The mason did it.

Judging by the way our district had to drag St. Louis over the top, we buy Liberty Bonds here as if they were something good to read.

THE NEGRO SOLDIER.

WILLIAM SLAVENS McNUTT in Collier's Weekly.

THERE was one unit at Camp Lee composed of 1600 colored soldiers, selected from West Virginia. Ten days after they arrived in camp with the first quota last fall the call came for them to go immediately to France for special service. The call was sudden and unexpected. Gen. Cronkhite knew that the men had not expected to leave this country for several months. He thought that perhaps some of the 1600 might have good reasons for not wanting to leave at once, so he called for volunteers from the 5000 other colored troops who were in camp to fill up whatever vacancies there might be in the overseas unit. Every one of the 5000 volunteered for immediate overseas service. Then the unit was marched to the hall. The General said that there were volunteers to take the place of any who wished to remain behind. Only 20 per cent of the 1600 availed themselves of the opportunity to stay at home. When the General came from the stage on his way out those newly drafted colored men, facing active service in the war zone within less than two weeks after having broken their civilian ties, started to sing "America." As the General went down the aisle the singing grew to a harmonious roar of affirmation.

Come with me to an officers' mess hall the next day. There is a shout outside: "Hey! Look what's coming!" We step outside. Down the road, thump-thump, thump-thump, comes that same battalion of negro soldiers in full marching order. These soldiers from the mills and cotton fields are on their way to France. The whole camp knows it; the whole camp is grave, quiet. Thump-thump, thump-thump! There is no sound in all that great cantonment save the beat of marching feet and the creaking of packs. The black men know they are on their way abroad. They are a solemn-looking lot. A minister steps out to the edge of the embankment overlooking the road down which the troops are marching, and calls out shakily: "Good-by, boys. God bless you! God take care of you, boys!"

Silence but for the shuffle and thump of booted feet on the roadway. The rollicking, syncopated songs of yesterday were forgotten. A soft, drawling, quavering voice somewhere in the marching ranks began the hymn: "Will There Be Any Stars In My Crown!" Others took it up, and to the words and music of the old church song those black boys tramped their solemn way out of camp to put their bodies to the chance of war on a foreign soil.

They may not have known much about the history of the German nation. Czars and Kaisers may not have been any more real to their minds than ghosts and goblins. It is probable that the majority of them knew very little of the intricacies of Balkan politics. But, believe me, they knew that they were going to a dangerous place. They were not leaving with any idea of enjoying a pleasure picnic. They knew! I know very little of the rights and wrongs of what is spoken of as the Negro Problem of the South; I believe that, whatever the rights and wrongs of it may be, it will prove much easier of adjustment after this war is over.

MISREPRESENTED MISSOURI.

From the Christian Science Monitor.

THE truth is, Missouri has been grossly misrepresented in the Upper House of Congress since the outbreak of the great war. The State has never been in sympathy with either Senator Stone or Senator Reed on war issues. Through many of the ablest and most influential of its newspapers, and through other means, it has endeavored to make this clear to the rest of the country, but until now it has been difficult, because of numerous distractions, to obtain such a hearing as would insure justice.

When Missouri has spoken for itself, or when it has been spoken for by any representative qualified to reflect its real sentiments, it has always been found on the right side, and its actions have gone even further than its words toward proving that it was as ready as any of the sister states to do its whole part in supporting the nation and the nation's allies.

There is now a vacancy in the senatorial representation of the State and, naturally, great interest centers in the coming appointment for election. The Governor may appoint some one to serve for the few months intervening before a successor to Senator Stone can be chosen under the new primary lay at the November election. Gov. Gardner is a Democrat, a supporter of the Wilson administration, and a staunch upholder of the national and allied cause in the war. A man of his choice would, it is reasonable to suppose, reflect his views and sentiments. If the appointee proved satisfoctory to the people, advantage would be with him in the primary contest. While normally a Democratic State, Missouri has a strong Republican vote, and any aspirant or candidate, put forward by Gov. Gardner or the Democratic party, who failed to rise to the expectations of the loyal electorate, would surely be successfully opposed by a Republican candidate, if the Republican were more satisfactory.

In short, the Democratic Governor and the Democratic party of Missouri will have to be very careful in their selection of a man to fill the vacancy, for the loyal voters of the State have had more than enough of misrepresentation in the United States Senate.

Events in the Social World

"When his Ship comes in"

"Hail to the May Bride!" These Are Days of War, and She's a Brave Maid, Not Afraid She'll "Rue the Day," as the Old Saying Goes—Coming Month No Doubt Will See Numerous War Weddings.

APRIL in recent years has usually been a month for brides—as well as showers, to which the past week has attested—and this April has been no exception. Some of the days of April always come in the post-lenten season, which is no doubt partly responsible for its popularity as a time for weddings, as it is an interim between two unlucky periods, according to the old saying of—

"Marry in Lent and you'll live to repent; Marry in May and you'll rue the day," which comes from the early days of Rome, when May was considered the month of old men and June the month of young men.

Heretofore it was a brave maid, indeed, who would face the superstition of being a May bride, but the war has changed customs, traditions and superstitions, and the coming month will no doubt see numerous "war weddings," for furloughs and orders, like time and tide, wait for no one, and the mere matter of a space of 31 days which was held by the ancient Romans as an ill-omened time will not figure when there is a possibility of soldier and salior fiance going overseas to [illegible]. So, away with superstition, and "Hail to the May Bride!"

REVERTING to the April bride, last night there took place one of the most brilliant and notable nuptial events of the season, when Miss Marie Christy Church became the bride of August A. Busch Jr. The ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's mother, Mrs. Alonzo C. Church of 4 Lenox place, with the Rev. Father J. J. O'Connor of the Church of Our Lady of Lourdes officiating. The house was elaborately decorated and the ceremony took place in the sun parlor before an improvised altar arranged in front of three large windows. The bridal robe, one of the handsomest worn by any of the season's brides, was of white satin, with a garniture of rare and priceless lace, which has been in her family for several generations. Her veil fell from a coronet of lace and was caught on the sides with orange blossoms, and was held in the back with a band of pearls. Her bouquet was of white orchids and lilies of the valley and tied with lace streamers. The matron of honor, Mrs. Eugene Williams, and the bridesmaids, Misses Mathilda Overton, Grace Taylor and Julia Tyler, were gowned alike in dainty creations of pale green organdie, with an underskirt of white net and lace, made over a foundation of white satin. There was a wide band of tucks running around the skirt, under which was a darker shade of green satin and festooned over this were garlands of handmade organdie flowers in the pastel shades. Sashes tying in a large bow in the back made of the green organdie over the darker shade of satin completed the costumes. They carried bouquets of white lilacs and purple iris.

The bride's two young sisters, Louise and Eleanor Church, were the flower girls and wore white frocks with pink ribbons and carried garlands of pink roses.

Mr. Busch had his brother, Adolphus Busch III, as his best man and Drummond Jones, Adolph Magnus, his cousin from Chicago, and Arnold Stifel as groomsmen. Percy Orthwein and Richard Upshaw held the ribbons through which the bridal party passed.

A large reception followed the ceremony, after which Mr. Busch and his bride departed for a trip, and upon their return will be at home at 5577 Lindell boulevard.

The bride is the eldest daughter of the late Alonzo Church and Mrs. Church and was educated at the Sacred Heart Convent and then attended Miss Wright's School at Bryn Mawr, Pa., followed by a summer spent in European travel. She is related to many old and prominent families of St. Louis, both on her mother's and father's side, and since her debut in 1916 as a special maid of honor at the Veiled Prophet's ball, has been one of the reigning belles in the exclusive set.

Mr. Busch is the son of Mr. and Mrs. August Busch and a grandson of the late Adolphus Busch. He was educated at Smith Academy and has traveled extensively.

ANOTHER wedding of yesterday was that of Miss Mary Johann and Ridgely William Meyer, which was solemnized at the Pilgrim Congregatinal Church at 5:30 o'clock, with the Rev. Dr. Samuel Woodrow officiating. The couple dispensed with attendants. The bride wore a gown of white satin and Georgette crepe. Her tulle veil was arranged in a cap effect to her head and was held by a wreath of orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of white sweet peas and narcissus.

Mrs. Meyer is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Johann of 5157 Kensington avenue. She has been much entertained with pre-nuptial affairs and is a popular member of her set. Mr. Meyer is the son of Mr. and Mrs. G. Theodore Meyer and a brother of Miss Dimple Meyer, whose engagement to Henry Bigelow has been announced. Aother sister, Miss Bobby Meyer, became the bride of Murdo MacKenzie last fall and at present lives in Brazil.

THURSDAY was a day for brides, with three weddings of importance taking place. In the morning, at 9:30 o'clock, Miss Dorothy Ferneding's marriage to J. E. Charles Lohn was celebrated at the residence of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Emil C. Clauss, of 3670 Flora boulevard, with the Rev. Father J. J. O'Brien officiating. Miss Emilie Ferneding was her sister's only attendant and Dr. Earl Sage acted as best man. A bridal breakfast followed the ceremony for the members of the family, after which Mr. Lohn and his bride departed for a wedding journey, and upon their return will be at home at 5511 Berlin avenue. Mrs. Lohn made her debut two years ago and has been one of the most popular girls on the South Side. She was graduated from the Sacred Heart Convent at Maryville in 1916. Mr. Lohn is from Essex, England, but has resided in St. Louis for the last two years at the Buckingham Hotel.

THE THYRSUS Dramatic Club of Washington University, which is noted for its artistic and enjoyable productions, will present Hubert Henry Davies' play entitled "A Single Man" on the evening of May 8 at the Victoria Theater under the direction of Joseph Solari. The cast includes the best talent from the University and rehearsals have been held daily for two months. The proceeds of the evening are to be given to the American Red Cross, and for this reason as well as for the excellency of the former productions of Thyrsus, a large audience will be attracted. The patronesses for the affair are Mmes. George F. Rubelmann, J. J. Searcy, George Hess, J. L. Lowes, F. A. Hall, Lambert Walther and W. Grafeman.

MUCH interest is being manifested in the luncheon and musical to be given tomorrow at the Statler Hotel by the University Musical Research Club for the benefit of the Comforts Committee of the Navy League. The large number of reservations so far give promise of its success and among those who have made reservations are Mrs. Edward Konetchy, who will have 25 guests; Mrs. W. S. Servan, Mrs. P. F. Miss Evelyn Ringen, daughter of Mrs. J. P. Materne of 3009 Geyer avenue, has returned from spending the winter in Pasadena, Cal., with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. John Ringen. She also visited her cousin, Miss Valerie Timken, at the same place.

THE bridge party to be given for the American Fund for French Wounded is one of the social patriotic affairs engaging the attention of society just now. It was originally planned to give it at the headquarters, 3621 Washington boulevard, but it was deemed advisable to make a change, and it is now scheduled to be held at Mahler's Dancing Academy, 4911 Washington boulevard, next Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock. Mrs. Alexander De Menil is the chairman of the card party, with Mrs. J. M. Franciscus chairman of the prizes, and she reports that generous amounts of fine country products have been promised by people who have country places near the city and that many other handsome and useful prizes have been donated. Some of those who are working for the success of the party are Mmes. Newton R. Wilson, Julia Maffitt Walsh, Charles Bates, Frank Crunden, Seth Cobb, Jules Valle, R. B. Wallace, Walter Campbell, Harold Carlisle, R. W. Shapleigh, T. H. McKittrick, Harry Block, David G. Evans, N. B. Carson, Virgil Rule, Arthur Heimenz, Manley Breaker, Leo de Smet Carton, Erwin and Misses Lou Hopkins, Eugenie Berthold, Emelie Maffitt. Mme. Sarah Bernhardt, during her stay here, had planned to visit the headquarters on Wednesday, as this is one of the branches of war relief work in which she is especially interested, but owing to the inclemency of the weather was prevented from doing so. However, the members of the society presented Madame with a huge bunch of white camellias, with a French flag inserted, and their greetings to her, which deeply touched the noted French woman. This American Fund for French Wounded is doing a vast amount of good work. It is recognized and approved by the French Government and co-operates with the American Red Cross.

home of Mrs. Mary Benbow. Chaplain Reader of Camp Doniphan officiated, using the double ring ceremony. The bride wore a dress of white tulle and carried a boquet of bride's roses. The wedding is the culmination of a romance which began several years ago when they had leading parts in a motion picture play. Corporal Graffmann is a member of Company K, 138th Infantry, and the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Graffmann of 3128 Geyer avenue. The bride returned to St. Louis with her mother, Mrs. A. BE CAREFUL IN USING SOAP ON YOUR HAIR

Most soaps and prepared shampoos contain too much alkali, which is very injurious, as it dries the scalp and makes the hair brittle.

The best thing to use is just plain mulsified cocoanut oil, for it is pure and entirely greaseless. It's very cheap, and beats the most expensive soaps or anything else all to pieces. You can get this at any drug store, and a few ounces will last the whole family for months.

Simply moisten the hair with water and rub it in, about a teaspoonful is all that is required. It makes an abundance of rich, creamy lather, cleanses thoroughly, and rinses out easily. The hair dries quickly and evenly, and is soft, fresh looking, bright, fluffy, wavy and easy to handle. Besides, it loosens and takes out every particle of dust, dirt and dandruff.—ADV.

PRINCE LICHNOWSKY PROVES THE KAISER GUILTY OF THE WAR

the improvement of conditions, apart from the fact that it would have been impolitic and impolite to refuse invitations.

"In other circles I had a most amiable reception and enjoyed the cordial good will of the Court, society and the Government.

King Very Amiable.

"The King, very amiable and well meaning and possessed of sound understanding and common sense, was invariably well disposed towards me, and desired honestly to facilitate my mission. In spite of the small amount of power which the British Constitution gives the Crown, the King can, by virtue of his position, greatly influence the tone both of society and the Government. The Crown is the apex of society, from which the tone emanates. Society, which is overwhelmingly Unionist, is largely occupied by ladies connected with politics. It is represented in the Lords and the Commons, consequently also in the Cabinet.

"The Englishman either belongs to society or ought to belong to it. His aim is, and always will be, to be a distinguished man and gentleman, and even men of modest origin, such as Mr. Asquith, prefer to be in society with its elegant women. British gentlemen of both parties enjoy the same education, go to the same colleges and university, and engaged in the same sports—golf, cricket, lawn tennis and polo. All have played cricket and football in their youth, all have the same habits and all spend the week-end in the country.

Not Close Socially.

"No social cleavage divides the parties, only political cleavage. To some extent of late years the politicians in the two camps have avoided one another in society. Not even on the ground of a neutral mission could the two camps be amalgamated, for since the home rule and veto bills the Unionists have despised the Radicals. A few months after my arrival the King and Queen dined with me, and Lord Londonderry left the house after dinner in order not to be together with Sir Edward Grey. But there is no opposition from difference in caste and education, as in France. There are not two worlds, but the same world, and their opinion of a foreigner is common and not without influence on his political standing, whether a Lansdowne or an Asquith is at the helm.

"The difference of caste no longer exists in England since the time of the Stuarts and since the Whig oligarchy, in contradistinction to the Tory county families, allowed the bourgeoisie in the towns to rise in society. There is greater difference in political opinions and constitutional and church questions than on financial politics. Aristocrats who have joined the popular party, Radicals such as Grey, Churchill, Harcourt and Crewe are most hated by the Unionist aristocracy.

Received With Open Arms.

"None of these gentlemen have I ever met in great aristocratic houses, only in the houses of party friends. We were received in London with open arms, and both parties outdid one another in amiability. It would be a mistake to undervalue social connections in view of the close connection in England between society and politics, even though the majority of the upper 10,000 are in opposition to the Government.

"Between an Asquith and a Devonshire there is no such deep cleft as between a Briand and a Duc de Doudeauville, for example. In times of political tension they do not foregather. They belong to two separate social groups, but are part of the same society, if on different levels, the center of which is in court. They have friends and habits in common; they are often related or connected. A phenomenom like Lloyd George, a man of the people, a small solicitor, and a self-made man, is an exception. Even John Burns, a Socialist Labor leader and a self-taught man, seeks society relations.

"On the ground of a general striving to be considered gentlemen of social weight and position, such men must not be undervalued. In no place, consequently, is an envoy's social circle of greater consequence than in England. A hospitable house with friendly guests is worth more than the profoundest scientific knowledge, and a learned man of insignificant appearance and too small means would, in spit of all his learning, acquire no influence. The Briton hates a bore and a pedant. He loves a good fellow.

Sir Edward Grey.

"Sir Edward Grey's influence in all questions of foreign policy was unlimited. True, he used to say on important occasions, 'I must lay that before the Cabinet,' but it is equally true that the latter invariably took his view. Although he did not know foreign countries, and with the exception of one short visit to Paris had never left England, he was closely informed on all important questions, owing to many years' parliamentary experience and natural grasp. He understood French without speaking it. Elected at an early age to Parliament, he began immediately to occupy himself with foreign affairs. Parliamentary Under Secretary of State in the Foreign Office under Lord Rosebery, he became in 1904 Secretary of State under Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, and filled the post for 10 years. Originating from an old North of England family of land owners, from whom the statesman, Earl Grey, is also descended, he joined the left wing of his party and sympathized with the Socialists and pacifists.

"He can be called a Socialist in the ideal sense, for he applied his theories even in private life, which is characterized by great simplicity and unpretentiousness, although he is possessed of considerable means. All display is foreign to him. He had a small dwelling in London, and never gave dinners, except officially at the Foreign Office on the King's birthday.

"If exceptionally he asked a few guests to his house, it was to a simple dinner or lunch in a small circle, with parlor maids for service. The week-ends he spent regularly in the country, like his colleagues, but not at large country house parties. He lives mostly in his cottage in the New Forest, taking long walks, and is passionately fond of nature and ornithology. Or he journeyed to his property in the north and tamed squirrels. In his youth he was a noted cricket and tennis player. His chief sport is now salmon and trout fishing in the Scotch lakes with Lord Glenconner, Mr. Asquith's brother-in-law. Once, when spending his week-ends with Lord Glenconner, he came 30 miles on a bicycle and returned in the same way.

"His simple upright manner insured him the esteem even of his opponents, who were more easily to be found in home than in foreign political circles. Lies and intrigues were foreign to his nature. His wife, whom he loved and from whom he was never separated, died as the result of an accident to the carriage driven by him. As is known, one brother was killed by a lion. Wordsworth was his favorite poet, and he could quote him by the hour. His British calm did not lack a sense of humor. When breakfasting with us and the children and he heard their German conversation, he would say, 'I cannot help admiring the way they talk German,' and laughed at his joke. This is the man who was called Liar Grey' and the 'Originator of the world war.'

Asquith Is Different.

"Asquith is a man of quite different mind. A jovial, sociable fellow, a friend of the ladies, especially young and beautiful ones, he loves cheery surroundings and a good cook, and is supported by a cherry young wife. He was formerly a well-known lawyer with a large income and many years' parliamentary experience. Later he was known as a Minister under Gladstone, a pacifist like his friend Grey, and friendly to an understanding with Germany. He treated all questions with an experienced business man's calm and certainty, and enjoyed good health and excellent nerves steeled by assidious golf.

"His daughters went to a German pension and speak fluent German. We quickly became good friends with him and his family and were guests at his little house on the Thames. He only occupied himself with foreign affairs rarely. When important questions cropped up, with him lay the ultimate decision. During the critical days of July Asquith often came to warn us, and was finally in despair over the tragic turn of events. On Aug. 2, when I saw Asquith to make a final attempt, he was completely broken, and although quite calm tears ran down his face.

"At the same time the Balkan conference met in London and I had the opportunity of meeting the leading men of the Balkan States. The most important personage among them was M. Venizelos. He was anything but anti-German, and particularly prized the Order of the Red Eagle, which he even wore at the French Embassy. With his winning amiability and savoir fairse he could always win sympathy.

"Next to him a great role was played by Daneff, the then Bulgarian Prime Minister, and Count Berchtold's confidant. He gave the impressfion of being a capable and energetic man, and even the influence of his friends at Vienna and Budapest, at which he sometimes laughed, was attributable to the fact that he had let himself be drawn into the second Balkan war

The Complexion Beautiful and the Secret

A Simple Wonder-Worker, and Any Woman Can Do It. How to Make Superfluous Hairs Dissolve Away as Frost Before the Sun.

BY VALESKA SURATT

In your face, just the same as in that of the most beautiful woman in the world, lie the possibilities of an exquisite complexion. It's simply that the beautiful tints of the skin are hidden as by a veil. Some of the results accomplished in a few days by a method which I adopted long ago read almost like a fairy tale, the magic of it is so astounding. It succeeds even on the most motley, disfigured, ugly skins, making blemishes disappear as a fog lifts before the sun. A skin, spotless as the purest marble, tinted as the rose and as soft, adorable to the eye and the touch—that is the sure result. Mix the formula yourself at home. It takes a few moments to make and is far more economical than any prepared cream you can buy at the stores. Get one ounce of zintone from the drug store and mix it with two tablespoonfuls of glycerine in a pint of water. A cream is quickly formed, and there you have this little wonder ready to apply. You must use it liberally every day.

MISS QUESTION—You will realize what a "hair grower" really is, when you use this. There is no more doubt of its hair growing power than there is doubt of tomorrow's sunlight. This mixture will first of all stop your hair from falling, your hair will begin to grow luxuriantly and you'll see the difference in a few days. This formula makes a pint of the "hair forcer"—much more economical than any you can buy—and besides you get results. It is made in a simple way as follows: Mix or put one ounce of beta-quinol either in half a pint each of water and bay rum or in one pint of witchhazel. There is no oil in this hair formula.

MRS. R. H. J.—It would be expected that your face would become red in spots, trying to pinch out blackheads. Try this and see them disappear in a few minutes: Sprinkle powdered neroxin on a wet sponge and rub this on the blackheads. It's magic. You can get the neroxin at any drug store. Do not steam the face.

PITIFUL—Ordinary wrinkle creams produce little or no results. Many of my stage friends have used this formula with astonishing results in a few days. You can do the same. Get two ounces of eptol at the drug store and mix with one tablespoonful of glycerine and a half pint of water. You will notice how fast the crow's feet and "mouth" wrinkles will disappear. You will look many years younger by use of this formula.

MISS D. E. S.—Because most face powders are objectionably chalky, is the reason why I have my own face powder made after my own formula. It is almost invisible, giving a natural bloom to the skin you never experienced before. It is now sold in drug stores as "Valeska Suratt Face Powder," in white, flesh and brunette tints, at 50c a box.

TREE-TOP—Scales and fatty accumulations on the scalp are not easily removed with soap, even with scrubbing. The way to do it is to dissolve away these accumulations. Eggol does this almost in a magic way and leaves the scalp and hair in a most glorious condition of absolute cleanliness. As a head-wash it cannot be excelled. Use a teaspoonful of it in half a cup of water. You can get enough for 25c to last for over a dozen shampoos.

MRS. GIVENS—It would be preferable to go around with the hairs on the forearms than to get them off the way you mention; that is, with those "burning" pastes. They irritate, redden and spot up the skin, often for weeks afterward. By moistening the superfluous hairs with sulfo solution obtainable for $1.00 at any drug store, they just dissolve away like snow in the sun. There's no spot or mark left even on the most delicate skin.

LOOKING—There is one reliable and safe way to try for bust development. This is to dissolve two ounces of ruetone and half a cup of sugar in half a pint of water, and of this mixture take two teaspoonfuls after meals and at bedtime. Nobody can promise you success absolutely, but I suggest that you use the above as the best method known.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Concessions His Object.

"M. Take Jonescu was often in London, too, and visited me regularly. I had known him since the time when I was Secretary at Bucharest. He was also one of Herr von Kiderlen-Wachter's friends. His aim in London was to secure concessions for Rumania by negotiations with M. Daneff. In this he was supported by the most capable Rumanian Minister, M. Misu. That these negotiations were stranded by the Bulgarian opposition is known. Count Berchtold—and naturally we with him—was entirely on the side of Bulgaria; otherwise we should have succeeded by pressure on M. Daneff in obtaining the desired satsifaction for the Rumanians and have bound Rumania to us, as she was by Austria's attitude in the second Balkan war, while afterward she was estranged from the Central Powers.

Shadow of 1912 War.

"Bulgaria's defeat in the second Balkan war and Serbia's victory, as well as the Rumanian advance, naturally constituted a reproach to Austria. The idea of equalizing this by military intervention in Serbia seems to have gained ground rapidly in Vienna. This is proved by the Italian disclosure, and it may be presumed that the Marquis di San Giuliano, who described the plan as a 'pericolossissima aventura' (an extremely risky adventure, saved us from a European war as far back as the summer of 1912. Intimate as Russo-Italian relations were, the aspiration of Vienna must have been known in St. Petersburg. In any event, M. Take Jonescu told me that M. Sazonoff had said in Constanza that an attack on Serbia on the part of Austria meant war with Russia.

"In the spring of 1914 one of my secretaries on returning from leave in Vienna said that Herr von Tschirschky (German Ambassador in Vienna) had declared that war must soon come. But as I was always kept in the dark regarding important things, I considered his pessimism unfounded.

Opportunity Awaited.

"Ever since the Peace of Bucharest it seems to have been the opinion in Vienna that the revision of this treaty should be undertaken independently, and only a favorable opportunity was awaited. The statesmen in Vienna and Bucharest could naturally count upon our support. This they knew, for already they had been reproached several times for their slackness. Berlin even insisted on the 'rehabilitation' of Austria.

"When I returned to London in December, 1913, after a long holiday, the Liman von Sanders question had led to our relations with Prussia becoming acute. Sir Edward Grey called my attention with some uneasiness to the consequent unrest in St. Petersburg, saying: 'I have never seen them so excited.' Berlin instructed me to beg the Minister to urge calm in St. Petersburg and help to solve the difficulty. Sir Edward was quite willing and his intervention contributed not inconsiderably to smoothing matters over. My good relations with Sir Edward and his great influence in St. Petersburg served in a like manner on several occasions when it was a question of carrying through something of which our representative there was completely incapable.

"Refuse Me in Vienna."

"During the critical days of July, 1914, Sir Edward said to me: 'If ever you want something done in St. Petersburg you come to me regularly, but if ever I appeal for your influence in Vienna you refuse your support.' The good and dependable relations I was fortunate in making not only in society and among influential people such as Sir Edward Grey and Mr. Asquith, but also with others at public dinners, had brought about a noticeable improvement in our relations with England. Sir Edward devoted himself honestly to further this rapprochement, and his intentions were especially noticeable in two questions—the Colonial treaty and the treaty regarding the Bagdad Railway.

"In 1898 Count Hatzfeldt and Mr. Balfour had signed a secret agreement dividing the Portuguese colonies in Africa into economic spheres of interest between us and England. As the Portuguese Government had neither the power nor the means to render accessible, or suitably to control, their extensive tracts, they had already taken into consideration their relinquishment, thereby helping their finances. An agreement had been come to between us and England which defined our respective interests and which was of so much the greater value as Portugal, as is known, was completely dependent on England.

Treaties Did Not Clash.

"In addition, this treaty insured the Portuguese kingdom's inviolability and independence, and only declared the intention of supporting the Portuguese financially and economically. It, therefore, did not clash with the old Anglo-Portuguese treaty dating from the sixteenth century, which had last been renewed under Charles II and which guaranteed each country's possessions. At the instigation of the Marquis de Soveral, who presumably was not ignorant of the Russo-British agreements, a new treaty was nevertheless signed in 1899—the so-called 'Windsor Treaty,' which reinforced the old, but still valid, treaty.

Germany Was for War.

"At the end of June, 1914, I proceeded to Kiel by order of the Kaiser. A few weeks before I had been given the honorary degree of Doctor at Oxford, a distinction conferred upon no German Ambassador since Herr von Bunsen. On board the Meteor (the Kaiser's yacht), we heard of the death of the Archduke, the heir to the Austrian throne. His Majesty expressed regret that his efforts to win the Archduke over to his ideas had thus been rendered vain. Whether the plan of pursuing an active policy against Serbia had already been determined upon at Konopischt I cannot know.

"As I was uninformed about views and events at Vienna, I attached no far-reaching importance to this event. Not until later was I able to establish the fact that among the Austrian aristocrats a feeling of relief outweighted other sentiments. One of His Majesty's other guests on board the Meteor was an Austrian, Count Felix Thun. Although the weather was splendid, he lay all the time in his cabin, suffering from sea sickness. When the news arrived he was well; he had been cured either by the shock or by joy.

Berlin Was Warlike.

"When I arrived in Berlin I saw the Imperial Chancellor, and said to him that I regarded our foreign situation as very satisfactory, since our relations with England were better than they had been for a very long time past. I also remarked that a pacifist Ministry was in power in France.

"Herr von Bethmann Hollweg seemed not to share my optimism.

These City Physicians Explain Why They Prescribe Nuxated Iron
To Make Healthier Women and Stronger, Sturdier Men
NOW BEING USED BY OVER THREE MILLION PEOPLE ANNUALLY

By enriching the blood and creating thousands of new red blood cells, it often quickly transforms the flabby flesh, toneless tissues, and pallid cheeks of weak, anaemic men and women into a glow of health. Increases the strength of delicate, nervous, run-down folks in two weeks' time in many instances.

It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually in this country alone are taking Nuxated Iron. Such astonishing results have been reported from its use both by doctors and laymen, that a number of physicians in various parts of the country have been asked to explain why they prescribe it so extensively, and why it apparently produces so much better results than were obtained from the old forms of inorganic iron.

Extracts from some of the letters received are given below:

Dr. Ferdinand King, a New York Physician and Medical Author says: "There can be no strong iron men without iron. Pallor means anaemia. "Anaemia means iron deficiency. The skin of anaemic men and women is pale; the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone, the brain fags and the memory fails, and they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women the roses go from their cheeks.

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, degerminated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste-pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, is responsible for another grave iron loss.

"Therefore you should supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you would use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. A. J. Newman, late Police Surgeon of the City of Chicago, and former House Surgeon, Jefferson Park Hospital, Chicago, in commenting on Nuxated Iron, says: "It has been my particular duty during the past six years to assist in keeping Chicago's five thousand bluecoats in good health and perfect fighting trim so that they would be physically equipped to withstand all manner of storms and the ravages of nature's elements.

"Recently I was prompted through an endorsement of Nuxated Iron by Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital, New York, to give it a trial. This remedy has proven through my own tests of it to excel any preparation I have ever used for creating red blood, building up the nerves, strengthening the muscles and correcting digestive disorders."

Dr. James Francis Sullivan, formerly physician of Bellevue Hospital (Outdoor Dept.), N. Y., and the Westchester County Hospital, said: "I have strongly emphasized the great necessity of physicians making blood examinations of their weak, anaemic, run-down patients. Thousands of persons go on year after year suffering from physical weakness and a highly nervous condition due to lack of sufficient iron in their red blood corpuscles, without ever realizing the real and true cause of their trouble. Without iron in your blood your food merely passes through the body, somewhat like corn through an old mill with rollers so wide apart that the mill can't grind.

"But in my opinion you can't make strong, healthy, successful, sturdy iron men by feeding them on metallic iron. The old form of metallic iron must go through a semi-digestive process to transform them into organic iron—Nuxated Iron—before they are so ready to be taken up and assimilated by the human system.

"Notwithstanding all that has been said and written on this subject by well-known physicians, thousands of people still insist in dosing themselves with metallic iron simply, I suppose, because it costs a few cents less. I strongly advise readers in all cases to get a physician's prescription for organic iron — Nuxated Iron—or if you don't want to go to this trouble, then purchase only Nuxated Iron in its original packages and see that this particular name (Nuxated Iron) appears on the package. If you have taken preparations such as Nux and Iron and other similar iron products and failed to get results, remember that such products are an entirely different thing from Nuxated Iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital of New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be remiss in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

Dr. T. Alphonsus Wallace, a physician of many years' experience in this country and who has been given many honorary titles in England, says: "I do not make a practice of recommending advertised medicinal products, but I have found Nuxated Iron so potent in nervous, run-down conditions that I believe all should know of it. The men and women of today need more iron in their blood than was the case twenty or thirty years ago. This because of the demineralized diet which now is served daily in thousands of homes and also because of the demand for greater resistance necessary to offset the greater number of health hazards to be met at every turn."

If people would only take Nuxated Iron when they felt weak or run-down, instead of dosing themselves with habit-forming drugs, stimulants and alcoholic beverages, there are probably thousands who might readily build up their red blood corpuscles, increase their physical energy and get themselves into a condition to ward off the millions of disease germs that are almost continually around us. It is surprising how many people suffer from iron deficiency and do not know it.

If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. Numbers of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while have most astonishingly increased their strength and endurance simply by taking iron in the proper form; and this after they had in some cases been going on for months without getting benefit from anything. Many an athlete and prize fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance which comes from having plenty of iron in the blood, while many another has gone down in inglorious defeat simply for lack of iron.

MANUFACTURERS' NOTE: Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians, is not a secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists everywhere. Unlike the older inorganic iron products, it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach. The manufacturers guarantee successful and entirely satisfactory results to every purchaser, or they will refund your money. It is dispensed in this city by Judge & Dolph Co., Wolff-Wilson Drug Co., Keiffer Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co., Pauley's Drug Stores Co., Enderle Drug Co. and by all other druggists.—ADVERTISEMENT.

The Doctor's Advice
by Dr. Lewis Baker

The questions answered below are general in character, the symptoms or diseases are given and the answers will apply in any case of similar nature.

Those wishing further advice, free, may address Dr. Lewis Baker, College Bldg., College-Elwood streets, Dayton, Ohio, enclosing self-addressed stamped envelope for reply. Full name and address must be given but only initials or fictitious names will be used in my answers. The prescriptions can be filled at any well-stocked drug store. Any druggist can order of wholesaler.

Orrie writes: "I have been taking salts to purify my blood and cure my skin of itching and pimples, but don't get much benefit. Please prescribe for this."

Answer: I advise three-grain sulpherb tablets (not sulphur tablets), composed of sulphur, cream of tartar and vegetable extracts that remove constipation and purify the system. Take this treatment for several months for best results.

"Patient" writes: "I want your free advice. I seem to have gone all to pieces. I am irritated and annoyed by dizzy moments, fickle appetite, no strength and life has no pleasures for me any more."

Answer: There are thousands who live too fast and then find themselves in your plight. The nervous vigor has been deranged. A tonic invigorating medicine will afford aid to Nature by supplying more food-energy and give your system a chance to recuperate, when calm nerves should take the place of shattered nerves.

"Laborer" asks: "I am so affected with painful kidneys that I cannot work regularly. My back aches and often have chills and fever, making me real sick for a day."

Answer: A good tonic, soothing and neutralizing medicine for such complaints is balmwort tablets. Try them and continue a few weeks and I am sure you will write me of your recovery.

Daughter asks: "I suffer greatly owing to too much fat. Can you advise me of a good reduction remedy?"

Answer: Any well-stocked pharmacy can supply you with 5-grain arbolone tablets, packed in sealed tubes with full directions for use. These tablets have proven wonderfully effective in reducing abnormal fat.

Mrs. M. asks: "My scalp itches terribly, is feverish and a great amount of oily dandruff is present. What is good for this?"

Answer: First shampoo the hair and then apply plain yellow minyol about once a week as per directions. This relieves the itching, overcomes the dandruff and makes the hair beautifully glossy and vigorous. Obtain in 4-oz. jars of druggists.

NOTE—For many years Dr. Baker has been giving free advice and prescriptions to millions of people through the press columns and doubtless has helped in relieving illness and distress more than any single individual in the world's history. Thousands have written him expressions of gratitude and confidence similar to the following:

Dr. Lewis Baker, Dear Sir—I feel it as a duty to write you. Four years ago my husband had a bad cough and found no relief from all cough medicines we could try. We finally tried the mentho-laxene prescription and made it up as cough medicine, and it quickly cured him. It also gives me great relief from asthma, from which I suffer in winter time, as you know here in Oregon we have it so rainy instead of snow. I send stamps and coupon for your great "Guide Book, Health and Beauty." Thanking you, I am,

Yours truly,

and he complained about Russian armaments. I tried to calm him, and insisted especially that Russia had no interest in attacking us, and that such an attack would, moreover, never obtain the support of England and France, as both countries wanted peace.

"I then went to Dr. Zimmermann (the Under Secretary), who was representing Herr von Jagow (Foreign Secretary), and from him I learned that Russia was about to raise 900,000 fresh troops. His words showed an unmistakable animosty against Russia, who, he said, was everywhere in our way. Difficulties about commercial policy were also involved. Of course I was not told that Gen. von Moltke (chief of the general staff), was pressing for war. I learned, however, that Herr von Tschirschky (German Ambassador at Vienna), had received a rebuke because he reported that he had advised moderation in Vienna toward Serbia.

Underestimated Importance of News.

"I went to Silesia, and on my way back to London I spent only a few hours in Berlin, where I heard that Austria intended to proceed against Serbia, in order to put an end to an intolerable state of affairs.

"Unfortunately I underestimated at the moment the importance of the news. I thought that nothing would come of it, after all, and that, if Russia threatened, the trouble could easily be composed. Now I regret that I did not stay in Berlin and say at once that I would have no share in any such policy.

"Subsequently I learned that at the decisive conversation at Potsdam on July 5 the inquiry addressed to us by Vienna found absolute assent among all the personages in authority; indeed, they added that there would be no harm if a war with Russia were to result. So, at any rate, it is stated in the Austrian protocol which Count Mensdorf, Austrian Ambassador, received in London. Soon afterward Herr von Jagow was in Vienna to discuss everything with Count Berchtold, Austrian Foreign Minister.

"After my arrival I became convinced that in no circumstances need we fear a British attack, but that under all conditions England would protect France. I advanced this opinion in repeated reports with detailed reasoning and insistence, but without gaining credence, although Lord Haldane's refusal of the formula of neutrality and England's attitude during the Morocco crisis were clear indications. In addition, the above-mentioned secret agreements were known to the department.

"I then received instructions that I was to induce the English press to take up a friendly attitude if Austria gave the 'death blow' to the great Serbian movement, and as far as possible I was by my influence to prevent public opinion from opposing Austria. Recollections of the attitude of England during the annexation crisis, when public opinion showed sympathy for the Serbian rights in Bosnia, recollections also of the benevolent promotion of national movements in the time of Lord Byron and Garibaldi—these and other things spoke so strongly against the probability of support being given to the projected punitive expedition against the murderers that I considered it necessary to give an urgent warning against the whole project, which I described as adventurous and dangerous, and I advised that moderation should be recommended to the Austrians, because I did not believe in the localization of the conflict.

Jagow Would "Risk It."

"Herr von Jagow answered me that Russia was not ready; there would doubtless be a certain amount of bluster, but the more would Russia draw back. He said that Austria was already accusing us of want of spirit, and that we should not squeeze her. On the other hand, feeling in Russia was becoming ever more anti-German, and so we must simply risk it.

"This attitude, as I learned later, was based upon reports from Count Pourtales (German Ambassador in Petrograd) to the effect that Russia would not move in any circumstances; these reports caused us to stimulate Count Berchtold to the greatest possible energy. Consequently I hoped for salvation from an English mediation, because I knew Sir Edward Grey's influence in Petrograd could be turned to use in favor of peace. So I used my friendly relations with Sir Edward Grey, and in confidence begged him to advise moderation in Russia if Austria, as it seemed, demanded satisfaction from the Serbs.

English Press Calm.

"At the first attitude of the English press was calm and friendly to the Austrians, because the murder was condemned. But gradually more and more voices were heard to insist that, however necessary the punishment of the crime, an exploitation of the crime for political purposes could not be justified. Austria was strongly urged to show moderation.

"When the ultimatum appeared all the newspapers, with the exception of The Standard, which was always in low water and apparently was paid by the Austrians, were at one in their condemnation. The whole world, except in Berlin and Vienna, understood that it meant war, and indeed world-war. The British fleet, which chanced to be assembled for a review, was not demobilized.

"At first I pressed for as conciliatory an answer as possible on the part of Serbia, since the attitude of the Russian Government left no further doubt of the seriousness of the situation.

"The Serbian reply was in accordance with the British efforts; M. Pashitch had actually accepted everything, except two points, about which he declared his readiness to negotiate. If Russia and England had wanted war, in order to fall upon us, a hint to Belgrade would have been sufficient, and the unheard-of (Austrian) note would have remained unanswered.

Sir Edward Grey's Proposal.

"Sir Edward Grey went through the Serbian reply with me, and pointed to the conciliatory attitude of the Government at Belgrade. We then discussed his mediation proposal, which was to arrange an interpretation of the two points acceptable to both parties. M. Cambon, (French Ambassador in London,) the Marquis Imperali (Italian Ambassador in London) and I should have met under Sir Edward Grey's presidency, and it would have been easy to find an acceptable form for the disputed points, which in the main concerned the participation of Austrian officials in the investigation at Belgrade. Given good-will everything could have been settled in one or two sittings, and the mere acceptance of the British proposal would have relieved the tension and would have further improved our relations to England. I urgently recommended the proposal, saying that otherwise world-war was imminent, in which we had everything to lose and nothing to gain. In vain! I was told that it was against the dignity of Austria, and that we did not want to interfere in the Serbian business, but left it to our ally. I was told to work for 'localization of the conflict.'

"Of course it would only have needed a hint from Berlin to make Count Bechtold satisfy himself with a diplomatic success and put up with the Serbian reply. But this hint was not given. On the contrary, we pressed for war. What a fine success it would have been.

"After our refusal Sir Edward asked us to come forward with a proposal of our own. We insisted upon war. I could get no other answer (from Berlin) than that it was an enormous 'concession' on the part of Austria to contemplate no annexation of territory.

Various Forms of Humiliation.

"Thereupon Sir Edward justly pointed out that even without annexations of territory a country can be humiliated and subjected, and that Russia would regard this as a humiliation which she would not stand.

"The impression became ever stronger that we desired war in all circumstances. Otherwise our attitude in a question which, after all, did not directly concern us was unintelligible. The urgent appeals and definite declarations of M. Sazonoff, (Russian Foreign Minister), later on the positively humble telegrams of the Czar, the repeated proposals of Sir Edward, the warnings of San Giuliano (Italian Foreign Minister), and of Bollati (Italian Ambassador in Berlin), my urgent advice—it was all of no use, for Berlin went on insisting that Serbia must be massacred.

"The more I pressed, the less willing they were to alter their course, if only because I was not to have the success of saving peace in the company of Sir Edward Grey.

"So Grey on July 29 resolved upon his well-known warning. I replied that I had always reported that we should have to reckon upon English hostility if it came to war with France. The Minister said to me repeatedly. 'If war breaks out it will be the greatest catastrophen the world has ever seen'

Grey Still Sought Peace.

"After that events moved rapidly. When Count Berchtold, who hitherto had played the strong man on instructions from Berlin, at last decided to change his course, we answered the Russian mobilization—after Russia had for a whole week negotiated and waited in vain—with our ultimatum and declaration of war.

"Sir Edward Grey still looked for new ways to escape. In the morning of Aug. 1, Sir W. Tyrrell came to me to say that his chief still hoped to find a way out. Should we remain neutral if France did the same? I understood him to mean that we should then be ready to spare France, but his meaning was that we should remain absolutely neutral—neutral therefore even toward Russia. That was the well-known misunderstanding, Sir Edward had given me an appointment for the afternoon, but as he was then at a meeting of the Cabinet, he called me up on the telephone, after Sir W. Tyrrell had hurried straight to him. But in the afternoon he spoke no longer of anything but Belgian neutrality, and of the possibility that we and France should face one another armed, without attacking another.

"Thus there was no proposal whatever, but a question without any obligation, because our conversation, as I have already explained, was to take place soon afterward. In Berlin, however—without waiting for the conversation—this news was used as the foundation for a far-reaching act. Then came Poincare's letter, Bonar Law's letter, and the telegram from the King of the Belgians. The hesitating members of the Cabinet were converted, with the exception of three members, who resigned.

"Up to the last moment I had hoped for a waiting attitude on the part of England. My French colleague also felt himself by no means secure, as I learned from a private source. As late as Aug. 1 the King replied evasively to the French President. But in the telegram from Berlin which announced the threatening danger of war, England was already mentioned as an opponent. In Berlin, therefore, one already reckoned upon war with England.

"Before my departure Sir Edward Grey received me on Aug. 5 at his house. I had gone there at his desire. He was deeply moved. He said to me that he would always be ready to mediate, and, 'we don't want to crush Germany.' Unfortunately, this confidential conversation was published. Thereby Herr von Bethmann Hollweg destroyed the last possibility of reaching peace via England.

"Our departure was thoroughly dignified and calm. Before we left the King had sent his equerry, Sir E. Ponsonby, to me, to express his regret at my departure and that he could not see me personally. Princess Louise wrote to me that the whole family lamented our going. Mrs. Asquith and other friends came to the embassy to say good-by.

"A special train took us to Harwich, where a guard of honor was drawn up for me. I was treated like a departing sovereign. It was wrecked not by the perfidy of the British, but by perfidy of our policy.

"At the railway station in London Count Mendsdorff (Austrian Ambassador) appeared with his staff. He was cheerful, and gave me to understand that perhaps he would remain in London. But to the English he said that it was not Austria, but we, who had wanted the war.

Arrival in Berlin.

"On my arrival in Berlin I saw at once that I was to be made the scapegoat for the catastrophe of which our Government had made itself guilty in opposition to my advice and my warning.

"The report was persistently circulated by official quarters that I had let myself be deceived by Sir Edward Grey, because if he had not wanted war Russia would not have mobilized. Count Pourtales, whose reports could be relied upon, was to be spared, if only because of his family connections. He was said to have behaved 'splendidly, and he was enthusiastically praised, while I was all the more sharply blamed.

"'What has Russia got to do with Serbia?' this statesman said to me after eight years of official activity in Petersburg. It was made out that the whole business was a perfidious British trick which I had not understood. In the Foreign Office I was told that in 1916 it would in any case have come to war. But then Russia would have been 'ready," and so it was better now.

Question of Guilt.

"As appears from all official publications, without the facts being controverted by our own White Book, which, owing to its poverty and gaps, constitutes a grave self-accusation:

"1. We encouraged Count Berchtold to attack Serbia, although no German interest was involved, and the danger of a world war must have been known to us—whether we knew the text of the ultimatum is a question of complete indifference.

"2. The days between July 23 and July 30, 1914, when M. Sazonoff emphatically declared that Russia could not tolerate an attack upon Serbia, we rejected the British proposals of mediation, although Serbia, under Russian and British pressure, had accepted almost the whole ultimatum, and although an agreement about the two points in question could easily have been reached, and Count Berchtold was even ready to satisfy himself with the Serbian reply.

"3. On July 30, when Count Berchtold wanted to give way, we, without Austria having been attacked, replied to Russia's mere mobilization by sending an ultimatum to Petersburg, and on July 31 we declared war on the Russians, although the Czar had

A Feed That Cures Laziness

Did you ever go out at night and stuff your belly full of indigestible food? You went to work next morning feeling rotten. You seemed lazy because you felt bad.

Is a horse any better than you are? You cannot cram him full of indigestible feed and expect him to do a good day's work. Don't blame the horse if he seems lazy. It's your fault.

For the sake of the horse and your pocket-book you should feed a sweet, crushed-grain ration. Then he will convert into productive energy every particle of nutriment the feed contains.

As long as you feed whole grain you will continue to lose nearly one-third of it. Examine the excrement and you will realize that the undigested whole grain is keeping the birds fat—at your expense.

The members of this association are united in a campaign for economical feeding. They are making sweet, crushed-grain feeds of the proven value. All use the cooperative emblem—The Pilot Wheel.

Pilot Wheel feeds are all sweet, crushed-grain feeds, scientifically balanced to produce the greatest amount of work-energy, and keep your teams in a healthy condition. They cure laziness.

Usually 4 tons of Pilot Wheel feed will go as far as 5 tons of whole grain or 6 tons of mixed feed of low digestibility. The Pilot Wheel will steer you straight on the feeding question.

Compare Troco With the Best Butter You Can Buy at Any Price

THIS appetizing new product is offered as butter's successor to those who heretofore have used nothing but butter.

It is made by an exclusive process—a process which gives the delicate flavor of gilt-edged creamery butter. The more critical you are, the better you will like Troco.

The makers of Troco specialize on this one product. They have perfected the method which produces the quality which makes Troco not a butter substitute but actually butter's successor.

An Attractive Combination

Troco is churned from the fat extracted from the white meat of coconuts — the same dainty tropic delicacy you use shredded on cake — combined with pasteurized milk.

It is as nutritious as butter and even more digestible. Like butter it is energy food of the highest value.

You will use Troco in place of butter solely for quality — because you rarely find butter so pure and sweet. Your dealer will supply you with a capsule of the vegetable coloring used by butter makers.

But remember, Troco contains no animal oils, and no preservatives. And that it is made by a company which makes no animal oil products—only pure, sweet, appetizing Troco.

Remember to Specify TROCO

Ask for Troco by name if you want to enjoy the butter flavor and butter quality which other nut butters lack. Your dealer has it or can order it for you. A 'phone order will bring prompt delivery anywhere.

"Pilate--took water and washed his hands--"

—the Christ was led away to his crucifixion; and for twenty centuries the name of Pontius Pilate has been a byword of cowardice and infamy.

The man with money who washes his hands of responsibility in this war—who willingly permits Liberty's crucifixion upon the Iron Cross of Prussia—who refuses to lend his dollars to the cause for which others are giving their lives—that man is in Pilate's class; he's so base, so mean of soul, so utterly despicable, that his name should be stricken from the roll of citizenship.

There are not many men of that stripe in this city; but there are some, and their names are sure to become known before this war is over. Once known as traitorous slackers, their lot will be very unenviable in this town of loyal citizens.

Today's Beauty Talk

You can enjoy a delightful shampoo with very little effort and for a very trifling cost, if you get from your druggist's a package of Canthrox and dissolve a teaspoonful in a cup of hot water. This makes a full cup of shampoo liquid—enough so it is easy to apply it to all the hair instead of just the top of the head. Your shampoo is now ready. Just pour a little at a time on the scalp and hair until both are entirely covered by the daintily perfumed preparation that thoroughly dissolves and removes every bit of dandruff, excess oil and dirt. After rinsing, the hair dries quickly with a fluffiness that makes it seem heavier than it is, and takes on a rich luster and a softness that makes arranging it a pleasure.—ADV.

PRINCE LICHNOWSKY PROVES THE KAISER GUILTY OF THE WAR

pledged his word that as long as negotiations continued not a man should march—so that we deliberately destroyed the possibility of a peaceful settlement.

"In view of these indisputable facts, it is not surprising that the whole civilized world outside Germany attributes to us the sole guilt for the world war.

Why World Is Against Germany.

"It is not intelligible that our enemies declare that they will not rest until a system is destroyed which constitutes a permanent threatening of our neighbors? Must they not otherwise fear that in a few years they will again have to take up arms, and again see their provinces overrun and their towns and villages destroyed? Were these people not right who prophesied that the spirit of Treitschke and Bernhardi dominated the German people—the spirit which glorifies war as an aim in itself and does not abhor it as an evil; that among us it is still the feudal knights and Junkers and the caste of warriors who rule and who fix our ideals and our values—not the civilian gentleman; that the love of duelling, which inspires our youth as the universities, lives on in those who guide the fortunes of the people? Had not the events at Zabern and the Parliamentary debates on that case shown freedoms are valued among us, when questions of military power are on the other side?

"Cramb, a historian who has since died, an admirer of Germany, put the German point of view into the words of Euphorion:

> Traumt Ihr den Friedenstag?
> Traume, wer traumen mag!
> Krieg ist das Losungswort!
> Sieg, und so klingt es fort.

"Militarism, really a school for the nation and an instrument of military power, if the patriarchial absolutism of a soldier-kingdom renders possible an attitude which would not be permitted by a democracy which had disengaged itself from military-Junker influences.

"That is what our enemies think, and that is what they are bound to think, when they see that, in spite of capitalistic industrialization, and in spite of Socialistic organization, the living, as Friedrich Nietzsche says, are still governed by the dead. The principal war aim of our enemies, the democratization of Germany, will be achieved.

The German Future.

"Today, after two years of the war, there can be no further doubt that we cannot hope for an unconditional victory over Russians, English, French, Italians, Rumanians and Americans, and that we cannot reckon upon the overthrow of our enemies. But we can reach a compromised peace only upon the basis of the evacuation of the occupied territories, the possession of which in any case signifies for us a burden and weakness and the peril of new wars. Consequently everything should be avoided which hinders a change of course on the part of those enemy groups which might perhaps still be won over to the idea of compromise—the British Radicals and the Russian Reactionaries. Even from this point of view, our Polish project is just as objectionable as any interference with Belgian rights, or the execution of British citizens—to say nothing of the mad submarine war scheme.

"Our future lies upon the water. True, but it therefore does not lie in Poland and Belgium, in France and Serbia. That is a reversion to the Holy Roman Empire, to the aberrations of the Hohenstaufens and Hapsburgs. It is the policy of the Plantagenets, not the policy of Drake and Raleigh, Nelson and Rhodes.

"Triple Alliance policy is a relapse into the past, a revolt from the future, from imperialism, from world policy. Central Europe is medievalism; Berlin-Bagdad is a cul de sac, and not a road into the open, to unlimited possibilities, and to the world mission of the German people.

"I am no enemy of Austria, or Hungary, or Italy, or Serbia, or any other state; I am only an enemy of the Triple Alliance policy, which was bound to divert us from our aims, and to bring us on to the sloping plane of Continental policy. It was not German policy, but Austrian dynastic policy. The Austrians had accustomed themselves to regard the alliance as a shield, under whose protection they could make excursions at pleasure into the East.

"And what result have we to expect from the struggle of peoples? The United States of Africa, like the United States of America, of Australia and of Oceania; and the Latin states of Europe, as I said years ago, will fall into the same relationship to the United Kingdom as the Latin sisters of America to the United States. They will be dominated by the Anglo-Saxon; France, exhausted by the war, will link herself still more closely to Great Britain. In the long run, Spain also will not resist.

"In Asia, the Russian and Japanese will expand their borders and their customs, and the south will remain to the British.

"The world will belong to the Anglo-Saxon, the Russian and the Japanese, and the German will remain alone with Austria and Hungary. His sphere of power will be that of thought and trade, not that of the bureaucrats and the soldiers. The German appeared too late, and the world war has destroyed the last possibility of catching up the lost ground, of founding a colonial empire.

"For we shall not supplant the sons of Jaheth; the program of the great Rhodes, who saw the salvation of mankind in British expansion and British imperialism, will be realized.

> "Tu regere imperio populos Romano, memento.
> Hae tibi erunt artes; pacisque imponere morem,
> Parcere subjictis et debellare superbos."

College Girls Pull Dandelions.

Twenty-five thousand fewer dandelions are blooming on Lindenwood College campus than were seen there before the student body held its amusing "Dandelion Day" program on Monday. The "hunt" was deferred from the preceding week, because of rains. Two hundred students, at a signal, set to work with knives on the encroaching plants, and the occasion was termed an engagement with "the enemy." Miss Mary Dunwoodie, of Joplin, Mo., gained first place by bringing in 987 dandelions. The award was a Lindenwood pennant in the college colors, yellow and white. Miss Lulu Renc, who gathered 905, had first place. A bonfire and marsh-mallow roast, completed the program.

SOUTHAMPTON WANTS WALKS

Representatives of the Southampton Improvement Association appeared before the Board of Public Service Friday to protest against the delay in laying cement sidewalks on King's highway and King's highway Southeast, in Southampton. The ordinance directing the construction of the sidewalks was passed in July, 1916, but subsequently was amended to provide for only a single pavement on the west side of the street. This has not been laid.

Brick manufacturers, against whom the cost of the improvement would be assessed, agreed to build a temporary wooden or cinder walk for use during the war, but this was declared unsatisfactory by the representatives of the improvement association.

GLASS HOT WATER BEFORE BREAKFAST A SPLENDID HABIT

Open sluices of system each morning and wash away the poisonous, stagnant matter.

Those of us who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when we arise; splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, lame back, can, instead, both look and feel as fresh as a daisy always by washing the poisons and toxins from the body with phosphated hot water each morning.

We should drink before breakfast a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to flush from the stomach, liver, kidneys and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary tract before putting more food into the stomach.

The action of limestone phosphate and hot water on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity, and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast, and it is said to be but a little while until the roses begin to appear in the cheeks. A quarter pound of limestone phosphate will cost very little at the drug store, but is sufficient to make anyone who is bothered with biliousness, constipation, stomach trouble or rheumatism a real enthusiast on the subject of internal sanitation. Try it and you are assured that you will look better and feel better in every way shortly.—ADV.

JUSTINE JOHNSTONE IN "OVER THE TOP" REVUE

Noted Stage Beauty First Time Here as Star Tonight.

The new Shubert revue, "Over the Top," which comes to the Jefferson Theater for the week beginning tonight, presents for the first time here in a stellar role Miss Justice Johnstone, who a few years ago won a prize of $5000 offered for "the most beautiful girl in America."

Her role in the play may be a bit autobiographical. The heroine is a little New Jersey girl—Miss Johnstone hails from Hoboken—who wishes that some kind fairy would make her a present of New York City. She falls asleep and dreams that her wish comes true. Among other scenes she visits the land of frocks and frills, posterland, a sculptor's studio, an aviation camp, the theater and finally "Justine Johnstone's Little Club," a celebrated rendezvous for playgoers over which Miss Johnstone presides, beneath the Shubert Forty-fourth Street Theater in New York.

"Over the Top," one of this season's productions, ran in New York and then in Chicago. The book and lyrics are by Philip Bartholomae and Harold Atterbridge; the music is by Sigmund Romberg. Ed Wynn is the principal comedian of the revue; Craig Campbell, a Scotch tenor, is the romantic figure; Laurie and Bronson appear as East Side gamins; other entertainers are Fred and Adele Astaire, Ted Lorraine, Vivian and Dagmar Oakland, Belle and Mary Eaton, Rolana and a troupe of classic dancers, Betty Pierce and Harry Llewelyn. A chorus of 60 girls is promised.

Jane Cowl—she of the irrepressible lachrymal ducts—will come to the Jefferson next Sunday night in the war play, "Lilac Time," which she wrote in collaboration with Mrs. Jane Murfin. This play ran most of last season in New York, and has just completed five months in Chicago.

A Scintillating Cast.

The cinema version of former Ambassador Gerard's "My Four Years in Germany" begins its third week at the American Theater today. At this play house, on May 27, J. Hartley Manners' tragi-comedy, "Out There," will be presented for the benefit of the Red Cross, with a glittering constellation of stars. The cast assembled includes George Arliss, George M. Cohan, H. B. Warner, James K. Hackett, James T. Powers, George MacFarlane, Laurette Taylor, Grace Geeorge Viola Allen, Arnold Daly, Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske and Burr McIntosh.

Stella Mayhew, a popular comedienne, will be the headliner at the Orpheum this week, with songs new and old. A tabloid musical comedy, "Home Again," will be given by the Marx brothers and their company. Jimmie and Mrs. Barry will appear in an amusing skit, "The Burglar." The Ralph Dunbar quartet of singers and banjo-pickers will give songs of the South.

The Columbia bill leads off with "The Fixer," a comedy sketch, played by Walter D. Nealand and a company. The headliner at the Grand is Ellie Nowlan in a circus skit, "The Merry Monarchs of the Sawdust Theater." Sam Howe and a company will be at the Gayety, an d"The Auto Girls" will hold forth at the Standard.

Loftis Bros. & Co. will give you credit on diamonds, 2d floor, 308 N. 6th.—Adv.

MARY PICKFORD HANDKERCHIEF A RUMMAGE SALE FEATURE

Many Ornamental and Useful Articles to Be Offered by Junior League This Week.

Among the articles for sale at the Junior League Rummage Sale, which will open at Tenth street and Franklin avenue, May 1, and continue four days, is a linen handkerchief given by Mary Pickford during her Liberty Bond campaign in St. Louis. Her name is embroidered in the corner.

A. A. Selkirk and four other men are taking stock and appraising the articles. They are giving their services to the Junior League girls in their effort to obtain a sufficient sum to enlarge their vocational school for the training of convalescents and handicapped soldiers upon their return from the front

The Junior League has 136 members, the chief requirement of whom is that they shall give service, and they will be on duty as saleswomen during the sale. The girls are bidding to enter into competition in dressing windows with the St. Louis Display Men's Association. They have displayed their articles in a manner that has excited the envy of the professionals. The large store that was formerly occupied by the Niedringhaus Furniture Co. is a "wonder shop" containing many useful and ornamental articles.

The officers are: Miss Frances Reid Jones, president; Miss Grace Taylor, secretary; Mrs. Sears Lehman, treasurer; Mrs. Charles Bascom, chairman of the Publicity Committee.

Armies on West About Equal in Numbers, but Allies Husband Theirs, Says Simonds

Franco-British Forces Are Outnumbered at Points Where Germans Have Chosen to Concentrate Attacks, Solely Because Foch Holds His Forces in Reserve to Strike When Teutons Reach Time When They Can No Longer Fill Wastage.

By FRANK H. SIMONDS,
Author of "The Great War," "They Shall Not Pass."

SINCE the opening of the German attack in the west, no question has been so frequently discussed as that of man power. It has been recognized promptly that the real decision of the present conflict will be based upon the reserves of the contestants, unless there be some supreme disaster on one side or the other, which eliminates enormous numbers, and, in fact, amounts to the crushing of the military power of Britain, the target of German effort.

> FOCH cannot risk a counter stroke until German reserves have been diminished below the danger point, and there is no present sign that this point has been passed. On the contrary, the losses of both sides have been terrific, and the German loss, while certainly the greater, has not been sufficiently greater to change the balance much, as between the two forces. He still has the initiative, and will probably strike again.—FRANK H. SIMONDS.

On the subject of man power we have fairly definite statistics with respect to the German. We know, thanks to the publicity given his organizations by allied staffs, how many divisions he has in the west, how many he has had there and what divisions he has in the east. We know, also, at what rate he has in past months been moving troops from east to west. In the present article I mean to discuss that German power first, and then, relying on such fragmentary figures as the German has supplied or allied public statements have furnished, to deal with allied man power.

At the outset there are certain details that, perhaps, should be explained. The battle strength of a nation is the number of troops which it has organized. For example, it is altogether misleading when one reads that France or Britain has mobilized 6,000,000 or 7,000,000 of men during the war, it is equally misleading to read of the fact that Britain has now something over 4,500,000 under arms, if such reading suggests that this number is available for battle at a given moment.

Only Men in Field Count.

Actually the nations now engaged in a new world struggle can count only upon the number of men embodied in their armies in regularly organized units and the division is recognized as the unit of measurement. No army can put more men in the field than it has regularly organized into divisions, except in certain minor exceptions.

Thus, when one reads in the French official statements that on last December the German army consisted of 239 divisions, one has a measure of the offensive and defensive power of the German army. German divisions contained 14,000 men in the opening campaigns of the war; it was reduced to 10,000 in the later period, and it has recently been increased to 12,000. But if you multiply 329 by 12 you will have the strength of the organized German army of last December, aside from certain artillery formations. This figure, 2,868,000, represents the organized strength of the German army, and with the addition of artilley it might reach 3,000,000.

Since that date the Germans may have organized a few more divisions. This is possible, but doubtful, given the shortage of officers. The French, for example, stopped very early in the war in this expansion of units and one of the criticisms of the British now heard frequently is that they stopped too early and have too few divisions in proportion to their available man power.

Counting the Reserves.

Now of the question of reserves. Behind the 3,000,000 Germans organized in 239 divisions there stood a month ago a larger number of men held in depots and training camps to replace wastage. They may have amounted to 1,000,000, conceivably 1,500,000. Their mission is obvious. They were to be drawn upon to fill the gaps in the ranks as various battles reduced the strength of divisions. This would be a small reserve, relatively speaking, for it would hardly meet the costs of one campaign. Few allied observers, however, place the German reserves at the beginning of the year at above a million, and a million and a half is an outside estimate.

We can get some measure from French statistics recently published. The French have mobilized 6,500,000 apart from colonial troops. This is one in six of the French population. Of these, 1,300,000 have been killed and 1,300,000 captured or permanently crippled. This means, again, that 40 per cent of the French mobilized force has been removed from the firing line by death, disability or capture. No,w if the German has mobilized the same proportion—and he has—he has mobilized 11,000,000 men and his permanent wastage is 4,400,000. It should be rather more than less, because last year the French had relatively light casualties, the British doing the more costly work, and the same thing is true in the present campaign.

Thus, the German has lost 4,500,000 and has 3,000,000 in line, his reserve is that portion of his remaining man power, 3,500,000, which can be spared from necessary war work, and is fit for the front, and this cannot be above 1,500,000, about enough to see him through the present campaign, if it proves as bloody as that of 1916 or even 1917.

The German has some 250 organized divisions. He must keep some of them in Russia, but he now has 190 divisions in the west. At least 60 of these divisions must be kept at all times on other sectors of the front than the operative area to hold the rest of the line. This leaves the German a striking force of 130 divisions and not less than 127 have been reported in action so far. He has then used his present striking force, except so far as he can send divisions which he has used to quiet sectors and fill their places in the battle line by divisions drawn from these quiet sectors, but he cannot do this indefinitely, while his enemy keeps good troops on other parts of the line and his enemy can displace troops in the same fashion.

In any event, the German has now used some 130 divisions, 127 to be exact, in his attack. Some of these divisions have been used up; they will have to go back and be reorganized; and it will be weeks and even months before they can get back. I believe the French calculate that it takes three months to remake a division which has suffered 40 per cent losses. But the German can refill the ranks of these divisions from the reserves in the depots and the training camps, and they will return in the late summer.

98 Divisions in Somme Blow.

The first blow of the German was struck with 98 divisions, which were used in the first three weeks at the Somme. It is exceedingly doubtful if he can ever get together another such force because the troops were specifically picked and trained. He had remade many of his divisions last winter and in remaking them used up the best of his material still surviving. The second German blow, that at the Lys, was delivered by 29 divisions. It was a smaller blow, the troops making it were used more steadily and, therefore, were more completely exhausted and will need much more time to refit.

Now, before turning to the allied side, I desire briefly to furnish some statistics of the expansion of the German army since the war began and the manner in which it has been used east and west.

At the time of the Marne, the German army consisted of 123 divisions containing 1,722,000 men, of these 96½ containing 1,351,000 were used against the western allies and 26¼ against Russia, the strength of the eastern armies was 371,000. A year later the German army consisted of 170 divisions, an increase of but 33 divisions and of this number 103 divisions containing 1,300,000 were in the west and 67 divisions, containing almost 900,000 men, were in the east.

As late as last September, the Germans, then possessing 239 divisions, were using 147 divisions, with 1,500,000, in the west, and 92 divisions, with 1,100,000, in the east. In three years the Germans had thus almost, but not quite, doubled the number of his divisions, but had reduced the strength of the divisions from 14,000 to 10,000, having 2,660,000 men in his organized army against 1,722,000 in the Marne time.

Today he has in the west 190 divisions, amounting to about 2,400,000, and he has 49 in the east or en route from east to west, plus any new divisions he may have organized since last December, but these are bound to be very few. Accepting the highest estimate of 220 divisions as the number he can use in the west this year, he will be able to employ in all around 2,640,000, to which must be added certain artillery formations, including Austrian regiments of heavy artillery. But he can use this strength several times by withdrawing various divisions and refilling the gaps in them from his reserves in the depots and training camps. All told, however, it is exceed-

Five Months at Sea on a German Raider

—AN AMERICAN MERCHANT SHIP CAPTAIN—

In the First Installment of His Remarkable Story, Capt. Cameron Tells How the "Wolf," From Kiel, Overhauled His Vessel Near Australia and Sank Her With Her Cargo of Gasoline the Day After Taking Him, His Family and Crew Off—Treated Kindly by Captors.

By Capt. J. Stanley Cameron.

(Copyright, 1918, by the Press Publishing Co.—The New Yorw World.)

THE Post-Dispatch herewith presents the first authentic narrative of the cruise of the German sea raider Wolf. The story is told by Capt. John Stanley Cameron, who was a captive on the raider and subsequently on the prize ships Hitachi Maru and Igotz Mende.

Capt. Cameron was liberated when the Igotz Mendi was wrecked in a storm in Dutch waters, when his German commander was trying to make German waters.

Capt. Cameron went to sea at the age of three. At thirteen he was earning his living as an able-bodied seaman, and has been a master of sailing vessels since he was twenty-one. Five years ago he took a sailing yacht of 74 tons from New York to San Francisco, the smallest vessel of her class to "beat through" the Straits of Magellan. Since then, Capt. Cameron had retired from the sea, until his last trip as master of the Beluga. He is thirty-four years old now, but prematurely gray. Capt. Cameron's narrative will be published in installments, the Post-Dispatch giving a chapter of it daily until its completion.

LITTLE did I dream when I sailed away from San Francisco in the little bark Beluga that I would finish my voyage not in Austarlia, after a tow months' trip, but in Denmark, the other side of the world, after a 10 months' experience that seldom has been equaled in seagoing history.

My story could well be called "An Escape From the Jaws of Hell," for a prisoner's life in Germany under present conditions is surely a hell on earth. During my six weeks' stay in Denmark I have interviewed neutral sailors who have been sent out of Germany, and old men who have gone out on passports because of extreme old age; also prisoners who have escaped over the border into Denmark via the coal train route. These men, one and all, paint a picture of a prisoner's life in Germany as being a veritable hell on earth.

We sailed from San Francisco on May 15, 1917, with a cargo of 15,000 cases of benzine for Sydney, Australia. After letting go the tugboat and setting sail on the ship, we settled down for a quiet and uneventful passage. Seldom have I gone to sea under more favorable circumstances. A tight little vessel, a good deep water crew of Scandinavian sailormen, plenty of good, wholesome provisions and a cook who knew his business. Both the first and second mates were officers of the old school, with years of experience, so it seemed that I was fortunate in getting so evenly balanced a crew, as, owing to the frenzied state of shipping along the Pacific coast, a master was indeed fortunate who found on getting to sea that half his crew could box the compass, much less hand, reef and steer.

Even under these favorable circumstances there was a fly in the ointment. On counting noses, I made the discovery that the entire ship's company amounted to 13 (an unlucky number, as every salt will testify). A ship's crew of 11, counting myself, and two passengers—my wife and little daughter. When I called this fact to my wife's attention she laughed at me, saying that was old sailors' tommyrot and that we were living in the twentieth century and should have outgrown such silly superstitions. Nevertheless, owing to a strain of Scotch blood in my veins, the superstition remained in my mind for many days, until, owing to the humdrum uneventfulness of our progress, this thought died a natural death.

I crossed the Equator well to the westward; passing to the westward of the Fiji Islands and hoping that when I ran out of the seoutheast trade winds I would get a favorable wind and cut close by the southern end of New Caledonia. I had a hunch, and if I had been lucky and had two days' favorable wind this story would never have happened. But, unfortunately, adverse winds were encountered, forcing me to the southward and into the regular sailing vessel route.

She Counted the Minutes.

My wife is an Australian girl and had not been home to visit her mother for more than 10 years. Each day at noon when I placed the vessel's position on the chart she would measure and remeasure the distance we had left to go and figure out the days, hours and minutes that would elapse, under various weather conditions, until she should once more see her Australian home.

On July 9, at noon, our little vessel was only about 900 miles off Sydney, about four days' run under favorable conditions, and according to all the weather signs we were about due for a southeast squall, which in this case would have almost certainly lasted us into port. It was decreed otherwise, however.

About 2:15 p. m. "Fritz," a Norwegian sailor, aloft on one of the masts, shouted down "Smoke Oh! on the port beam." I had a look through my binoculars, and sure enough, there was a steamer's stack and two masts just visible on the southwest horizon. I called to the wife, who was busy inside the cabin, to come on deck and see the steamer, which was the first vessel of any description we had sighted since we left San Francisco some 50 days back.

She and Nita, my 6-year-old girl, ran on deck and were tremendously interested, and as it was apparent that this steamer was going to pass close by us they ran below to put on clean frocks. While studying the vessel through the glass, the old superstition of 13 people on board popped into my head, but was instantly dismissed.

The chief officer, Mr. Buckard, coming along just then, asked me if I could make out her nationality. I said I could not, and passed the glasses over to him to see if he could do any better. After studying her intently for a while, he said: "I don't know what her nationality is, captain, but by God she carries a large crew."

I snatched the glasses out of his hand, and had a look, and sure enough, there must have been 300 men in sight on deck. Just at this moment she ran up the imperial navy ensign at her jack staff aft on the stern, and from the signal halyards amidships she broke out the letters "G. T. E.," which interpreted from the international code means "Heave to and I will send a boat on board."

A Shot Across the Bow.

As soon as they had given me time to read their code—two minutes—they dropped their bulwarks, uncovering the six-inch gun forward and fired a shot across my vessel's bow. It was a solid shot and made a tremendous splash about half a mile ahead. I knew what that meant, and it didn't take us long to clean up the light sails and throw the main yards aback. I stood for a minute on the break of the poop and looked down on the main deck at my crew. To all appearances these Scandinavians stood around talking and smoking just as if meeting a German raider in the South Pacific was part of the day's work.

For myself, I knew that this marked a crisis in the lives of any American or British born among us, and as for my wife and child, God, the thought was like a stab in the heart. In a moment all the accounts I had heard of German atrocities toward women and children in Belgium flashed through my head and the thought turned me sick and dizzy. I had no other feeling, felt no surprise, although I had heard nothing of a raider being in the South Pacific—or my wife wouldn't have been there. I had given up the sea six years ago and only made this particular trip because of what my wife calls the "Scotch Jew" in me. We wanted to go to Australia to visit my wife's family and I took this chance of making money out of visiting the mother-in-law.

On walking aft I saw my wife leaning up against the wheelhouse, her face as white as a sheet and her eyes with a look of horror in them that chilled my blood. When she saw me she came over and took my hand in hers, looking all the time into my eyes and not saying a word. We stood there for what seemed a century. Presently I called Juanita to us and the three of us went down below into the cabin. We sat on the settee, never saying a word, and poor little Nita began to sob, feeling something sinister in the air, which she did not understand.

Wife Chilled With Terror.

In a minute the mate came to the cabin skylight and sang out that the launch would be alongside in a minute. I answered, "All right;" my wife got up and walked over to the bed and took one of my revolvers (I had two there) from under the mattress and handed it to me. Suddenly she threw both arms around my neck and drew my head into such a position that she could look into my eyes, and said: "Stanley, I want you to promise me that they will never get Juanita." I threw both arms about her, hugging her tight to myself, and said: "Mamie, I promise it; leave it to me." And with a sob I let her and started on deck.

When passing through the wheelhouse I stopped for a moment to pull myself together. On going on deck I saw a small motor launch just arriving alongside crowded with German bluejackets, armed to the teeth. A moment more and a young Lieutenant sprang onto the deck and came aft onto the quarter deck where I was standing. Coming to a stand in front of me he saluted and asked in excellent English, with an American accent: "Are you the captain of this vessel?" I answered "Yes." "Where are you from?" was his next question. I told him San Francisco to Sydney, Australia, 52 days out.

"Captain," he said, "I take charge of your vessel in the name of the German Imperial Navy." He gave an order in German and two German sailors sprang to the flag halyards and hauled down the Stars and Stripes and ran up the German ensign. They carefully saved the American flag and the company's burgee and took them aboard the Wolf afterward as trophies. Our crew, meantime, had been lined up and searched for weapons. Among the things the boarding crew brought on board was a black case containing 20 pairs of handcuffs and three large bombs to blow the vessel to pieces with. They didn't need the handcuffs, however.

Ran Up the German Ensign.

After the Lieutenant had gone through the ship's papers and found out all particulars regarding the Beluga's cargo, he had his signal man wig-wag the information to the commander of the Wolf, which was standing by. The commander, on finding out I had a cargo of benzine, decided not to sink the vessel imemdiately, but to take on board some 300 cases for use in their hydroplane, as their supply was getting low.

In a short while we received instructions from the Wolf to proceed due east for 60 miles and wait there for them. The Wolf then left us, going off at right angles. I learned from some of the German sailors that there was a big steamer approaching, and that the Wolf would probably run along parallel with her during the night and capture her in the morning. About 9:30 that night this steamer passed us, about a mile and a half off, heading to the southward and westward. When she came abreast of us, she signaled by Morse code asking what vessel we were, but the German prize crew took good care that none of us could answer or make any signals of any kind. I can use both continental and Morse and had a signal lamp on board, so if I had had an opportunity I could have warned this steamer that there was a raider about.

Had Served on Roanoke.

During the evening I had a chance to get acquainted with Lieut. Zelasko, the prize officer, and found him to be a very decent chap indeed. He, like all the rest of the Wolf's officers, excepting the commander and the Artillery Lieutenant, were members of the Imperial Marine, or naval reserve, and men that in peacetime commanded and served as officers in the merchant service, the same as myself. In fact, I found that Lieut. Zelasko had served part of his time as ablebodied seaman on the American ship Roanoke, a vessel that I had been in some years ago. He had the second-class Iron Cross which he had won at Antwerp.

Lieut. Zelasko assured me on his word of honor that my family would receive nothing but the best of care possible under the circumstances on board the Wolf. In fact, after finding out that the Wolf was manned by ex-merchant marine officers and men, my fears for the safety of my wife and little girl subsided greatly. My wife herself cheered up a great deal after hearing this, thinking that people from our own walk of life would not be as barbarous as we had been led to believe.

The German prize crew made a great fuss over Juanita, she being quite a novelty to them, and I am sure that she had the time of her life. Nobody on board the Wolf had seen a woman or child for nearly nine months. My wife and little girl were the first woman and child they had taken prisoner.

The Steamer Escapes.

On July 11, early in the morning, the Wolf picked us up again. It seems that steamer we saw got away from them. The Wolf put four large lifeboats on the water and took off, some 300 odd cases of benzine and all the provisions and ship's stores we had. The crew and myself were allowed to take everything we had on board the raider. At 1:30 p. m. we went into the boats and were taken alongside the Wolf and climbed on board by means of a Jacob's ladder.

On arriving on deck we were met by the chief officer, Capt. Schmall, whose first words were: "Tell your wife and little girl they have nothing to fear; that we are not the Huns you probably think we are." He took us aft under the poop and showed us an ex-storeroom which some men were cleaning out for our use. This room was in the center of the prisoners' quarters and had absolutely no ventilation, and there were negroes, Indians and various other nationalities passing up and down before the door, in various states of decolette, to say the least.

The Captain told me that we three could have this room together or my wife and child could have a more comfortable room on the berth deck amidships, but that I would have to remain down below, and would be allowed to visit my family two hours each day. My wife would not hear of this latter arrangement, saying that we would live in a pigsty together rather than be separated.

Commander Nerger came along and spoke to us, saying that he was very sorry to find that the Beluga had a woman and child on board, and had he known that such was the case he would have passed right on, but that once he had shown himself to be a raider, to protect himself he would have to keep us prisoners until such time as he could land us some place where it would not jeopardize the safety of his vessel or crew, and that in the meantime he would make us as comfortable as possible under the circumstances. He then gave orders that we three should be given one of the deck officers' staterooms on the berth deck and that we were to be given the freedom of the deck on the side our room was on, and that as long as I paid attention to my own business and did not talk to any of the sailors I was to continue enjoying this privilege; but just as soon as I gave them cause to believe I was trying to gather information I was to be sent down into the hell hole aft—as the prisoners called their well-named quarters. Needless to say, I gladly agreed to this proposition, knowing myself to be lucky not to be separated from my family.

Eighteen Shots Clean Misses.

At 4:30 p. m. a man (who was afterward my orderly) came to the room with cotton batting to put in our ears, as they were going to sink the Beluga by gunfire. I was granted permission to go on to the boat deck and watch. They fired 19 shots at her with the six-inch guns forward and the nineteenth shell hit her amidships. The other 18 were clean misses—rotten shooting, as the "target" was only two and one-half miles off. The Beluga burst into flames and immediately she caught fire the benzine exploded, making a wonderful sight.

The sea for miles around was covered with burning petrol. The weather was almost calm and occasionally a cat's paw of wind would come along and cause this flaming field of oil to run in various directions, opening a path of black water through a field of flames. Immediately this cat's paw of wind was over, the flames would run together again. When the spars fell out of the ship the splash was not of water, but a veritable cataract of flame.

Even the Germans were impressed by the picture of three square miles of burning sea, flames leaping 30 feet high and raging for hours. In fact, the sight was so great that I did not realize for some minutes that it was my own little home that was going up in flames. My wife, of course, could not stand this sight and had remained in her room.

Encove Captured and Sunk.

Now came what I consider the most awful period of my experience. My wife, who is naturally of a high-strung and courageous disposition, broke down under the preceding five days' strain. Luckily, Dr. Hausvelt, the Wolf's senior surgeon, had been in private life a woman's specialist in nervous troubles, and owing to his skill and untiring services, my wife pulled through. She lay in her berth packed in ice for three weeks, absolutely delirious. Owing to the experience I had undergone during the last few days my own nerves were all ragged and upset, and the continual raving and shrieking of my wife, who imagined herself undergoing the most awful torture, nearly drove me crazy. Some days and nights seemed never to come to an end.

During this time, on July 17, to be exact, the Wolf captured and set on fire the American schooner Encove, Capt. Oleson, bound from Columbia River to Australia, with a cargo of timber, but owing to my state of mind I only remember it as an incident; it seemed so trivial to me at the time. After my wife had passed the critical point and commenced to get better, however, a load seemed to be lifted off my shoulders and the mere fact of being a prisoner on board a German raider seemed to be of no consequence.

FIVE MONTHS AT SEA ON A DARING GERMAN RAIDER

I then commenced to take an interest in things around me. My continual silence, nobody to talk to, grew irksome, and I used to look forward to the evenings, when the prize officer, Lieut. Zelasco, used to come to my quarters and talk for half an hour. His talk usually was of the war, and it was interesting to get the German view of it. Of course from their viewpoint, "poor Germany" was the defendant, and they figured they were fighting to protect their homes and not in a war of conquest. One afternoon I asked Commander Nerger for permission to talk to some of the men, saying it wasn't healthy for a man to sit around all day and not say a word to anybody. This he granted, so after that I could hold short conversations with a good many members of the crew. It was absolutely forbidden, however, for me to talk to the other prisoners who had been on the Wolf for a long time and knew of its mine-laying activities.

The German auxiliary cruiser and mine layer, Wolf, was formerly a freighter belonging to the Hansa line, a subsidiary of the Hamburg-American line; of 6728 gross tons, single screw, one funnel, two well decks, two telescoping masts equipped with wireless, double bridge, two Sampson posts on poop and four sets of cargo booms. On the poop, rigged from the Sampson posts, were two faked cargo booms, whose real purpose was to disguise the six-inch guns mounted there. On her boat deck she showed three lifeboats, working boats from each side. The vessel was painted all black and had no particular distinguishing marks.

The Wolf's Armament.

The Wolf carried two 6-inch ordinary cannon, one mounted forward under the forecastle head and the other on the top of the poop. Four 4.7 ordinaries, two forward and two aft mounted on the well deck. The bulwark or rails at these guns as at the six inch forward gun, were fitted with hinges and spring catches, so that by one blow of a hammer they dropped down, giving the guns ample room for action. Under ordinary circumstances nothing of these guns could be seen above the rail. She was further armed with four torpedo tubes, two forward and two aft, on the well decks. The torpedoes were "Red Heads" and especially effective for short distances, while those aft were "Manlichers" and used for long distance work. She also had four machine guns mounted, two on each end of the boat deck, in such a manner that they could control the decks and the prisoners' quarters aft.

On leaving Kiel, the Wolf had a crew of 375 men, including one commander and Corvette Captain, one Lieutenant Commander, three senior and six Junior Lieutenants, two surgeons and twelve warrant officers, including gun mechanics, torpedo mechanics, mine experts, navigating sub-lieutenant and boatswains. She had a wireless crew of seven men including the wireless expert. The signal corps consisted of six signal men in charge of a code expert, who had several years of training at a school in deciphering various codes. I am led to believe from what I saw that this man was able to decipher naval and private codes used in the South Pacific, but wash unable to handle codes used in the North Atlantic.

On leaving Kiel the Wolf had on board 500 mines, 7500 tons of Westphalien coal, 3000 tons of water and 2500 tons of food and ammunition. She was equipped with triple expansion engines and three boilers and one auxiliary donkey boiler. Her power plant was unique in that she could steam seven knots per hour on a consumption of 18 tons of coal a day and 11½ knots per hour, her maximum, on 28 tons of coal a day. I have heard it said that she had one of the most efficient power plants out of Europe, having a fuel consumption of 1.2 per I. H.P. The Wolf was further equipped with a powerful searchlight, situated abaft the bridge, on a tower that could be raised or lowered at will. When not in use there was nothing to be seen of this light above the top of the house. The Wolf sailed from Kiel on Nov. 21, 1916.

A Strict Disciplinarian.

The commander of the Wolf, Corvette Captain Nerger of the Imperial German Navy, was a man probably 35 years of age, of moderate height and slim build. He was immaculate in all things pertaining to his person and was a strict disciplinarian. I was in Commander Nerger's quarters one day I had visited him to thank him for the courtesies which he had extended to my family and myself, and found him a very agreeable man to talk with, a thorough gentleman and apparently anxious to do anything he could to make our lot bearable. In talking with him there was nothing to denote the arrogant Prussianism which is said to predominate in the higher branches of the German Navy.

And yet Commander Nerger was a "man-all-alone." He kept absolutely to himself; took no man into his confidence. No man ever knew an hour ahead what his plans or the vessel's plans were. He was the only man who knew when we started for home. On the 15 months' cruise of the Wolf Nerger was in full charge and ran his vessel as a "one man ship." He lived in comfortable quarters on the boat deck, just under the bridge, and had his meals served in his private dining room. In the five months I was on the Wolf I don't think I saw him on the berth deck more than a dozen times, and then only on an inspection trip of some kind. He always had the appearance of having just stepped out of a bandbox, he was so immaculate in his dress. I was told by his officers that Nerger never gets excited, always remains cool under all circumstances. They told a story of him being in command of a light cruiser in the battle of the Dogger Banks, and that throughout the engagement he calmly paced back and forth on the bridge, with a cigar in his mouth, giving his orders as calmly as if at some gun practice of maneuvers. His officers and men all respected him, which to my mind is a good enough recommendation.

Doctor Tells How to Strengthen Eyesight 50 per cent In One Week's Time In Many Instances

A Free Prescription You Can Have Filled and Use at Home.

Philadelphia, Pa. Do you wear glasses? Are you a victim of eye strain or other eye weaknesses? If so, you will be glad to know that according to Dr. Lewis there is real hope for you. Many whose eyes were failing say they have had their eyes restored through the principle of this wonderful free prescription. One man says, after trying it: "I was almost blind; could not see to read at all. Now I can read everything without any glasses and my eyes do not water any more. At night they would pain dreadfully; now they feel fine all the time. It was like a miracle to me." A lady who used it says: "The atmosphere seemed hazy with or without glasses, but after using this prescription for fifteen days everything seems clear. I can even read fine print without glasses." It is believed that thousands who wear glasses can now discard them in a reasonable time and multitudes more will be able to strengthen their eyes so as to be spared the trouble and expense of ever getting glasses. Eye troubles of many descriptions may be wonderfully benefited by following the simple rules. Here is the prescription: Go to any active drug store and get a bottle of Bon-Opto tablets. Drop one Bon-Opto tablet in a fourth of a glass of water and allow to dissolve. With this liquid bathe the eyes two to four times daily. You should notice your eyes clear up perceptibly right from the start and inflammation will quickly disappear. If your eyes are bothering you, even a little, take steps to save them now before it is too late. Many hopelessly blind might have been saved if they had cared for their eyes in time.

Note: Another prominent Physician to whom the above article was submitted said: "Bon-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients are well known to eminent eye specialists and widely prescribed by them. The manufacturers guarantee it to strengthen eyesight 50 per cent in one week's time in many instances or refund the money. It can be obtained from any good druggist, and is one of the very few preparations I feel should be kept on hand for regular use in almost every family." It is sold in St. Louis by Enderle-Johnson Bros., Pauley, Judge & Dolph and Wolff-Wilson.—ADVERTISEMENT.

MAN. POWER IN THE WEST ABOUT EQUAL, SIMONDS ASSERTS

ingly doubtful if he can muster 90 divisions for any single blow again.

Now, what have the allies to meet this storm? What did they have a month ago? The case of the British has occupied world attention for many weeks. The reiterated assertions that the British army was overwhelmingly outnumbered has provoked much curiosity. On this question we have only a little light. Sir Douglas Haig last year gave the totals of British divisions engaged as something less than half of 131, the number of German divisions which were engaged against the British. There have been assertions that this number has been increased, but the evidence is unconvincing.

What the British Had.

The Germans fix the number of British divisions in line as 50, and hint that others are with the army of maneuver. With the British are two Portuguese divisions which were, before the recent battle, recruited up to a strong point. All things considered, it is not excessive to credit the British with 60 divisions in France, amounting to at least 1,000,000 men, and most of these divisions, at least 50, to accept the German figures, were in line when the blow fell. Of these 50, 14 were actually on the front with the Fifth Army when it was attacked and well nigh destroyed. Fifty divisions would mean at the lowest 750,000 men, and we may calculate that at the minimum the British had 750,000 in 50 divisions to meet the shock of 90 divisions, amounting to a litle less than 1,100,000.

As for the French, they had, according to the Germans, 60 divisions in line, another 900,000 and the Belgians had five divisions, amounting to 75,000. Thus the allies had in line facing the Germans 5 Belgian, 50 British and 60 French divisions, or 115 divisions, with another 60 divisions in reserve in the army of maneuver described by the Germans, and this would mean a total of 175 divisions, plus what American divisions were ready; and the Germans count these as 220,000, which would represent a little less than nine American divisions and a little more than 18 German divisions.

The allies thus had on the western front some 184 divisions against 190 Germans, but their divisions were stronger than the Germans and gave them a slight numerical advantage The Germans struck with the advantage of a superior concentration at the point of attack. He had 40 divisions against 14 and 60 against less than 25 in the first days. He used 98 at the Somme first and last, where the allies probably used less than half as many. But this great advance was due, not to his numbers so much as to his success in breaking through the allied line before the allies could concentrate, and this was an accident of war.

How Many British?

The British Fifth army failed in its mission. But, despite his initial advantage, the German was pinned down six days later by forces still far his inferior, for the French did not use above 10 divisions, and even if the whole of the British reserve divisions with the army of maneuvers were drawn upon, this would not add more than 10 more. The British Third army was only partially engaged until the main drive had been halted. It is not true, then, that the allies are outnumbered, but it is true that they chose to hold their lines relatively lightly against the storm, that as a result their army was broken, although in part through mistakes of command and because of poor staff work. Three French divisions at Verdun held 17 German divisions within five miles for six days. But 14 British divisions failed to hold 40 German divisions within 30 miles in the same time.

If the British have 60 divisions in France, containing at least 1,000,000 men, they must have another 1,000,000 of reserves in the depots to refill wastage gaps, and they may have 250,000 on communications and non-fighting work. They are, then, proportionately better off than the Germans for reserves. In addition the British have 1,000,000 men in Britain, but of these half are convalescent wounded and a quarter are new men being trained, to use Gen. Maurice's recent figures, which would leave only 250,000 actually ready for work, and some portion of these must have been rushed to France after the collapse of the Fifth army. Another 1,000,000 may be set down to "side shows," Italy, Saloniki, Palestine and Mesopotamia.

All told, 60 British divisions at the most have been fighting 90 German divisions; but the British divisions are stronger than the German. With the British have been from 10 to 20 French divisions, who have fought with 37 German divisions, in part with the British and in part alone. It would not seem, therefore, that the allies have been overwhelmingly outnumbered, as five Belgian and two Portuguese divisions have been used, also against the 127 German divisions. And there must still remain some 40 French divisions of the army of maneuvers as well as 50 or 60 divisions on the balance of the line, which can be used to replace exhausted divisions, just as the Germans can draw upon 70 similar divisions.

But the big question remains, which of the contestants can refill its wastage more promptly and more frequently? Again, it would seem to be the allies, provided we do our part. Foch's army of maneuver, with its 40 or more divisions may be kept intact, or it may be further weakened by the necessity of going to the aid of the hard pressed British. But, as the conflict goes on, both sides will be worn down and neither may be left at the end of the campaign in a position to strike, although the German is sure to have fewer numbers at that time, if he makes no big captures.

Task for Americans.

This situation, however, may be avoided if America can put 500,000 men in line by July 1 and 750,000 by October 1. Then the German will find himself with his reserves exhausted, his divisions worn out without adequate resources for filling them and he will find that on the enemy side, many new American divisions are ready for some sort of fighting.

As it stands, the Germans cannot count on more than 220 divisions, the allies can count upon 60 British, 100 French, 5 Belgian and 2 Portuguese. British troops, withdrawn from the "side shows" or sent over from Britain, may bring the total up to 70 divisions for the British. But beyond this there can be only such increase as is supplied by the Italians and the Americans. Our troops over there now, according to the Germans, have the value of 18 German divisions and the allies, all told, must have the equivalent of at least 200 and probably the full 220 German divisions, given the difference in divisional strength, but this means, as I said before, that both sides may wear out all their reserves before the conflict is over and our allies be unable to make a counter-stroke at the close, if we do not act promptly and send as many troops over as possible.

As it stands, and for the reasons I have tried to indicate, no one of the armies can, in the campaign of this year, much increase its number of divisions and the number of divisions is approximately equal. Italian and American divisions can supply the necessary advantage in numbers and our relatively slightly trained troops can be used in quiet sectors, organized with French brigades, to release other French brigades. As for the Italian troops, they will be far more nearly ready for immediate use anywhere.

Cutting Down the Reserve.

The problem of attrition is to wear out the German reserves, behind the divisions in the field, while preventing the Germans from obtaining decisive results. He has lost between 300,000 and 400,000 men, the British and French together have not lost above 300,000, although the British loss in prisoners has been fairly high. and this represents permanent wastage, for these will not return until the end of the war, while the German will get most of his wounded back this year. But this dividing the loss among several nations, the allies will bear the more easily than the German, who must bear it all by himself.

Another month and another 300,000 casualties will, at least, use up nearly half of all the reserves the Germans can have, and it may take three-quarters. His troops will suffer from the rapid deterioration of quality as the divisions are made over. He has already used some divisions twice and several three times. He has withdrawn 70 divisions of the 127 employed, but the larger part of these are still capable of immediate use. On the other hand, there are not a few divisions which will not reappear for at least three months, and these will hardly get back in time for the decision of the present battle.

If the German can force his enemies to use up their divisions as rapidly as he is using up his, then at the end, if we and the Italians do not get there in sufficient numbers, the battle will terminate in a draw, with both sides exhausted and the German claiming gains in territory prisoners and guns as evidence of his victory and starting new peace pro- he is invincible, and in one more he is invincible, and in one more campaign can complete what he has begun.

Time to Strike.

But if the American divisions have arrived in sufficient numbers to insure to the allies a real reserve, a powerful army of maneuver, when the time to strike comes, then the German may be defeated absolutely, not merely prevented from winning a decisive victory.

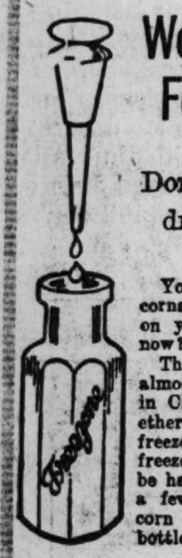
Women! Stop Corn Pain! Few Drops and Corns Lift Out

Don't hurt a bit! Cincinnati man discovers drug that works miracles—No humbug!



Your high heels have put corns on your toes and calluses on your feet, but why care now?

This tiny bottle holds an almost magic fluid. A genius in Cincinnati discovered this ether compound and named it freezone. Small bottles of freezone like here shown can be had at any drug store for a few cents. Don't keep a corn another hour, but get a bottle of freezone and apply a few drops on your tender, aching corn or callus. Instantly the soreness disappears and shortly you will find the corn or callus so shriveled and loose that you can lift it off with the fingers.

Just think! You get rid of a hard corn, soft corn or a corn between the toes, as well as hardened calluses without suffering one particle. Freezone is magic! Keep it on dresser. Wear smaller shoes.

NEW HEMORRHAGE REMEDY

Prague Doctor's Discovery Said to Stop Flow Quickly.

STOCKHOLM, March 19 (By A. P.)—Discovery by Prof. Rudolf Fischl of Prague of a new remedy for combating hemorrhage in announced by the journal of the Austrian Apothecaries' Association. The remedy is made from a hitherto unknown element in the lung tissue of certain animals. It is a reddish brown powder which dissolves in water into a foaming, slimy substance.

After a series of experiments with animals it has been employed on human beings. It is reported to stop quickly the most dangerous hemorrhages, such as those from the liver, kidneys and brain substance, and to be especially valuable in the case of the so-called haemophiles, persons whose blood is deficient in coagulable elements and for whom the slightest cut means serious and possibly fatal hemorrhage.

STATE COMMITTEE SEEKS TO DEPOSE LAWLER DALEY

Democrats on Still Hunt for a "Win or Die" Chairman of City Committee Who Can Get the Money.

A. J. DONNELLY AND PRINKMAN MENTIONED

Executive Committee Will Ask Governor to Throw Influence Into Organization Contest in August.

Members of the Executive Committee of the Democratic State Committee made it known, after their meeting at the Planters Hotel Friday, that their efforts to reorganize and reform the St. Louis Democratic City Committee will be directed principally against the chairman, Lawrence P. Daley of 3028A Olive street, more familiarly known to St. Louis politicians as "Lawler" Daley.

In seeking to depose Daley from the city chairmanship, the Executive Committee is on a still hunt for a leader for St. Louis Democracy who will combine the traits of personal popularity and organizing ability and a win-or-die determination. Incidentally, they are not disposed to consider anybody who has not a fair-sized bank roll or an ability to get the bank rolls of others.

Ben G. Brinkman, vice president of the Lafayette-South Side Bank, and Arthur J. Donnelly, an undertaker, who was manager of the Gardner-for-Governor campaign in 1916, are being considered for chairman of the City Committee, and an effort will be made by the State Executive Committee to induce one of them to accept, provided the City Committee can be induced to throw Daley over.

Action to Come in August.

Yesterday's meeting of the Executive Committee, which was held behind closed doors, was devoted almost entirely to a discussion of the unsatisfactory party conditions in St. Louis, and while it was agreed that the City Committee must be reorganized, the decision was reached to attempt no action until the August primary, when a new City Committee will be chosen.

The probabilities are that the make-up of the new City Committee will be much the same as the make-up of the present one, though the Executive Committee decided to appeal to Gov. Gardner to throw the weight of the influence of the state administration into contests for committeemen in several wards and into the organization of the committee after the election of committeemen in August.

What the effect of the Governor's participation in the primary would be is problematical, as the machine politicians in St. Louis, who invariably have controlled primaries, have little friendship for the Governor, who has given almost no attention to them in making appointments.

The Executive Committee gave consideration to several committeemen who, it was stated in the meeting, country politicians did not believe were proper representatives of the party, but it was decided there would be little chance to defeat them for re-election and that the state organization could not hope for success in its movement in any way except to induce them to permit a man in whom there would be greater public confidence to head the committee. It is not necessary that the chairman be a member of the City Committee.

It was charged in the Executive Committee meeting that election returns from several St. Louis wards showed that some committeemen had "laid down" on the state and national tickets, and that there were indications that some committeemen were more interested in their own personal welfare than in the success of the party tickets.

In discussing Chairman Daley some of the members of the Executive Committee quizzed State Senator Michael Kinney, who is not politically friendly to Daley, about him.

"What is Daley's business?" asked the rural member.

"Ah, well, let's see, you know I haven't seen much of anything of Daley for a number of years," replied Senator Kinney.

"Isn't he a contractor?" asked the rural member.

"What kind of a contractor did you say?" parried Senator Kinney.

"I don't know, I didn't say, I just understood he was a contractor."

"Contractor," said Kinney. "Let me see. Yes, it might be. He might be a contractor."

"That's it," spoke up another. "I'm told he has a contract to hold down the corner of Jefferson avenue and Olive street."

The latter remark was due to the fact that Daley almost always is to be found standing at that corner, which, among politicians, has come to be known as "Lawler Daley's office."

In the city directory Daley's occupation is given as a clerk.

Muskrats Menace Dams and Canals.

STOCKHOLM, March 19 (By A. P.)—Muskrats, imported from Bohemia in 1905 from America, have multiplied prodigiously and spread into Saxony and Bavaria in such numbers that the authorities have been moved to take steps to reduce their numbers. The muskrats are playing havoc with fishponds, dams, canals and locks.

FUEL CO-EDUCATION DECREED

Washington University Takes Last Bars Down Against Woman.

Washington University will be co-educational in all its departments at the outset of the 1918-19 school year. Trustees have approved a recommendation by the faculty that the School of Medicine be opened to women students, this action following a similar one a few weeks since that the School of Dentistry be made co-educational, beginning with the next term. All the other departments of the institution have been open to women for some time.

The board also ordered a change in the names of certain of the university schools, for the sake of harmony, according to which they are to be known as "School of Medicine," "School of Law" and "School of Dentistry."

Why Gray Hair Is No Longer Necessary

New, Clean, Easy Harmless Treatment. First bottle gives satisfaction

After having been tried and proven successful by hundreds of their customers, leading stores are recommending "Canute Water for Gray Hair" to those who wish the color of their hair restored. Famous-Barr Co., Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Wolff-Wilson Drug Stores, Stix, Baer & Fuller Dry Goods Co. sell it, and all questions one naturally asks are here plainly answered.

IS IT ABSOLUTELY SAFE TO USE? By all means—yes. You may use Canute Water for Gray Hair without the slightest fear or injury to the hair, scalp or eyes, as it contains none of the injurious elements of the ordinary hair dye, being entirely FREE from acid, sugar of lead, sulphur or coal tar products of any kind—making it harmless to the hair and scalp as ordinary water. It is for external use only.

WILL IT SOIL THE HANDS OR SCALP? No, it will not. Our own patented process prevents it from staining the hands or scalp. Canute Water for Gray Hair is an especially clean, convenient treatment—not being sticky or greasy. It restores so naturally and evenly no one will be able to tell you are using anything.

IS IT A DYE? Positively not. That is just the thing it isn't. Canute Water is a simple and natural method of reviving the youthful color of hair that has turned gray from age, illness or other cause. Proof that Canute Water is not a dye is that it has no numbered shades—the same bottle is good for all shades of hair, while, as the reader knows, dyes are numbered 1, 2 or 3.

HOW IS IT APPLIED? Very easily. Just wet your hair with it and allow to dry in good, fresh air. Nothing hard about that, is there? Apply on hair once daily, and day by day observe the hair becoming darker and darker. And by the time you have finished the first bottle the youthful color of your hair will be restored. It will then remain that way, and simply require a retouching once every week or two as the hair grows.

CAN THE DARKENED COLOR WASH OR RUB OFF? The color will not wash off. Shampoo the hair all you like—you may even use a hot curling iron, as not even that will effect the color. On the contrary, the more you shampoo the hair the softer and fluffier the hair will become. Remember, it will only be necessary to use Canute Water for Gray Hair afterward once every week or two on the new hair that grows.

Believe us, after a week you'll thank yourself for having tried it. Sold at the above-mentioned stores for $1.00 a bottle or by mail direct. Friedman Canute Co., 27 East 22d St., New York City.—ADVERTISEMENT.

Old Herbal Remedy Used Successfully in Relieving Diabetes

The most satisfactory results have been obtained in combating diabetes by observing certain dietary rules and the judicious use of Warner's Safe Diabetes Remedy, an herbal preparation of 40 years' successful sale.

Following is a letter from a grateful user:

"This letter is the best proof that I am still alive. Your medicine is a miracle to me. My weight was reduced from 157 to 114 pounds when I left the hospital. I left there Aug. 6th in despair. Hundreds of people that knew me said I would never live to return to my studio. After leaving the hospital, I saw your "ad." in the paper. I began its use and at once commenced to improve, and now everybody is saying to me that I look better than ever before. I tip the scales at 132 pounds and I am back working again to the astonishment of all. I feel splendid and people say I am looking better every day. I must tell you that every word I have written is true and I can prove it by hundreds that knew my condition. Jules Friquet, 511 West First Street, Los Angeles, Cal."

ECZEMA
Also Called Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Water Poison, Weeping Skin, Etc.

DR. CANNADAY
Eczema Specialist for 15 Years.

For fifteen years I have been treating one disease alone, ECZEMA. I have handled over one million cases. I do not pretend to know it all, but I am convinced the disease is due to an excess of acid in the blood, and closely related to rheumatism and cancer. This acid must be removed.

Eczema is called by some people Itch, Tetter, Salt Rheum, Pruritus, Milk Crust, Weeping Skin, etc. I am fully convinced Eczema is a curable disease, and when I say it can be cured, I mean just what I say—C-U-R-E-D and not merely patched up for a while to return worse than before. It makes no difference what other doctors have told you, or what all you have tried, all I ask is just a chance to prove to you that this vast experience has taught me a great deal that would be of help to you. If you will write me today I will send you a free trial of my mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will do more to convince you than I or anyone else could in a month's preaching. It's all up to you. If you suffer any more with eczema and refuse to merely write to me for free trial just blame yourself. No matter where you live, I have treated your neighbors. Merely dropping me a postal today is likely to give you more real comfort in a week than you ever expected to enjoy again. Do it right now, your very life may be at stake.

Women Find Clear Skin In Simple Laxative

A sense of false modesty often prevents women from admitting that many of her ills and disorders are due primarily to constipation.

But women who know themselves have learned that headache remedies and beautifiers only cover the trouble but do not dislodge it.

What is needed is a remedy to move the bowels and stir up the torpid liver. An ever-increasing number of sensible women take a small dose of a combination of simple laxative herbs with pepsin known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin and sold by druggists under that name.

It will save a woman from the habitual use of headache remedies, skin lotions and similar makeshifts. Once the bowels are emptied and regulated, the headache and the pimples and blotches disappear. It is the rational, natural method.

A bottle of Syrup Pepsin lasts a family a long time, and all will find use for it from time to time. Thoughtful people are never without it in the house.

The druggist will refund your money if it fails to do as promised.

NO INCREASE

In spite of enormous increased laboratory costs due to the War the manufacturers of Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin are sacrificing their profits and absorbing the war taxes, so that this family laxative may remain at the pre-war price of 50c and $1 a large bottle. So sold by druggists for 26 years

GERMAN-BORN SAVANTS PLEDGE FEALTY TO U. S.

University Professors Condemn Teutonic Powers for Instigating Great War.

BOSTON, Mass., April 27.—Condemnation of the German Government's part in provoking or permitting the present world conflict and firm adherence to the ends for which the United States entered the war, are set forth in a declaration of principles by members of American college and university faculties who are of German birth, made public today by E. C. Wilm, professor of philosophy of the College of Liberal Arts of Boston University.

Eighteen college professors who signed the document pledged unalterable loyalty, material support and influence until the objects for which America took up arms had been attained. German-American citizens were urged to support the American cause. The declaration as given out by Wilm, follows:

Text of Declaration.

"At this, the first anniversary month of America's entrance into the world war, it seems fitting that Americans of German descent should state their convictions and sentiments on the issues involved. Therefore, we, the undersigned, hereby make the following declaration of principles, the support of which we urge upon our German-American fellow-citizens everywhere:

"We view with abhorrence and condemn without reservation the part which the German Imperial Government had in provoking or permitting the present world conflict; we disavow and disown the doctrine, subversive of international security and future peace, that international covenants may be set aside whenever it is to the interest of any nation to do so; and we condemn unqualifiedly, as unworthy of the German nation, the various acts of violence in disregard of such covenants; finally, we express our firm adherence to the political principles and ends for which the United States has entered the war, the vindication of international right, the self-determination of nations, the discrediting of militaristic and imperialistic, and the substitution therefor of liberal and democratic ideals and principles of government, and we pledge our unalterable loyalty, our material support and our influence until these ends shall have been attained."

The statement was signed by R. Gerhard Albrecht, Western Reserve University; H. C. G. Brandt, Hamilton College, Frederick Carl Eiselen, Northwestern University, E. A. Fath, Redfield College; B. E. Fernow, University of Toronto; Laurence Fossler, University of Nebraska; Otto Heller, Washington University, St. Louis; Carl A. 2 FRENCH TANK COMMANDERS REWARDED FOR HEROISM

Lieutenant Mounted Land Cruiser After Entire Crew Was Disabled and Continued Attack.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 27 (By A. P.).—Two French commanders of tanks have just been rewarded for deeds of heroism in the recent fighting near Castel.

Lieut. Domerc, commanding a squad of tanks in an advance, saw one of his chariots of assault suddenly halt. An investigation showed that the entire crew was disabled. The Lieutenant, with one of his men as a gunner, mounted the tank under heavy fire and set it in motion and reached Castel, attacking on the way with the machine gun several large groups of Germans, putting many of them out of action. Eventually they returned safely to the French line.

Sergeant Mouren, commanding another tank, noticing a German field battery retreating, followed it to attack the gunners. He was 500 yards within the German lines when his motor refused to work. The Sergeant dismounted with his crew under a hurricane of rifle fire and detached the machine guns with which he repulsed a large force of Germans who attempted to approach, firing until the last reel of cartridges was spent. The entire crew except the Sergeant was wounded, but the Sergeant gathered the injured men together and they made their way through thickets to the French position.

Both tank commanders received the cross of the legion of honor on the battlefield.

11 AMERICANS GET WAR CROSS

Ambulance Men Decorated for Bravery in Present Battle.

PARIS, April 27 (By A. P.).—Eleven American ambulance men have won the War Cross by gallant services performed during the battle now in progress. Lieut. Ralph Richmond, commanding section 642, with Sergt. Junius Beebe, G. L. Harris, Henry K. James, E. A. Littlefield and John J. Frennig, were cited in eulogistic terms for carrying away wounded men from positions right up against the enemy's lines under the heaviest fire.

Charles A. Reed of section 525, Henry W. Holman, Johnson N. Hunsberger Jr. and Hobert S. Puryski of section 504 and Jesse M. Bazby of section 501 were cited in regimental orders for courage displayed April 6.

Loganberry, like all Jiffy-Jell flavors, comes to you sealed in glass vials. There's a bottle in each package.

Fruit Juice Flavors In Bottles

'Twill Surprise You

The old-time quick desserts of this kind had dry flavors mixed with the powder. Delicate fruit flavors cannot keep in that way.

In Jiffy-Jell the abundant flavor is made from fresh, ripe fruit. Then sealed to keep its freshness.

It will surprise you, as it has a million others. It will change your whole conception of these quick, fruity dainties. The flavor means everything.

Now we offer dessert molds—worth twice what you spend—if you will this week try the Loganberry flavor. Then you will know to the utmost the delights of Jiffy-Jell.

Fruity, Economical Desserts and Salads—Instantly Made

Pineapple Flavor for Salads or Dessert Jells

Get Your Set Now

Your Last Chance

You should have a set of aluminum dessert molds. They will last a lifetime, and they make desserts doubly inviting.

If you have the individual molds, you should have a pint mold. We offer the choice of two styles. This week you can get them with Jiffy-Jell. Don't lose the chance.

Jiffy-Jell is for desserts and salads. Also for garnish jell. You make it in an instant by simply adding boiling water, then the flavor from the bottle. No sugar, no color, no fruit need be added.

A package of Jiffy-Jell serves six people in molds. If you whip it you double the quantity. So it brings you quick desserts and salads at a very trifling cost.

Salad Flavors

For fancy desserts you can add fruits, nuts, chocolate or topping. For salads, mix in the fruits or vegetable before the Jiffy-Jell cools. Or serve the jell with the salad.

Lime Jiffy-Jell—flavored from lime fruit—makes a tart, green salad jell. Mint Jiffy-Jell—flavored from mint leaves—makes a salad jell, an aspic jell, or a garnish jell for roast lamb or cold meats. Other fruit flavors make fine salad jell.

Try at least two flavors, including Loganberry. Our offers are based on either two or six packages. Cut out the coupon so you won't forget, for our offers last only one week.

4500 BOY SCOUTS HERE OPEN DRIVE FOR LIBERTY LOAN

Campaign Plans Include Canvass to "Smoke Out" All in City Who Have Not Bought Bonds.

"SHOW ME A BOND OR BUY," THEIR SLOGAN

Organization Here Sold More Bonds Than Scouts of Any Other City in the Second Issue.

St. Louis Boy Scouts have wigwagged the Liberty Loan organization not to be so concerned over the seeming indifference of St. Louis to its failure to reach its quota more speedily.

Sunrise yesterday was the signal for 4500 Boy Scouts to scurry for the four corners of the city on a slacker hunt that will continue one week, and smoke out every St. Louisan to show an order for a bond or reasons why.

Just what sort of "smokers" Boy Scouts are is shown in the figures of the last campaign when St. Louis Scouts obtained 32,000 subscribers for a total of $6,998,000. In other words, the Scouts sold one in every four bonds sold in St. Louis. They obtained twice as many subscribers as did the Boy Scouts of St. Paul, the only city in the United States to excel their sales total.

The Scouts' goal in the third loan is $10,000,000. The means they will take to get that total is a house-to-house canvass under instructions not to take "no" for an answer until after a second or third visit. "Show me a bond or buy" is to be their motto.

Ten campaign floats consist of tents pitched on platforms built on wagon trucks. Within each tent was a table with Liberty Loan literature and a supply of pencils for signers. Outside were Boy Scout four-minute speakers. The floats were drawn by uniformed troops of Boy Scouts. A band of Scouts sang war songs in the streets.

The fact that other street speakers have not been overwhelmed by the success of their appeals is no discouragement to Boy Scout four-minute men.

Boy Succeeds as Speaker.

An incident of a week ago last night is told. The Federal Reserve organization had furnished a speaker for a moving picture theater in Webster Groves. A Boy Scout "four-minute-man," 13 years old, had been assigned to speak for the first performance, the heavy artillery kind reserved for the second.

After listening to the Boy Scout during the first show the Federal Reserve speaker went to the theater manager. "I can't speak like that youngster. Let him speak at the second show, too. I'm going home."

President Wilson has made public declaration: "I am depending on the Boy Scouts of America to put this Third Liberty Loan over the top."

The earnestness with which the Scouts accept their commission is shown in an incident of the second campaign related by former Judge Daniel G. Taylor. Near the close of a business day a Boy Scout came to Taylor's office and asked him to buy a bond. The Judge replied that he had bought what he felt was his limit for that loan. Scoutwise, the boy persisted.

"He talked so fluently and so intelligently that I could not resist," Judge Taylor said, "so I bought one more bond than I had contemplated.

"The boy looked and was so tired I offered him a 'lift' on his way home in my automobile. When I reached my own home, I went inside and forgot the Scout.

Sold Bonds to Maid and Cook.

"After supper my wife asked me: 'Did you bring a Boy Scout home with you?'

"I told her that I had brought a Scout as far as my home and that the Scout had gone on his way to his home.

"'But he didn't,' said Mrs. Taylor. 'He went around to our back door and sold the cook, the maid, the yard man and the chauffeur a Liberty Bond.'"

There are 96 Boy Scout troops in St. Louis, and each troop has friendly rivalry for every other troop to see which will make the biggest sale in the campaign. Scout Commissioner Simmons will be assisted in directing the campaign by 132 scout masters and assistants.

The Scouts have served St. Louis in innumerable ways. They have aided every campaign for funds for a public interest. They work each Christmas season among the poor. They have aided each year in making the Post-Dispatch Christmas Festival a good time for poor children. They have appeared without pay as ushers at almost every large gathering in the Municipal Theater. When St. Louis wants something done, someone always says "Ask the Boy Scouts," and the Boy Scouts do it.

$5000 Needed for 1918 Fund.

Yet St. Louis has done little for the Boy Scouts, Scout Commissioner Simmons says. "The movement started here in 1911," he said. "I came from Chicago in 1913. There were about 400 Scouts here then. For the next two years the Scout treasury never had more than $100 in it. It became a habit with me on Friday afternoons to go out and raise enough money to pay my stenographer. Many other times I was forced to the same action to pay the rent of our headquarters.

"One day Charles Nagel came to me and said he wanted to help in the Boy Scout movement. He was made president of the Executive Council. Then Clarence H. Howard became intertested and those two men, with a handful of others, virtually carried the financial responsibility of the Boy Scouts until 1916, when it was decided to start a campaign—to ask St. Louis for the first time to help us. We asked for $16,000 as a budget for three years. We got $12,000 and stopped there. That money now is gone and Nagel and Howard now are trying to raise the $5000 that will be necessary for us to complete 1918. The Boy Scouts of St. Louis rank third in point of numbers in the United States. Chicago provides an annual budget of $50,000 for its Scouts."

How Any Woman Can Remove Hairy Growths

It is not longer necessary for a woman to visit a beauty specialist to have superfluous hairs removed, for, with the aid of a plain delatone paste, she can, in the privacy of her own home, remove even a stubborn growth in a very few minutes. 32 CHANGES IN ZONING PLAN ARE FINALLY APPROVED

City Plan Commission Accepts Proposals Made at Series of Public Hearings on Scheme.

ORDINANCE TO BE OFFERED IN MAY

Alterations Include Prohibition of Police and Fire Stations in "Second Residence" Sections.

The City Plan Commission has finally approved 32 changes in the proposed zoning or districting system, which were suggested as a result of a number of public hearings. Of the 46 requests to change restrictions in the scheme, 21 which strengthened the plan were adopted and 11 out of 25 proposals for making certain concessions were granted.

The zoning system, which is being fostered by the commission, is similar to one now effective in New York City and would divide the city into certain restricted districts, in which only buildings of a designated type would be hereafter permitted. An ordinance legalizing the proposed plan will be introduced in the Board of Aldermen next month.

Changes in Restrictions.

Among the important requests for further restricting certain sections of the city, approved by the commission, are:

1. The commercial district on Riverside drive north of the Chain of Rocks was changed to second residence.

2. No unrestricted district along the Oak Hill Railroad south of Carondelet Park to Schirmer street.

3. The entire frontage of Carondelet Park on the north and west, and a frontage on the south, was changed to first residence classification from second residence.

4. The frontage along Grand-King's highway in Carondelet was changed from Second Residence to first hesidence.

5. The west side of Broadway from Itaska to Dover was changed from commercial to second residence.

6. All that section of Carondelet west of the Iron Mountain Railroad (river branch) and north of Catalan was changed from unrestricted to industrial classification.

7. Only second residence classification on King's highway south of Arsenal street.

8. All that section west of Gravois and south of Loughborough changed from unrestricted to industrial.

9. Certain frontage on Christy park was changed from second residence to first residence.

10. The frontage on Bent avenue between Arsenal street and Utah place was changed from commercial to second residence.

11. The block bounded by Vandeventer avenue, Shaw avenue and King's highway, west of Shaw's Garden, was changed from unrestricted to industrial.

12. That section west of McCausland avenue to the city limits, between Dale avenue and Bruno avenue, was changed from second residence to first residence.

13. Oakland avenue between Billon avenue and Skinker road, fronting on the south side of Forest Park, was changed from second residence to first residence.

14. The south side of Natural Bridge avenue from Vandeventer to Fair avenue was changed from commercial to first residence, being the frontage on Fairground.

15. Police and fire department stations may be erected in Commercial districts only, and not in second residence districts.

Explanation of Classifications.

As is known, the term "first residence district," mentioned in the charges, means a district where only family residences may be built; "second residence districts" are those where residences, apartments and hotels are permitted; "commercial" where structures, such as neighborhood stores, may be built; "industrial," where industrial plants, such as factories, are permitted, and "unrestricted districts," where buildings of all types are permitted.

Relaxation of restrictions in the proposed scheme granted by the commission are:

1. Grain elevators and gas tanks are exempted from height limitations.

2. St. Louis avenue from Grand avenue to Prairie avenue was changed from "second residence" to "commercial."

3. The block bounded by Broadway, Taylor avenue, Algernon and Carrie avenues, at the northeast corner of O'Fallon Park, changed from "second residence" to "unrestricted."

4. The west side of Taylor avenue between Maryland avenue and McPherson avenue was changed from "first residence" to "second residence."

5. The east side of King's highway from Lindell boulevard to Berlin avenue was changed from "first residence" to "second residence."

Requests for relaxation of restrictions, which were not granted, follow:

1. For light manufacturing in commercial districts.

2. Certain unrestricted height levels in unrestricted districts.

3. To change from Second Residence to Unrestricted section west of Clifton Heights and south of the Frisco Railroad.

4. Change from Second Residence to Commercial throughout, Blair avenue.

C. E. Golterman Appointed.

The commission withheld approval from the change from second residence to commercial, on King's highway, between Easton and Natural Bridge avenues, following a protest presented at yesterday's meeting by the Rev. W. G. Johnston, pastor of the Hammett Place Christian Church. Dr. Johnston protested against the proposed change because his congregation is erecting a $40,000 church at King's highway and Labadie avenue, within the area. He said if commercial buildings were permitted, the property would depreciate, and residents would not be attracted to the neighborhood.

The commission announced that a public hearing on this complaint will be held at 8 p. m. next Thursday, at the Benton Public School, 2847 North King's highway.

Two other alterations in the zoning scheme adopted yesterday were the exclusion of tenement houses from blocks in the second residence districts occupied by one or two family houses exclusively, except on petition signed by owners of 50 per cent of property in that part of the block fronting on the street where the tenement is proposed, and all rooms or open spaces in which persons live, sleep, work or congregate must have windows with a net area of more than 10 per cent of the total floor area of such room or open space.

Announcement also was made that Charles E. Golterman, 7512 Virginia avenue, president of the Carondelet Business Men's Association, had been appointed a member of the commission to succeed Maj. Dwight F. Davis, who resigned when he entered the army.

SAGE TEA KEEPS YOUR HAIR DARK

When Mixed With Sulphur It Brings Back Its Beautiful Luster at Once.

Gray hair, however handsome, denotes advancing age. We all know the advantages of a youthful appearance. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray and looks streaked, just a few applications of Sage Tea and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundred-fold.

Don't stay gray! Look young! Either prepare the recipe at home or get from any drug store a bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound," which is merely the old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients. Thousands of folks recommend this ready-to-use preparation, because it darkens the hair beautifully, besides, no one can possibly tell, as it darkens so naturally and evenly. You moisten a sponge or soft brush with it, drawing this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; after another application or two, its natural color is restored and it becomes thick, glossy and lustrous, and you appear years younger.

Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigation or prevention of disease.—ADV.

POWDER IN SHOES AS WELL AS GUNS

Foot=Ease to Be Added to Equipment of Hospital Corps at Fort Wayne.

Under the above heading the Detroit Free Press, among other things says: "The theory is that soldiers whose feet are in good condition can walk further and faster than soldiers who have corns and bunions incased in rawhide."

The Plattsburg Camp Manual advises men in training to shake Foot-Ease in their shoes each morning.

One war relief committee reports, of all the things sent out in their Comfort Bags or "Kits," Allen's Foot-Ease received the most praise from the soldiers and men of the navy. It is used by American, French and British troops, because it takes the Friction from the Shoe and freshens the feet. There is no foot comforter equal to Allen's Foot-Ease, the antiseptic, healing powder to be shaken into the shoes and sprinkled in the foot-bath, the standard remedy for over 25 years for hot, tired, aching, perspiring, smarting, swollen, tender feet, corns, bunions, blisters or callouses.

WATERWAY CONVENTION HERE ON MAY 14 AND 15

Nine Reasons Outlined as to Why Session Will Be Most Important.

The first annual convention of the Mississippi Valley Waterways Association will be held at the Statler Hotel, May 14 and 15, on the anniversary of the formation of the association. Calls for the convention, which were sent out from the headquarters of the association at the St. Louis Chamber of Commerce, emphasize that this is to be the most momentous gathering of river interests ever called in the valley.

The call was sent to the Governors of all states in the valley, the chambers of commerce, boards of trade, traffic bureaus, commercial clubs, merchants' exchanges, associations of commerce and all other commercial organizations, Mayors, City Councils and public officials.

As a result of the activities of the association during the last year, the United States Government is now building 24 steel barges and four steel towboats for the transportation of coal and iron ore on the Upper Mississippi. At the suggestion of the association, Secretary McAdoo recommended the incorporation of the river paragraph in the railroad legislation recently passed by Congress. Under this legislation Congress has authorized the President to build boats, barges and tugs and to operate barge lines on the inland waterways of the United States.

It is because of the fact that the Mississippi Valley must get the full benefit of this legislation recently passed by Congress that the convention takes on great importance. Under this same legislation the Government last week took over the Erie Canal and will operate it just the same as they are operating the railroads.

These nine reasons for immediate consideration of a river transportation plan to be submitted to the Government are set forth in the call: Congestion can be relieved, railway equipment transferred, business of valley will grow faster than railways, railroads can deliver tonnage to river points, river equipment cheaper than railway equipment, railroads cannot get steel for equipment, boats can be built of wood and concrete, business crippled by transfer of equipment and Mississippi Valley lighting at great disadvantage.

The call emphasizes that co-ordination of railways and waterways is necessary as a war measure. James E. Smith, president of the association, says that realization of hopes for waterway transportation is near, but in order that the result may be attained it is absolutely necessary that the business interests of the valley be represented at the convention. Sidney J. Roy, Hannibal, Mo., is secretary of the organization.

SANDSTORM STOPS FUNERAL

SAN ANGELO, Tex., April 27.—Mexicans were alarmed and negroes fell upon their knees praying, when the worst sand storm in more than a decade rolled upon San Angelo Thursday afternoon, completely obscured the sun and causing electric lights to be turned on, although it was only 5 o'clock.

A funeral begun during the early stages of the storm had to be abandoned.

"WHEN YOUR KIDNEYS FEEL LIKE LUMPS OF LEAD"

When you wake up with backache and dull misery in the kidney region it generally means you have been eating too much meat, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which overworks the kidneys in their effort to filter it from the blood and they become sort of paralyzed and loggy. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog you must relieve them, removing all the waste, else you have backache, sick headache, dizzy spells; your stomach sours, tongue is coated, and when the weather is bad you have rheumatic twinges. The channels often get sore, and your night's rest is disturbed.

Either consult a good reliable physician at once or get from your pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate sluggish kidneys, also to neutralize acids so it no longer irritates, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is a life saver for regular meat eaters. It is inexpensive, cannot injure and makes a delightful, effervescent lithia-water drink.—ADV.

Every Family Should Buy Liberty Bonds

The Star-Spangled Banner

Should Be Sung Nightly in Every Home

Today in churches, theaters, at every gathering of men and women in America, the National Anthem—the Star-Spangled Banner—is sung and played. The Spirit of Patriotism, a pride in America and her institutions, a "win-the-war" spirit is universal.

It is not enough that this spirit now exists. It should be made to continue to exist—a stable groundwork of American thought—not a mere incident of the moment.

How may this be best accomplished? By each individual at some time each day—thinking thoughts—yes, repeating in oral words his devotion, his honor in, and his love for his country. This is a time for affirmative patriotism. A patriotism that is not affirmative in these times comes close to being negative. It surely is negligible.

What would you think of a lover who allowed days to elapse without voicing his sentiments to his beloved? Do you not love your country equally well? And in the Star-Spangled Banner is the grandest song of all the national airs. Sing it. Repeat its words. The words voice American thought and spirit—that, regardless of cost and sacrifice, the American flag shall waive victorious and the world be made safe for democracy. An army is composed of units. A nation is also composed of units, and these national units are called families. No army, no nation, is stronger than the strength derived from its units. How strong is the spirit of patriotism in your family, in your home? Do you sing or play there each day the Star-Spangled Banner and the many other beautiful arias which extol the grandeur of your country and would imbue you with a more lively sense of patriotic ardor? "But there is no musician at our home," somebody says. But you may have one, for the ANGELUS player-piano of today enables you to play with all the perfection of the skilled musician any patriotic or musical composition ever written.

BE PATRIOTIC. Provide yourself with a player-piano, if you cannot play by hand, but let the Star-Spangled Banner and the other grand arias of your country resound in your home.

The Government wisely expends large sums of money for bands and music for the army spirit. In like manner you should provide for the Home—the national unit—with music so that the spirit of Patriotism may be a living, breathing spirit in the home.

We will gladly furnish, gratis, to any one calling a song book containing the words and music of all our national airs.

PRIME CATTLE ARE FIRM IN TRADING HERE

Good Beeves Score Record of $17.10 During the Week's Dealings; Hogs Irregular.

Reported for the Post-Dispatch by the National Livestock Commission Co., National Stockyards, Ill.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last week.	Week before.	Last year.
Cattle	20,000	24,300	11,000
Hogs	55,800	60,000	62,000
Sheep	2,500	2,900	3,500

There was considerable readjustment in the cattle trade last week. Choice to prime beeves, which continue scarce, found a relatively good demand, and sold 15c to 25c higher for the week, with a new high record for the year of $17.50 per cwt.

The proportion of light and medium weight cattle, particularly those not finished, continues larger than other varieties and declining prices followed. Those weighing 100 to 1200 lbs sold 15c to 25c lower, while lighter varieties broke 25c to 40c lower.

Strictly choice light weight yearling butcher cattle reacted 25c to 50c per cwt, but the general run of butcher cattle is selling at par. The market on stockers and feeders was active and firm.

Prime to fancy steers are quoted at $16.50@17.25; choice to prime, $15.50@16.50; good to choice, $15@15.50; medium to good, $12@14; common to medium, $10.50@12; good to choice stockers and feeders, $10.75@11.75; medium to good, $10.25@10.75; common to medium, $9@10.25; good to choice stock cows, $8.50@9; good to choice stock heifers, $9@10; choice to prime light yearling butcher cattle, $13.50@15; good to choice, $12@13.50; common to medium, $9.50@12; choice to fancy heavy beef cows, $11.50@13; good to choice, $10.50@11.50; medium to good, $9.50@10.50; cutters, $9@9.50; canners, $7.25@8; good fat beef bulls, $11.50@13; heavy sausage bulls, $10.50@11.50; light, $9.50@10.50.

Yesterday's hog trade indicated a fairly even keel with prices a week ago. However, the past week found a considerable variance in values of various classes. At times fairly strong weights received good support, then again were more or less neglected. Light weight hogs received the best demand.

Hogs of Southern breeding are being discriminated against more than they have been, as a result of buyers getting quite a number of oilers lately, and they are more particular in their selections.

Yesterday's top was $17.85, and some choice hogs with weight sold as high as $17.65, but the bulk of the good hogs realized $17.40@17.75. Best grades of pigs with weight sold at $17.25, with lighter pigs $10 to $16, depending, of course, on quality and flesh, but the demand was limited.

As far as the sheep supply was concerned, the volume was hardly sufficient to create any radical tendency in the trade, but in the decline of 50c to 75c for lambs. This was due to the influence of the unusually high prices that have been in force. Sheep sold fully steady. Wool lambs, $16.50@21; clipped lambs, $16.50@17.75; fat wool sheep, $15.50@16.50; choppers, $11.50@13.50; canners, $8@10. Goats, $10@12; kids, $11@15.

Horses and Mules.

HORSES—Despite the light run there was a fair auction supply, as practically all of the arrivals at this time are consigned for that outlet. Trading was less brisk than a week ago and prices not so strong on Eastern classes and for mares.

Quote heavy draft, extra, at $195@255; Eastern chunks, $85@185; Southern horses, choice, $125@150; Southern horses, good, $90@115; Southern horses, medium, $60@85; Southern horses, common, $40@70; plugs, $25@50.

MULES—A small run, not in excess of 50 head, which was small enough to find outlet, mainly without any price reduction. Some mules have been sold from first hands the current week as high as $30, which goes to show that prices, despite sharp declines several weeks ago, are still abnormally high. Quote 16 to 16½ hands, $200@290; 15 to 15¾ hands, $150@225; 14 to 14½ hands, $90@115; 13 to 13½ hands, $80@100; 12 to 12½ hands, $80@110.

LOCAL CABBAGE MARKET WEAK UNDER EXCESSIVE OFFERINGS

Irregular price changes were recorded along the local produce row yesterday. Cabbage ruled weak under excessive offerings and a slow demand, while the market for sweet potatoes, tomatoes and lettuce was firm to higher. The apple market was very strong and buoyant, due to diminishing cold storage supplies. Strawberries were dull and lower under unfavorable weather conditions. The potato market was dull and values barely steady. Onions were lower under a slow demand.

COTTON IS $6 TO $7 A BALE LOWER IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, April 27.—One of the most rapid and severe breaks since the beginning of the current selling movement, occurred in the cotton market here today. After selling at 26.40c at the start, July contract broke to 25.00c, making a decline of 141 points from the close of Friday and of $44 per bale from the high record of April 4. That delivery closed at 25.02c with the general list closing weak at a net loss of 120 to 140 points.

There appeared to be no really fresh factor connected with the decline, but there was evidently increased apprehension of spot pressure.

This was particularly noted during the later trading when there was heavy selling here, believed to be for Southern account and probably against actual cotton. Uneasiness over the war situation and the failure of the weather map to show such low temperatures as expected, were probably contributing factors which led to liquidation by some of yesterday's buyers.

The market opened easy at an advance of 5 points on May, but generally 21 to 31 points lower, and broke over a cent a pound within the first few minutes. Houses with Wall Street and Liverpool connections were heavy sellers, while the covering movement of the previous morning seemed to have left comparatively little demand around the ring. There was some buying at the decline, however, which led to rallies of a few points, July selling up from 25.20c to 25.65c toward the middle of the morning.

On this bulge offerings increased and all deliveries made new low ground in the late trading with May selling at 25.32c and October at 25.25c, or 128 to 155 points net lower.

SUNDAY POST-DISPATCH'S REVIEW OF MARKET CONDITIONS

UNCERTAIN FOREIGN NEWS CAUSES IRREGULARITY IN NEW YORK STOCK MARKET

Early Week's Prices Are Firm, but Losses Are the Rule at the Close.

CURB VALUES MIXED

Broad Street Trading Is Influenced by Movements on Stock Exchange.

By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The Evening Post, in its copyrighted weekly financial review, says:

"The actual results, next week, of what has now come to be popularly known as the 'whirlwind finish' of the war loan campaign, will be exceptionally interesting. This is not because of doubt as to whether the $3,000,000,000 minimum subscription will be covered; that may be taken as a matter of course. The points which everyone will watch are bound to be, first the amount of oversubscription, but, second, the source of it.

"Three considerations have from the first presented elements of doubt. Could the agricultural West, which was only faintly heard from in the first and second loans, be relied on for a genuine response this time? Would the great corporations match their subscriptions of last October, when they are now confronted with the exceedingly large payments of next June, on the excess profits taxes? Finally, how much of the total subscription would be met by the turning in of short-term Government obligations, bought by them from the Government in recent weeks?

West the Big Buyer.

"The first question has been answered. Thus far, the response of the lately seemingly apathetic agricultural West has been magnificent. It is in that part of the country that allotted 'quotas' have been first exceeded. The comparison of actual subscriptions with the amount subscribed in the first two weeks of the second Liberty Loan campaign, read almost as if a wholly new and unsuspected source of wealth had been discovered.

"Jay Cooke may have had a similar sensation, when his army of book agents and lightning-rod men, set loose in the farming country in 1862, came back from the road, to report results.

"We have still to learn how far this large response represents the rapid capture of all available subscriptions, and how far it merely started the pace for the final week. What the large corporations will do before the lists are closed, is necessarily uncertain; with many of them, it is a question, not of willingness, but of amount of actual cash on hand after providing for the taxes.

"The banks, it has been known from the start, were abundantly able to insure success to their own account. But it has been the strong desire on the part of every one familiar with the money market situation, that as small a share as possible should be obtained in that way.

Since the Government must soon apply to the banks for short-term obligations, it is a highly important objective point to pay off existing short loans in cash, and leave the banks in the best condition for future financial needs. This can be done, if next week's final response of individual subscribers is what it ought to be.

Position of the Banks.

"This week's report of the American Economic Association's Committee on the cost of the war, gives proper emphasis to the desirability of avoiding, so far as possible, the financing of the war loan subscriptions through expansion of bank loans, and it properly argues for the restriction of credit expansion at the banks by all practical means. But it goes pretty far in arguing that expansion of bank loans and deposits for such purposes tends under conditions like those present today, to raise commodity prices.

"This, at least, has become a familiar fallacy. The economic fact about the matter is that commodity prices are raised by bank loans when such loans, being made to merchants and producers, make possible a larger demand and a stiffer market than would have prevailed without them.

"But borrowing to finance war-loan subscriptions does not increase demand for goods; because what the Government buys, it would have bought in any case—through the proceeds of taxation or temporary loans, if not through funded war loans. Demands on the market for goods, and therefore prices of goods, are not increased by the process. If anything, they would be decreased, since the more the bank loans are directed ultimately to purchasers by Government, the less will be the available credit fund left for private business. The legitimate objections to extensive and continuous borrowing to finance a war loan, rests on very different grounds from that assigned.

War News a Factor.

"That the news of the German successes on the high ground towards Ypres has caused some feeling of discouragement, and doubtless prepared the way for another anxious Sunday, was recognized today in the financial markets, as elsewhere. It could not be said, however, that the community was taken unprepared; news of the two or three preceeding days had given sufficient indication of the nature of this renewed German offensive.

"Despite these reverses, the people and the markets today continued to pin their confidence on the stubborn and effective resistance which the English troops have shown at the crisis of each preceding attack in force, and on confidence in the strategy of the French commander in chief.

"Irregular losses of 1 to 4 points marked trading for the week. Yesterday's market was quiet."

Curb Review.

NEW YORK, April 27.—The tone of the market on the Broad street curb during the past week was extremely variable, with trading coming close to a condition of stagnation for several days, but in the last two days of the week, the market became active and strong, with some stocks selling at the highest prices reached in a long period.

A feature of the trading was a decline in Russian 5½s to 32, but that sale was not recorded, the lowest published transactions going at 34 to 33.

Burns Bros.' Ice fluctuated over a wide range, first advancing to 29¼, and after declining to 25¾ rallied to 26⅝. Submarine was also actively traded in, yielding 12¾, and advancing to 15⅝ yesterday, following the report of the visit of Charles M. Schwab to the company's shipbuilding plant at Newark.

Wright-Martin also developed strength after early weakness, and ranged from 8¼ to 8¾; Aetna Explosives ranged from 8¼ to 8⅝.

The motor stocks were directly influenced by the reports of further contraction of output, with Chevrolet dropping from 126 to 120, and United Motor falling from 26¼ to 25.

Independent oil stocks were irregular, Houston Oil showing strength and ranging from 41 to 43, while Merritt dropped from 19¾ to 18⅛, and Midwest Refining sold down from 107⅛ to 106⅛.

Mining stocks were generally steady, with Yukon Gold selling at 1 to 1⅛; St. Joseph Lead at 15¼ to 15; Magma at 38 to 35; and Kerr Lake at 5½ to 5¾.

Mother Lode was in persistent demand, advancing from 42 to 50 cents in anticipation of the coming announcement of terms of absorption by the Kennecott Copper Co.

A new feature of the trading was sales in Freeport Texas Sulphur on Thursday at 33¾ to 29¾.

Special Cable to the Post-Dispatch and New York Evening Post.

LONDON, April 27.—"The simple fact of financial London's view of the war is that the situation is still too critical to admit of cheefulness. The better description would be that an undertone of quiet and sober confidence exists, with determination quite unanimous to make any sacrifices which will insure victory.

"The value of your financial assistance and moral support was never more heartily recognized. But it is also believed that a considerable time must elapse before your military, naval and aircraft co-operation can make itself strongly felt. This necessarily foreshadows great strain in the next few months, on the enduring powers of the allies.

"On the military campaign itself it is impossible to comment directly here. There has still been some tendency towards the clogging of full military effectiveness by political intervention, but in that respect the situation is improving.

"The budget of new taxation is warmly approved in the city, despite the very heavy burden imposed by the 30 per cent income tax. The only weak spots seem to be the tax on bank checks and the deferment of tax on luxuries. Criticism on the check tax is based on the fact that it must tend to expand the use and issue of currency notes by the Treasury, at a time when issue of paper currency ought to be economized by the freer use of checks.

The New War Budget.

"Government expenditure budgeted for the new fiscal year will be practically £3,000,000,000 sterling, or more than three times what it was before the war. If the increased revenue reaches £900,000,000 sterling, as it is not unlikely to do, the proportion of expenditure paid from taxes will be, roughly, 30 per cent, and the proportion raised from loans 70 per cent.

"On the basis of the past fiscal year's results, direct taxation bore 71½ per cent of all the imposts; indirect taxation 28½ per cent. Taken as a whole, our financial balance sheet for the war is very strong.

"We have already raised more than £1,000,000,000 sterling from new taxation since the war began, as against £365,000,000 sterling raised by Germany. The German debt is now £8,000,000,000 sterling, and the deficit in the German balance sheet, unprovided for by taxation or funded loans, is about £350,000,000 sterling; whereas our own budget would show a substantial surplus, with the possibility of remission of taxation on return of peace.

"Nevertheless, this very fact of Germany's desperate position is bound to intensify her struggle to avoid defeat, or even an inconclusive peace. This is what adds to the critical character of the situation during the next few months. It is a consideration which cannot be overestimated."

DETAILED REPORT OF DAY'S TRADING IN WALL STREET

NEW YORK, April 27.—Investment stocks as well as various speculative issues, suffered extreme recessions of 1 to 2 points in the course of today's brief session. The unfavorable tenor of foreign advices provoked further moderate liquidation and short selling.

High-grade rails, shipping, standard industrials and the several war groups were equally sensitive to pressure, which relaxed toward the end, leading stocks making up half their losses. The closing was heavy. Sales approximated 200,000 shares.

Liberty 3½s sold at 99.22 to 99.30 first 4s at 96.62 to 96.72 and second 4s at 96.64 to 96.80.

German Mark Is Lower in Neutral Countries.

WASHINGTON, April 26.—The German offensive has had a depressing effect on the value of the mark in neutral countries. An official dispatch from France today says that in Holland and Switzerland the mark, after having been slightly higher, has fallen and has reached a point below that which it held at the beginning of the offensive.

4-CENT BREAK FEATURES CORN MARKET HERE

Selling Is Induced by Food Administration's Rule on Hedging.

Violent selling swept the corn market down 4 cents on the Merchants' Exchange yesterday, following an advance of nearly 10 cents in the past 10 days. There was little if any support to the market at any time during the session and closing prices were at the low level of the day.

Trade not only was influenced by good weather and exportations of a continued liberal run of receipts, but also by weakness in the cotton and New York stock markets, based on less favorable war news.

The prime factor in the late decline, however, came just before the close, in the nature of a telegram from J. J. Stream of the Food Administration, which traders feared would force selling of all cash grains and operate bearishly in hedging sales. The telegram said:

"The food control law and the rules and regulations relating thereto prohibit the hoarding or holding of foodstuffs for speculative or price enhancing purposes. Grain held against which an equal amount of futures is sold as a hedge or for actual delivery on a grain exchange is not considered as being in violation of said law. However, the buying in or taking back the futures for the purpose or reselling again on an advance in market would make the holding or such grain unlawful. Violations as described should be reported to this department. The posting of nominal prices or quotations on cereals or foodstuffs non-existent can serve no food purpose, and we would therefore kindly request such practice be discontinued."

Oats declined violently, and at the close showed losses of about 3c. The market not only was influenced by the action of corn, but also reflected perfect crop weather and a continuation of the largest movement to market on the crop.

While Stream's message was used as a pretext to depress grain values, it is probable that the decline was more of a natural adjustment in values after a period of unheard-of inflation, as corn and oats have mounted 200 to 300 per cent since the war started, and recent high levels have been maintained despite record-breaking holdings on the farms, perfect weather for oats on a record-breaking acreage, and indications that corn acreage will, despite the recent wet weather, compare favorably with the large area of last year.

Cotton has declined over $40 a bale from the recent high levels; potatoes and other farm products have experienced an adjustment in values, and corn and oats were hovering around the top levels, with the speculative trade all long and waiting for an advance to unload on. The advance failed to come, and the action of yesterday's market indicated clearly that many bulls were becoming discouraged over the outlook and were liquidating their lines.

CHICAGO CORN DECLINES ON NEW HEDGING RULE

CHICAGO, April 27.—Official notice that speculating in the "hedges" would be considered a violation of the antihoarding law, gave a severe jolt today to bullish sentiment on change. Largely as a result, corn prices underwent a decided setback and closed heavy, ⅛c to 4¾c net lower, with May $1.27⅝ and July $1.48⅜ to $1.48⅝. Oats lost 1⅛c to 3⅜c net. Provisions finished unchanged to ⅜c down.

Word from the Food Administration that the antihoarding law applied more strictly to some varieties of "hedging" than many traders seemed to be aware of, came at a time when the corn market was naturally sensitive to news likely to bring about a reaction from recent sharp advances due to talk of decreased acreage.

The bears had an advantage also from sympathy with declines in cotton and stocks. Under such circumstances liquidation was general, and the fall of prices was almost a vertical one from start to finish. Even an explicit announcement that the embargo on eastbound shipments of grain would take effect May 1, failed to act as an offset.

Oats gave way with corn. Depression resulted, too, from absence of export demand.

HOLLAND SAID TO HAVE GRANTED 2 GERMAN DEMANDS

STILL DEADLOCKED ON SAND AND GRAVEL

Feeling in Hague That German Military Has Its Eyes on the Dutch North Sea Ports.

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Dispatches from Holland this afternoon say that although, according to The Hague Vaderland, the questions of customs difficulties, of which Germany had complained, and the use of the Limburg Railway, which Germany demanded, have been settled in her favor, Germany still maintains her ground on the sand and gravel question.

Germany has expressed much annoyance at the stoppage by Holland of Rhine traffic and the fact that Holland negotiated with the United States regarding the cession of Dutch ships before their seizure and concealed these negotiations from Germany.

As a result, says a dispatch from The Hague to the Amsterdam Telegraf, the feeling there has never been more depressed. There is an impression in some quarters in Holland that so long as Von Kuehlmann remains German Foreign Secretary, Holland will not be pressed to the extreme. But this view is not held by others, who dispute it, on the ground that while Von Kuehlmann and his party are sincere, they have little influence in the conduct of German affairs, the real rulers being the military party, which has its eyes on the Dutch North Sea ports.

Referring to the tension between Holland and Germany, the Rotterdam correspondent of the Telegraph says he understands that the Dutch Government already has taken preliminary steps to bring into force certain military measures.

German papers reaching Holland are lecturing the Dutch regarding the risks they are running. The Taegliche Rundschau of Berlin warns them against Holland becoming a second Belgium, that is to say, a place from which Great Britain may attack Germany. The possibility of such a development cannot, it says, be disregarded and warns the Dutch in their own interest to seek cover.

The clerical Germania says the German demands on Holland are intended to restore the balance of that country which lately has shown itself "too conciliatory toward the Entente." Capt. von Salzmann, military critic of the Vossiche Zeitung, says Holland is not yet placed before a final decision and by conscientious neutrality can still keep outside of the war, but she must understand that an end will come some day to German patience which has already been tried to the uttermost.

The Hague correspondent of the Times reports that Holland has given way to the German demand for use of the railway across the Province of Limburg, stipulating, however, that no military traffic must pass. Another demand of an embarrassing nature connected with shipping facilities has been made by Germany.

Situation Slightly Improved, Says Hague Paper.

AMSTERDAM, April 27 (By A. P.).—According to The Hague Vaderland, the prospect of an agreement between Holland and Germany has slightly improved since yesterday. While it has been agreed to reopen the Limbourg Railway, there is still a difference regarding the nature and extent of the transport over the road and by waterways.

The Telegraaf, under the heading: "If it must be," recalls the German attack on Belgium, and says:

"If Holland now is to be placed at the same cross roads as Belgium, then the Government may be certain that the nation will rally around it in the hour of danger. Everyone will ardently hope that this cup may be

PRUSSIAN LORDS ORDER PROSECUTION OF LICHNOWSKY

Ambassador Whose Memorandum Proves Germany Guilty of War to Be Proceeded Against Criminally.

AMSTERDAM, April 27 (By A. P.).—The Prussian upper house, according to a dispatch received here from Berlin today, has decided to grant the request of the First State Attorney of District Court No. 1 of Berlin for authorization to undertake criminal proceedings against Prince Lichnowsky, German Ambassador at London when the war broke out. The Prince is to be prosecuted for the publication of his disclosures of Austro-German responsibility for the war.

The State Attorney considered the fact that Prince Lichnowsky communicated to third parties documents or their contents officially intrusted to him by his superior infringed the secrecy incumbent upon him.

The Prince's solicitor supported the request of the State Attorney, saying that Lichnowsky had a great interest in the facts being impartially cleared up, as they often had been distorted.

The Prince has been under surveillance ever since the fragmentary publication of his memorandum was begun by a Stockholm Socialist paper that came into possession of it surreptitiously.

KERMIT ROOSEVELT NOW A CAPTAIN IN U. S. ARMY

Relinquishes Commission in British Force Where He Had Been Serving in Mesopotamia.

WASHINGTON, April 27 (Special.).—A list of reserve officers recently commissioned, issued by the Adjutant-General today, has the name of Capt. Kermit Roosevelt. He had been serving on the staff of the British commander in Mesopotamia, and held a commission in the British army.

As a Captain of field artillery he will find things much more lively in France than in Mesopotamia. His brothers, Theodore Jr., Archie and Quentin Roosevelt are with the Amercan Expeditionary Force. Theodore Jr. is a Major, Archie a Captain, and at last accounts Quentin was a cadet flier, but probably has since received his commission as a Lieutenant.

It is assumed here that Kermit sought and obtained his release from the British army that he might get into the active fighting in France.

2 P. M. BANK CLOSING PROPOSED

The Clearing House Association is planning to meet at an early date to consider a proposition to close the banks and trust companies of St. Louis at 2 p. m. each day, instead of 3. These hours would coincide with those observed in New York.

One reason for the change would be that the new closing hour would make it possible to put the daily mail of the banks on early afternoon trains for the South and Southwest. Another consideration is that the large volume of business makes it necessary for clerks to work overtime.

Liberty Day Subscriptions Reported to National Headquarters Amount to $146,000,000.

6 DAYS MORE OF THIRD DRIVE REMAIN

Daily Sales of $117,000,000 Necessary to Reach Minimum of $3,000,000,000 Hoped for by Treasury.

WASHINGTON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Nineteen days of Liberty Loan campaigning closed tonight with the Government assured of $2,178,877,050, or 70 per cent of the $3,000,000,000 minimum requirement. Six working days remain in which to develop a $5,000,000,000 total from 20,000,000 subscribers—the record for which the Treasury hopes.

Liberty day subscriptions reported to headquarters today totaled $146,000,000, but there were indications that many millions were received in pledges unsupported by initial payments, and therefore for included in the official tabulations. Regardless of this condition, officials appeared disappointed in the day's work.

To reach the $3,000,000,000 mark by next Saturday night, when the campaign closes it will be necessary tomaintain a daily average of $117,000,000, and to reach $5,000,000,000, $445,000,000 a day is required. These figures do not provide for the great inflow of pledges expected on the final day.

Three Districts Oversubscribed.

Three districts, St. Louis, Minneapoolis and Kansas City, now have oversubscribed.

District reports show the following subscriptions and quota percentages:

District.	Subscription.	Pct.
Minneapolis	$125,012,300	119
St. Louis	143,858,650	110
Kansas City	130,338,200	100
Chicago	352,330,300	82
San Francisco	164,815,450	78
Dallas	61,871,650	77
Boston	183,918,150	73
Philadelphia	174,068,000	69
Cleveland	200,864,950	66
New York	583,742,700	59
Richmond	71,805,250	55
Atlanta	31,251,450	34

The Chicago district today broke its tie with San Francisco for fourth place by going up eight per cent, while San Francisco increased only four per cent. San Francisco district managers today reported that every state in the district, with the possible exception of Arizona, had over-subscribed.

Many Honor Flags Awarded.

More than 7000 honor flags have been awarded throughout the country, and headquarters believe that by the end of next week all of the 30,000 flags which have been ordered from manufacturers will have been won by various communities. Flag awards by districts to date are: Chicago, 2646; Cleveland, 993; Boston, 710; San Francisco, 764; New York, 625; St. Louis, 309, and Atlanta 224. The low standing of St. Louis is explained by the fact that awards in that district are being made by counties only.

Secretary McAdoo decided today to close his Liberty Loan speaking campaign in Rochester, N. Y., next Wednesday. He will reach Chicago tomorrow; Grand Rapids, Mich., Monday; Buffalo, Tuesday, and Rochester, Wednesday. It had been his intention to speak in other cities up to the close of the campaign, but pressure of public business changed his decision. He will come to Washington from Rochester.

$37,000,000 by Rail Employes.

An official report from Chicago tonight said that railway employes in the Western territory had subscribed $37,351,670. Vermont and Mississippi were among the states which went over their quotas today and were among the first states in their respective districts to achieve their quotas.

The navy today swept on toward the $8,000,000 subscription mark.

U. S. AGENTS HOLD WOMAN ALIEN AS A SPY SUSPECT

Mme. Marie de Victorica Believed by Federal Officials to Be One of Kaiser's Most Active Agents Here.

ARREST MADE AT FASHIONABLE HOTEL

Brought to New York From Long Island, She Is Sent to Hospital in Highly Nervous Condition.

NEW YORK, April 27 (By A. P.).—Mme. Marie K. de Victorica, believed by officers of the Department of Justice to be one of the most active of Germany's agents in this country for the last 15 months, was arrested at a fashionable Long Island hotel today and brought to this city as a dangerous enemy alien.

Mme. de Victorica, who stopped at various fashionable hotels in this city, is said to have been acquainted with Mme. Charlotte Elizabeth Nix, who is awaiting deportation because of her alleged pro-German activities, and with Mme. Despina Davidovitch Storch, the young Turkish woman who, arrested with Mme. Nix, died later at Ellis Island. Mme. de Victorica, while being questioned, is quoted as describing Mme. Nix as a personal friend of the Kaiser.

It is said that a room was secured in Brooklyn for Margaret Sullivan, Mme. Victorica's maid, who, although never occupying it, called there at regular intervals for mail. A recent letter, addressed to the maid, is said to have contained an enclosure from Berlin for her mistress.

Is Send to Hospital.

Mme. de Victorica was in a highly nervous condition, and was sent to the prison ward at Bellevue Hospital. Her maid was held as a material witness.

Mme. de Victorica, who also has been known as Mme. de Vussiere, is said to have come to the United States through Norway, Jan. 21, 1917, as a passenger on the steamship Bergunsfjord.

Mme. de Victorica, who is 33 years old, is a handsome woman of the German type.

Her first husband is said to have been a Chilean who died soon after their marriage. In 1914 she married Jose de Victorica at Hamburg, Germany. She described De Victorica as "a doctor in chemistry and philosophy." Her husband remained with her only three or four months, she declared, and then disappeared. She explained her presence in this country by saying she came here to look for him.

Federal authorities believe her real mission in the United States was to spread German propaganda among the Irish. She is reported to have been the chief aid to a Lieutenant-Commander of the German navy, who reached here in December, 1916, and who has been working among Sinn Fein sympathizers. The German naval officer disappeared a few days ago, when he discovered that agents of the Department of Justice were trailing him.

Mme. de Victorica, a Government agent said, is known to have received money from this man and is reported to have spent $40,000 since she arrived in the United States.

MAN ACCUSED OF DISLOYALTY

Two 12-year-old girls soliciting subscriptions for Liberty Bonds yesterday afternoon caused the arrest of James S. Hudson, 60 years old, of 3732 Washington boulevard, for alleged disloyal statements.

The girls—Marie White of 1245A Euclid avenue and Hannah Weil of 928 North King's highway—reported that when they asked Hudson at Euclid and Maple avenues to buy a bond, he answered: "Do you know how to read and write and talk the German language, Pig Tails?" They said he also declared he was "like the Germans, would not go in debt like the Americans, and that all Americans would be better off if they were more like the Germans." He denied to the police making disloyal remarks.

TWO POLICEMEN CHARGED WITH FREIGHT THEFTS

SHIPMENT VALUED AT $1500 RECOVERED

Men Are Locked Up When They Fail to Give Bonds of $10,000 Each — Both Deny the Charges.

Patrolmen Robert Wetzel of 2812 North Fourteenth street and Joseph F. Fleck Jr. of 2510 Sullivan avenue, both assigned to beats in the vicinity of the railroad yards in the North Market Street Police District, were arrested yesterday afternoon on warrants issued by the Federal authorities charging them with stealing from interstate freight shipments.

The arrests followed statements made to special officers of the Terminal Railroad Association and police officials by John H. Vaughn of 2830 North Jefferson avenue, and Charles Murphy, a laborer, of 3507 North Eleventh street, who were arrested last Thursday charged with stealing 50 cases of whisky valued at about $1500.

Vaughn, who is the owner of a wagon and team, said he had been hired by Wetzel and Fleck, to haul the whisky from the railroad yards to a saloon at 201 Dock street, where it was recovered by railroad watchmen. The other man corroborated his statements.

The teamster declared that when he drove to the railroad yards and the stolen whisky was taken from a freight car he and Murphy were accompanied by the two policemen, one in uniform and the other in plain clothes. As they were driving from the freight yard with their loot, he said, a watchman attempted to stop them, but was waved aside by the policeman in uniform, who told the watchman everything was "all right."

After their arrests the policemen were taken to the North Market Street Station, where they were told to send for plain clothes and remove their uniforms. Later they were transferred to police headquarters, where they were locked up when they failed to give bonds of $10,000 each set by United States Commissioner Atkins.

Wetzel and Fleck walk adjoining beats in the freight house district. The former has been a member of the Police Department 10 years and is a brother of Detective-Sergeant Albert Wetzel. Fleck has been on the police force four years. Both deny the charges made against them by Vaughn and Murphy.

SERIOUS RIOTING BREAKS OUT IN PETROGRAD SAYS COPENHAGEN DISPATCH

Unconfirmed Rumors of Street Fighting in Capital and Naming of the New Czar Come From Finland.

COPENHAGEN, April 27 (By A. P.).—The Stockholm Aftonbladet says that definite reports have been received from Abo, Finland, that Grand Duke Alexis Nokolaievitch, son of the former Emperor of Russia, has been proclaimed Emperor, with Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch as Regent.

When Emperor Nicholas abdicated the Russian throne at midnight, March 15, 1917, he also renounced succession to the crown of his son, Grand Duke Alexis, in favor of Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch. The next afternoon Grand Duke Michael himself abdicated, thus bringing the Romanoff dynasty to an end.

Where the proclamation referred to in the foregoing report was issued is not apparent from the Copenhagen dispatch.

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—A dispatch from Copenhagen to the Exchange Telegraph says it is reported there that a counter revolution has broken out in Petrograd. It reports that, while no telegrams have been received from Petrograd for several days, there are rumors from Finland that there is serious rioting at the capital and that the rumor is persistent that Grand Duke Alexis Nikolaievitch has been proclaimed Emperor and that Grand Duke Michael Alexandrovitch is the real leader in Russian affairs.

Move of Germany to Restore Monarchy, Washington Thinks.

WASHINGTON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Reports from Copenhagen of persistent rumors from Finland that Grand Duke Alexis Nikolaievitch, son of the former Czar of Russia, has been proclaimed Emperor of Russia, were taken here to indicate that Germany was attempting to carry through a well formulated plan for restoring a monarchy in that revolution-torn country.

While no reports of a new revolt in Petrograd have been received at the State Department from Ambassador Francis at Vologda, news of an uprising would not come as a surprise. It long has been believed here that Germany's real purpose was to restore the monarchy, supported by German influence, money and intrigue.

The removal of the Bolsheviki Government from the capital to Moscow is believed to have paved the way for the carrying out of the German plan. Reports have been received here that German soldiers formerly prisoners in Russia have been overrunning the capital and have made of it a German center.

In order to meet with any measure of success, attempts to restore the monarchy, it was said, would have to be made through an internal uprising that would have the semblance of a genuine revolt of the Russian people against existing conditions. Shortages of all necessities, particularly in the larger cities, have caused great dissatisfaction among the Russian people and for that reason it is felt that a revolt, even though it had for its purpose the restoration of the monarchy, might have strong support.

RHONDDA'S COLLAPSE DUE TO OVERDOING RATION REGIMEN

British Food Controller Sinks From Portly to Thin Under Practice of Own Theories.

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Baron Rhondda, British food controller, who, on Thursday, tendered his resignation, which has not been accepted by Premier Lloyd George, is perhaps an example of over-devotion in practice of his own theories. He has been confined to bed for several weeks.

Baron Rhondda, from a very portly person, became in a short time extremely thin. He had boasted that he was able to maintain his health on a far smaller ration than he was imposing upon the public. His temporary physical collapse seems to show that he overdid the short ration regimen.

UNDER TRUCE FLAG OUR BOYS LET FOE BURY THEIR DEAD

Germans Took Shot at American Who First Raised Emblem—Later They Respect It.

By JOSEPH W. GRIGG,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN THE FIELD, April 27. Americans troops showed the Germans on Wednesday that they could conduct a war just as cleanly as they showed them on several occasions lately that they can fight as fiercely as anybody.

It was decided to give the enemy an opportunity to bury some of his dead in No Man's Land and to send out burial parties of our own to search for any of our men who had paid the supreme sacrifice. At a certain part of the front-line trenches before Seicheprey a Red Cross flag was hoisted late in the afternoon and a few seconds later an American soldier who raised it popped his head over the trench top only to be immediately shot at by the enemy. He was prepared, for our men have had ample opportunity to see that the Geneva conventions do not bnd the Germans to any rules.

There was a considerable pause before the Red Cross flag was again raised. It floated over a trench top for 10 minutes before an American observer once more gingerly put up his head. This time he saw a Red Cross flag floating from the enemy trench, and at once the Germans sent a burial party into No Man's Land.

Sixteen Germans were soon burying their dead, and from the American side a small patrol entered the shell-torn stretch between the opposing lines. No shots were fired from either side in this immediate part of the line until both patrols had finished their mission. Real war began in earnest again later.

TO LIST SEICHEPREY PRISONERS

AMSTERDAM, April 27 (By A. P.).—A Berlin dispatch says that the names of the 183 Americans whom the Germans report they captured in the recent battle at Seicheprey, in the Mihiel sector, will be published in the Gazette des Ardennes, a German propaganda organ published in French.

This will be done, the dispatch says, because doubts have been expressed outside of Germany that prisoners in such number were taken.

CASUALTIES STOP ATTACK OF TEUTONS

Gen. Von Arnim Threw Forward 120,000 Men on Front of 10,000 Yards in Kemmel Region Friday and Suffered Excessive Losses at Many Points.

TROOPS ARE BROUGHT FROM VERDUN FRONT

About 900 Prisoners Have Been Taken in Counter Attacks — Only Minor Engagements and Artillery Activity Yesterday.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 27 (By A. P.).—An intense bombardment of the Allied positions in the Kemmel sector has been continued by the German gunners, but up to noon today the enemy had made no further attacks in this region. Gen. von Arnim was busy consolidating the positions won yesterday and reorganizing his forces for a new drive against the other hills held by the Allies west of Kemmel.

The German commander will have to bring up fresh troops for further operations, for the casualties suffered by the enemy yesterday were exceedingly heavy. Proof of this was given by the distressing sight on the battlefield over which the contending armies struggled. During yesterday's attacks by the enemy one British brigade inflicted four times as many losses as they themselves suffered.

The proportion might not hold good for the whole sector, but certainly the German losses were excessive at many points. At Locre, which the French recaptured last night and where the fighting raged most of the day, the number of German dead was very large.

Gen. von Arnim employed about 10 divisions in yesterday's assaults, five of which were fresh troops. This meant that on a front of about 10,000 yards between Dranoutre and the Ypres-Comines Canal the allies had a total of 120,000 troops against them. One of the new German divisions arrived at Kemmel from Verdun April 24.

The French in last night's operations not only drove the Germans from Locre, but took Hospice and Locrehof Farm, both strong points lying to the southeast of the village. Locre was one of the most hotly contested points along the front.

The allied attack south of Villers-Bretonneux yesterday gave rise to very heavy fighting. Some progress was made toward reclaiming this position which the enemy held as a result of the German push on Wednesday. The enemy, in a counter attack, threw themselves against one French division seven times without being able to get forward.

The British today had nearly 900 German prisoners in the cages as a result of other counter operations, which began Wednesday night. The British yesterday also took several hundred in the fighting north of Kemmel.

GERMANS GAIN AT ONE POINT AND FAIL AT ANOTHER

Only Minor Infantry Fighting and Artillery Activity on British Front Yesterday.

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Field Marshal Haig's report from headquarters in France tonight says:

"During the night the enemy attacked one of our posts in the neighborhood of Festubert and succeeded in capturing it. Another local attack against our positions west of Merville was broken up by our machine gun and rifle fire and failed to reach our trenches.

"Except for minor engagements in the battle sectors and artillery activity on both sides, the day passed comparatively quiet on the British front. Bodies of hostile infantry assembling east of Villers-Bretonneux were effectively shelled by our batteries."

An official statement on aerial operations tonight says:

"Except for low reconnoissances on the battle front Friday, little flying was possible owing to the thick mist. Two low flying German airplanes were brought down by our infantry. None of our machines is missing."

Berlin Tells of Vain Allied Attacks to Regain Mont Kemmel.

BERLIN, via London, April 27 (By A. P.).—The official communication from general headquarters on the operations against the French and British says:

"To the north of Wytschaete we advanced as far as the southern border of Voormebeele. French and British divisions vainly attempted to wrest Mont Kemmel away from us. Their attacks, delivered in the morning, on a front from Dickebusch to Locre, and during the evening from the region of Locre as far as west of Dranoutre, broke down under our fire, with heavy losses.

"Where the enemy reached our lines he was defeated in hand-to-hand fighting. Northwest of Merville, on the southern bank of the Lys, and near Givenchy, enemy advances failed. Between the Scarpe and the Somme enemy reconnoitering engagements also failed.

"South of the Somme the French bled themselves to death in repeated assaults, as well as south of Villers-Bretonneux. After the failure of strong attacks in the early morning at the northern end of Hangard Wood, the enemy in the afternoon again gathered his forces, consisting chiefly of Moroccans, for renewed advances against Hangard Wood and to the north of Luce Brook. Oft-repeated attempts, which were preceded by the strongest artillery preparation, to pierce our lines failed.

"On their own initiative our infantry detachments advanced to the attack on both sides of Luce Brook. They cleared several machine-gun nests and took a number of French prisoners."

Arabian Forces Occupy Portion of Hedjaz Railway.

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Arab forces opposing the Turks have occupied a portion of the Hedjaz railway at a point 125 miles south east of the Dead Sea, according to an official statement issued here today. The text reads:

"Palestine and Hedjaz—As the result of the operations of the King of Hedjaz's Arab troops in the week ending April 24, a section of the Hedjaz railway, 53 miles south of El-Maan, has been occupied."

British Admiralty Report on Adriatic Destroyer Engagement.

LONDON, April 27.—In the engagement of Allied and Austrian light sea forces in the Adriatic on April 22, the British lost seven men killed and 19 wounded, the admiralty reports. Two British destroyers were damaged, only slightly.

The official Austrian account of the engagement, issued yesterday, said one British destroyer was damaged seriously.

The announcement follows:

"On April 22, five Austrian destroyers were encountered and engaged by two of our destroyers in the Adriatic. The enemy fled for shelter to the fortified port of Durazzo, pursued by our destroyers, which had been reinforced by five more British and one French destroyer. The chase continued until after midnight, when touch with the enemy was lost.

"Our two destroyers which engaged this very superior enemy force received only minor damages. Our total casualties were seven killed and 19 wounded. It is not known what damage was sustained by the enemy.

"On the following day Durazzo was attacked by British air forces. The only man-of-war in the harbor was one gunboat. Our machines attacked the seaplane base, dropping nearly a ton of bombs, with apparently successful results. All our machines returned safely to their base."

Pursuit of Germans in East Africa Reported Progressing Favorably.

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Reporting military operations in the East African battle zone, an official statement issued today by the War Office says the advance of the British and Portuguese who are pursuing the German forces which crossed the German East African border into Mozambique, is proceeding under more favorable weather conditions. The text of the statement reads:

"East Africa—Since April 17 the convergent advance of Gen. Northey's men and Gen. Edwards' troops have proceeded under better weather conditions. The main enemy force is in the vicinity of Namungo. British and Portuguese troops are moving in the direction of Msalu River, while further south other British and Portuguese columns have been disposed north and south of the River Lurio."

British Retire From Captured Villages on Saloniki Front.

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—A retirement by the British troops on the Saloniki front, from villages which were recently captured, is reported in an official statement issued by the War Office. It reads:

"During the night of April 18 British troops withdrew from advanced villages in the Struma sector which they had occupied on April 16. The villages were later shelled by the enemy.

"On April 20 and April 22 the British carried out raids on the Doiran-Vardar front."

Carrollton Schools Drop German.

Yesterday's Reports From Battle Fronts

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—the French have recaptured positions from Locre to La Clytte, in Flanders, west of Mont Kemmel, the War Office announced today. The fighting on the Flanders front north of Lys was very severe. The enemy advance was held at all points. Heavy loses were inflicted on the Germans.

Continuing their counter attacks on the front east of Amiens the allies have gained further advantages in the Hangard Villers-Bretonneux sector, it also was announced.

The Germans made a heavy attack on the front south of Ypres. There was a long battle for Voormezelle, two miles south of Ypres, which the British retained, taking hundreds of prisoners.

The statement follows:

"There was great artillery activity on both sides during the night on the whole battle front north of the Lys River. The fighting in this area yesterday was very severe, the enemy making repeated and determined attempts to develop the advantage gained by him on the previous day. After many hours of fluctuating battle the enemy's advance was held at all points. Heavy casualties were suffered by his troops in the course of his many unsuccessful attacks.

"The enemy's assaults on the French positions from Locre to La Clytte were pressed with extreme violence and after three attacks had been beaten off with great loss to him, his troops succeeded at the fourth attempt in carryingthe village of Locre. In the evening our allies counter-attacked and drove the enemy out, regaining possession of the village. At other points all the enemy's attacks were repulsed.

"Fierce fighting took place north of Kemmel village and in the neighborhood of Voormezeele which, after a prolonged struggle, remains in the hands of our troops. In the afternoon the enemy again heavily attacked our positions at the ridge wood southwest of Voormezeele and was completely repulsed. Some hundreds of prisoners were captured by us in this fighting.

"Local fighting also took place yesterday afternoon on the Lys battle front in the neighborhood of Givency as a result of which 40 prisoners were captured by us.

"South of the Somme the fighting continued during the afternoon to the advantage of the allied troops in the Hangard-Villers-Bretonneux sector. Our line was again advanced at certain points and a hostile attack with tanks early in the afternoon was broken up by our fire and failed to develop. The number of prisoners captured by us in this area is over 900.

"Successful raids were carried out by us during the night in the neighborhood of Arleux (northeast of Arras) and in the Vieux-Berquin sector (southeast of Hazebrouck). We captured 20 prisoners."

HOLLAND SAID TO HAVE GRANTED TWO GERMAN DEMANDS

spared us, and is it not alomst unthinkable that the crime which has branded Cain's mark on the forehead of the violator should be repeated against us? But if it must be, our motto will be 'They shall not pass—neither they nor their necessities.' We want peace, but we fear dishonor more than war. Holland will remain herself."

German Minister to the Netherlands Still at The Hague.

WASHINGTON, April 27 (By A. P.).—The German Minister to the Netherlands is still at The Hague and did not leave for Germany as reported, the Netherlands legation announced today. The Dutch Minister to Berlin returned to The Hague, it was said, to discuss with his Government the progress of negotiations with Germany.

No ultimatum, it was asserted at the legation, has been sent to Holland by Germany either in relation to the sand and gravel dispute or any other questions that may have arisen.

The legation took occasion to deny that Holland has put an embargo on the export of tin, cinchona and kapok from the Dutch East Indies and said that the Government merely had issued an order requiring that exports be licensed. This action, it was said, had nothing to do with negotiations between Germany and Holland, but is a domestic matter in which Holland alone was interested.

LITTLE TANKS RAN OVER GERMANS IN CACHY FIGHT

Small Land Ships Moved So Quickly Enemy Troops Were Unable to Get Out of Way.

TWO COMPANIES WERE SOON WIPED OUT

Night Surprise at Villers-Bretonneux Chagrins Teutons Attacked After Three Days of Hunger.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, April 27 (By A. P.).—The slaughter caused by the small British tanks among a concentration of the enemy near Cachy in Wednesday's fighting appears to have been even greater than was reported originally. A few of these little engines, which are much faster than the ordinary big tanks, made the assault so quickly on two or three battalions of the enemy's infantry which were forming for an attack that the Germans were unable to scatter before they were being fiercely deluged with machine gun bullets. Not only that, but a large number of men were caught beneath the tanks and ground into the earth.

Prisoners estimate that at least two and probably three German companies were wiped out in a few minutes. The machines returned in such horrible condition from the shambles that they had to be washed down.

German Prisoner's Story.

One German prisoner had a rough experience with the small tanks and lived to tell the story, although he was much shaken as a result of his experience. He got separated from his unit and was hiding in a shell hole near Cachy when a tank charged directly over the hole. It was deep enough to protect the German, but he was so terrified that he lost consciousness and was just regaining his senses when the performance was repeated by a second tank. Again he escaped and saved himself further trials by being captured.

Only four German tanks appear to have been in the action Wednesday about Villers Bretonneux, although members of others are rumored to have been assigned to participate in the attack. The Fourth Guards divisions which advanced against the town from the south expected seven tanks to accompany them, but three of them did not appear.

Eleven Expected, Four Appear.

The German division attacking Cachy was told that four tanks were to support the assault, but these were missing at the appointed hour. Thus, 11 tanks had been figured upon but only four were actually engaged. The German prisoners state they never had seen the tanks before, although they had often heard of them. The greatest secrecy appears to have been maintained by the German higher command regarding these engines, so much so that the infantry had not been trained to work with them in their initial appearance.

The German tanks sent into the fight at Villers-Bretonneux acted quite independently of the foot soldiers. Their business apparently was to search out the machine gun nests and engage them. The fact that the crews of two of the enemy tanks abandoned them when they got into trouble would seem to indicate that the personnel is not experienced.

When Tank Fought Tank.

Four German tanks came forward with the second attack at about 9 o'clock. Only one clash occurred between them and the British tanks. That was when the quartet came up against one big British machine and two smaller ones. Both of the latter had been damaged somewhat by the heavy cannonade, but the bigger British machine forced the enemy to retreat, and put one of the number out of action. The crew of this German tank fled, as did that of another which afterward got stuck in the mud. Neither tank, however, was completely smashed, and the enemy got them away later. Both the damaged British tanks were saved.

From statements made by prisoners the correspondent is able to give an approximate description of the new German tank. It is about 36 feet long, 12 feet high and 12 feet wide. There is a central turret on top and the turret guns are of about 5½ centimeters. These tanks also carry about six machine guns, which fire from the front, rear and both flanks. The track, or caterpillar band upon which the tank runs is driven around by several pairs of wheels. Armor plate gives the whole machine the appearance of a turtle or an inverted basin. The speed of these tanks across country is said to be slow. On the highway it is reported to be much faster. One tank used on Wednesday had the name "Cyclops," painted across the front, and another bore the skull and crossbones.

British Lead From Start.

The Brittish counter stroke which ousted the Germans from Villers-Bretonneoux south of the Somme was a great success from the start. The town had been cleared of the enemy by Thursday afternoon with the exception of two "pockets" of infantry, one near the railway station and the other near the neighboring monument of the war of 1870. These pockets were cleared up Thursday evening.

Several light British tanks were used against the enemy at the monument. There was fierce fighting in the streets of the town after the British launched their counter attack at 10 o'clock. British gunners had been deluging the place with gas and the assaulting infantry went in wearing gas masks.

The Germans also were forced to don their masks and the streets were filled quickly with madly fighting men who looked like beings from another world in the big eyes of their face protectors. The town hall was full of Germans. Many of them had retired to the cellar where they were trying to sleep in their gas masks, for there had been no thought of a British attack that night.

Large numbers of the enemy were slain in the streets and many were taken prisoner. By Thursday morning those who had been in hiding were crawling out and surrendering freely. They were still wearing their gas masks.

German High Command Criticised.

Among the prisoners captured were several young officers who gave their opinions of things in general with refreshing candor. They were chagrined at the fiasco which the Germans had made of the Villers-Bretonneux attack. Some had unkind things to say of the higher command.

A large part of their trouble, the officers laid to the fact that the British held a hill just north of the village which gave the defenders full observation on the Germans for many miles. This hill, known as Hill 104, lies close to the front line and commands a wide sweep of country. From it the British gunners have played havoc with the German troops and transport. The prisoners said that for three days prior to the attack they had had nothing to eat because the food trains were smashed by shell fire and kitchens which tried to cook what food there was on hand were continually being demolished. As a result the Germans had little love for their task when the time came to attack.

The Germans were more or less buoyed up, however, by the promise of great things from the tanks which had not yet been seen in action.

A British officer in talking with one of the young German Lieutenants asked the latter to explain why the German submarines had sunk only one American transport.

"That is what we would like to know," the youngster replied. When questioned as to what he thought the reason for all the world being against the Germans, he gave the same reply. The officer said the Germans had been wondering about these very problems and others of similar nature for some time. The captured officers appeared to be clean-cut fellows of good type.

BRITISH DELAYED ATTACK ON BELGIAN U-BOAT BASES, HOPING TO CAPTURE THEM

Value of Ostend a Zeebrugge to Allies Would Have Been Great if Taken Without Being Damaged, Repington Explains.

By LIEUT.-COL. REPINGTON,
Former Military Critic of the London Times.

LONDON, April 27.—The past week has added to the history of our fighting services two very glorious pages. The story of the naval blocking operation on the Flanders coast and of the recapture of Villiers-Bretonneaux by the Australians must fill with the legitimate pride in our men the hearts of all who read it.

Every soldier has read the wonderful story of the Flanders' blocking operation, which recalls the cutting-out expeditions of the old days, with deepest admiration. The audacity of the plan, the vigor of its execution and the cool but desperate courage of the seamen and marines who took part in the attempts all excite our enthusiasm. We can feel sure that a shiver of apprehension has run all along the Belgian and German coast at the thought that fresh enterprises of the same character may be renewed elsewhere.

Only one comment seems necessary. It has been suggested that this operation should have been attempted long ago, and that naval authorities in the past have been remiss in not attempting it. Such suggestions display a want of acquaintance with the situation on the Belgian coast line.

Hoped to Capture Bases.

Up to the close of the campaign of 1917 and until it was conclusively proved that we could not continue the plans of the last year, there remained the hope that we should place ouselves in possession of all this coast. In this case the ports of Ostend and Zeebrugge would become valuable bases for us, and to have blocked or otherwise rendered these little ports useless would have been to have deprived ourselves of important avenues of supply. It was only when this situation changed that strategy had to change with it, and consequently criticisms, made or implied, against the Admiralty at all when Balfour and Sir Edward Carson were in charge of it, are completely relieved of all sense and reason.

German attacks which recommenced against the allied lines on the Western front last Wednesday hitherto had not been general. They had been limited to the Albert-Merville sectors, in the south battle front, and to the Bailleul-Wytschaete sectors in the north. They show no change in the intentions of the enemy, but only a more deliberate prosecution of his plans because the defense had hardened and he recognizes the critical task in front of him.

Hangard Useful to Enemy.

The region between the Somme and the Avre already has been the scene of very heavy fighting, and the Germans have made many attempts to gain possession of the angle between the rivers for the profit of his subsequent operations. The fresh attempt which he made on Wednesday last gave him both Hangard and Villiers-Bretonneux. He took the former from the French and the latter from us. Hangard, down in the little valley of the Luce is a useful bridgehead for the enemy when he has it, but the French remain in possession of the high ground to the north of it, though they lost Hangard wood.

More important was the German attempt to capture the hills west and south of Hailles on the left or west bank of the Avre including Senecat Wood. This attempt failed, and so long as the French hold this angle between the Avre and Noye the position in this sector is secure.

The German attack on Villers-Bretonneux, held apparently by one British division, was carried out by at least four German divisions, namely, the 4th Guard, the 77th, the 23d and the 24th. All of these, except the 77th, which is a new arrival, were in the attack of March 21. These four divisions overpowered the defense with the assistance of some tanks of a new and large type, and obtained complete possession of the town, which occupies a dominating and important position between the Somme and the Avre.

The British army commander on this front determined to reconquer the ground and effected his purpose before the enemy had time to make himself comfortable. The night attack of the Australians was a splendid performance, and by morning the whole village was won back and the Germans were gradually cleared from other points in the neighborhood. The 4th Guard division will now be returned to Von der Marwitz in a much shattered condition, and if Von Hutier is pleased to renew the attack he will have to find fresh troops to carry it out.

Allies Secure for the Moment.

The position of the allies in these sectors for the moment is secure. The German Sixth Army in the north has, meanwhile, shown a strong disposition to renew its assaults upon our Givenchy-Rebecq front, has not hitherto engaged his infantry in any serious manner. Von Arnim's Forty-eighth Army, on the contrary, has displayed strong forces on the Wytschaete-Bailleul front, and after fierce fighting, lasting throughout Thursday, established its head on Kemmel Hill.

Field Marshal Haig mentioned yesterday afternoon that fighting was still going on at Dranoutre, Kemmel and Vierstaate, so that the retirement of the allied troops had not at that moment proceeded to any length. If we have to admit the loss of Kemmel Hill, the next height to the westward is Mont Rouge, where the enemy should be held up until affairs in the Ypres section are straightened out. In the Kemmel fight all the German divisions noticed at Neuve Eglize again figured, and with them were the new arrival, the Fifty-sixth Division.

Eighty-five per cent of all employes of the Seattle ship yards have subscribed $1,650,000, and 7065 of the 7227 civilian employes of the Mare Island Navy yard have bought bonds.

The foreign language division of the Philadelphia Liberty Loan committee today reported the following subscriptions by nationalities:

Chicago Disappointed When Grand Total Is Only $81,000,000.

CHICAGO, April 27 (By A. P.).—Chicago's Liberty Loan Committee leaders expressed disappointment tonight when the complete returns for the city showed a grand total of only $81,084,650, or 301,745 individual subscriptions. This leaves a deficit of $45,095,350, which must be made up within the next six days, to reach the city's minimum allotment. Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo will arrive in the city tomorrow afternoon to help the campaign.

Killed or died of wounds—Officers, 408; men, 2661; wounded or missing, officers, 2071; men, 13,229.

Joplin Turnverein Disbands.

CRISIS REGARDED "MOST PERILOUS" BY BRITISH PRESS

Writers Say Greatest Effort Must Be Made to Repair Wastage Caused by Ceaseless Fighting.

LONDON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Commenting on the Flanders battle in serious tone, the morning newspapers contend that the situation imposes on Great Britain the necessity of putting forth the utmost effort, especially of furnishing more men to supply the wastage in the ceaseless fighting.

"We are faced with a crisis more perilous and momentous than any that has hitherto arisen, even in this appalling war," writes the military correspondent of the Daily Telegraph.

"Possession of the channel ports by the enemy would make our task on land and sea infinitely more intricate and costly."

The Daily News, in an editorial, says the situation has changed seriously for the worse as a result of the fighting of the last two days, and that the German drive toward the channel is a matter of very serious concern. Nevertheless, it regards the situation as in no wise yet stabilized and says that if the Germans mean to break through they must do it quickly, before American reinforcements finally turn the tide.

The effect of the capture of Mont Kemmel upon the situation at Ypres is canvassed anxiously by some papers. The Daily Chronicle thinks that Ypres would be costly and precarious. It hopes that it will be found possible to dislodge the enemy as at Villers-Bretonneux. Otherwise, it says, a further withdrawal of the Ypres line may be desirable. The Chronicle contends, however, that the present value of Ypres is only secondary.

The Daily Mail says it would be folly to minimize the success the enemy has achieved and if the loss of Kemmel should prove permanent the difficulty in holding Ypres would be increased materially. It concludes by urging the necessity of maintaining the supply of men.

JUDGE GRAVES WON'T DECIDE ON SENATORSHIP JUST YET

Has Matter Under Advisement and Will Give Governor His Answer This Week.

JEFFERSON CITY, April 27.—Chief Justice Waller W. Graves of the Missouri Supreme Court, to whom Gov. Gardner yesterday tendered the appointment to the United States Senate to succeed the late Senator Stone, announced tonight that he would not make known his decision in the matter until next week.

As in the case of Speaker Clark, who declined the place, there is much speculation as to whether Justice Graves will accept. The opinion of many is indicated in the remarks of one experienced, who said:

"Judge Graves, if he accepts and desires to remain in the Senate, and from a political standpoint it is inconceivable that he would not want to remain, would have to make a state-wide campaign in the fall of 1918 and another in the fall of 1919. Each of these campaigns would cost him at least $5000. If successful in both he would be Senator for eight years at $7500 a year.

"There might be some question of his election to the Senate, while there would be little question of his re-election to the Supreme bench this fall for a term of 10 years. His salary as Judge would be the same as his salary as Senator, and he would only have to make one campaign for the place."

Judge Graves is 58 years old. He was appointed to the Supreme Court by Gov. Folk in 1906, and was re-elected the same year for a short term of two years, and was re-elected in 1908 for a full term of 10 years.

GERMANY SAID TO HAVE SIX SUPER SUBMARINES

As Many More With Cruising Radius of 10,000 Miles Being Built.

WASHINGTON, April 27 (Special).—Germany has completed the construction of six super-submarines of 1500 to 1800 tons' capacity, with a cruising radius of 10,000 miles, and six more are being rushed toward completion, according to information received here through official channels.

It is surmised they are for use in the Atlantic trade routes most distant from German home bases, as smaller craft are more advantageously employed in European waters. The Pacific and Indian Oceans are considered too remote, and therefore it is assumed that Germany plans to dispatch the largest under-water craft to American waters, or to use them in attacks in the mid-Atlantic.

TWO MEN HOLD UP STORE AND ESCAPE WITH $1000

More than $1000 was stolen from the Blue Valley Butter Co., 821 North Fourth street, shortly after 7 o'clock last night by two unidentified men who entered the store and forced W. G. Kammerer, manager, 2622 Tennessee avenue, and Robert Stadt, a clerk, of 5638 Easton avenue, into a rear room at the point of a pistol.

One man rifled the cash drawer of the day's receipts while his accomplice covered the two employes in charge of the store. The robbers ran from the store and disappeared before the clerks could reach the street.

300 GUESTS SEE MISS CHURCH AND A. A. BUSCH JR. WED

Crowd Stands Outside House in Rain to Get Glimpse of Ceremony, Majority Being Women.

MANY COSTLY GIFTS ARE ON DISPLAY

Bridegroom's Present to Bride Is Platinum Bracelet Studded With Diamonds—Jollity Marks Wedding Supper.

The wedding of Miss Marie Christy Church and August A. Busch Jr., the most discussed society event of several seasons in St. Louis, took place last night at the home of the young woman's mother, Mrs. Alonzo C. Church, 4 Lenox place.

More than 300 invited guests, the majority being women, witnessed the ceremony at 8:15 o'clock or, arriving soon afterward, attended the reception, which prefaced a bridal supper lasting until after 11. The rain did not keep away another large group of uninvited guests, which stood in front of the house and crowded about the apertures in the canopy leading from the curb to the entrance. Women were also largely in the majority in this gathering.

The bride, who is 22 years old, is one of the most admired girls in society here and her family is old and of the highest social standing. The bridegroom is the younger son of the president of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, and is 19 years old. The engagement was announced six weeks ago and has since been the most interesting topic of conversation in social gatherings.

House Profusely Decorated.

The house was profusely adorned with roses, lilacs and ferns, and its modest capacity for guests was increased by covering most of the back yard with flooring and tarpaulin, converting it into a room which was so decorated as to seem a part of the house itself.

Miss Church's beauty, and her buoyant smile, were the subject of admiring comment as she descended the main staircase with her uncle, Philip C. Scanlan. An orchestra played the Lohengrin wedding march.

In the sun parlor, young Busch awaited with his attendants, and the ceremony was performed by the Rev. Father F. J. O'Connor of the Catholic Church of Our Lady of Lourdes.

The bride's white satin robe was garnished with lace which is a treasure of the Scanlan family, to which her mother belongs. The costumes of the bride and bridemaids are described in the society columns of this issue of the Post-Dispatch.

Miss Eugene Williams was matron of honor, and the bridemaids were Misses Mathilda Overton, Grace Taylor and Julia Tyler. The bridegroom was attended by his older brother, Adolphus Busch III, as best man, and by his brother-in-law, Drummond Jones, his cousin, Adolph Magnus, and Arnold Stifel. Another brother-in-law, Percy Orthwein, and Richard Upshaw, held the ribbons through which the bridal party passed.

Gifts Are Displayed.

The gifts were displayed on the second floor, and the most admired among these was the silver service given by the bridegroom's grandmother, Mrs. Adolphus Busch. It was said by some of the guests that Mrs. Busch has given each of her grandchildren a silver service and a check for $10,000 as a wedding present. It was also related, in this case, that the bride was asked to choose between the silver service and an automobile, and chose the silver service. It is of massive construction.

The bridegroom's present to the bride was a platinum bracelet, studded with diamonds. The bride's mother gave a set of flat silverware, and a large silver punch bowl was the gift of the Anheuser-BuschBrewin Association. As has been announced, the gift of the bridegroom's father was the residence at 5577 Lindell boulevard, where they will live.

Confetti throwing and jollity marked the wedding supper, to which the younger set chiefly remained. As the bridal pair started to leave, they were entwined with coils of brightly colored tissue paper.

Among the men who appeared in Uniform was Ensign Field Goltra, who is soon to leave to begin active training for naval service. Dan Jones, son of Breckenridge Jones, appeared in the uniform of a seaman, saying he was to leave for active service in a day or two.

Some amusement was caused among the guests by the yelping of a puppy which had been shut up in an upstairs room. The animal was heard protesting against its imprisonment, as the bride descended the staircase, but soon afterward was apparently removed by servants, as the noise ceased.

ENJOINS STRIKERS AT PLANT MAKING WAR MATERIALS

Federal Judge Dyer Issues Temporary Restraining Order on Application of St. Louis Metal Ware Co.

An order temporarily restraining striking employes of the St. Louis Metal Ware Co., 2507 North Broadway, from molesting employes or obstructing or interfering with the company's production was granted by Judge Dyer yesterday in the Federal Court. Counsel for the company invoked the relief provided by the Sherman, Clayton and sabotage acts, which make it unlawful to interfere or conspire against the orderly movement of interstate commerce, or to destroy war material for the purpose of obstructing the United States Government or any of its associates in the conduct of the war.

The Clayton act requires that plaintiff shall recite all the facts in an application for a restraining order, and counsel for the company submitted 24 affidavits showing that employes who had remained at work had been intimidated, frightened and beaten by the strikers and the company's production otherwise obstructed by the strike.

The order is directed against the Amalgamated Sheet Metal Workers' District Council, comprising 10 locals in St. Louis, and its individual members and officers. It is returnable May 6.

Several hundred employes of the St. Louis Metal Ware Co. went on strike March 27 for recognition of the union, fewer working hours and increased wages. Officials of the company said the strike was without warning.

The company is engaged on war contracts, and a great deal of its other business is for interstate shipment and foreign trade.

ST. LOUIS CAR CO. STRIKERS WILL APPEAL TO U. S. BOARD

Employes of the St. Louis Car Co., 8000 North Broadway, went on strike at 9 a. m. yesterday, in obedience to a vote taken the day before at a meeting in Oberbeck's Hall, 7945 North Broadway.

Edwin B. Meissner, vice president of the company, stated that 435 of the 800 men employed at the plant obeyed the strike order. He said the plant would continue to operate, and if the strikers did not return to work other men would be employed.

The company has war orders for airplanes, ammunition carts, mobile machine shops and steel freight cars.

The strikers say they will appeal for Government conciliation to end the strike. They want recognition of the union, increased wages and fewer working hours.

'English Spoken Here' Anecdote of City Hall Related by Rolla Wells

Former Mayor at Liberty Loan Dinner Denounces Political Coddling of Those of Foreign Extraction.

An interesting anecdote, related at a Liberty Loan dinner at the St. Louis Club, last Wednesday night, by Rolla Wells, Governor of the St. Louis Federal Reserve Bank and former Mayor, is going the rounds of the city.

"A few days after my inauguration as Mayor in April, 1901," Wells related, "a friend came to me and announced that he had just one favor to ask.

"'Rolla,' he said, 'when you go to the city hall, I want you to have printed a number of placards and have them placed in the various departments. On the placards have printed the words, "English Spoken Here"'"

This anecdote brought a quick response, for it was remembered by many that during the Ziegenhein administration, preceding that of Mayor Wells, many taxpayers who visited the city hall noted that city clerks, in discussing public affairs, conversed in a language that the tax payers could not understand.

Expediency Appeal Denounced.

Wells, in his address, denounced politicians who get together and, for political expediency, select Irish, Italian or German candidates to appeal to these nationalities for their votes.

"We of St. Louis are situated geographically almost in the center of the United States," he said. "Our people have come from every section of this country; in fact, from every quarter of the globe. Quite a large percentage of our population is of foreign birth and extraction. The vital question is, "Are there any neutrals among us?' If so, I want to say to them that they are not loyal American citizens, and this is no place for their abode.

"The time has passed when we should tolerate the half-American and the half of any other nationality. We of this country have been too indulgent with those claiming American citizenship and at the same time ignoring and refusing American ideals and the true American spirit.

"How often have some of us taken part in a political caucus to consider the availability of a person as a candidate for office on the theory that he would command the Irish vote, the Italian vote, the German vote, or some other foreign vote. I say, as an American, shame on such political greed and cowardice! Let it be a part of American manhood that in future there be but one vote in this country—the American vote.

"Mostly German Propaganda."

"I am glad to see the agitation now sweeping the country antagonistic to German language newspapers, sermons in German and German text books. This is mostly German propaganda. Here in the heart of America and the city of St. Louis, publications relating to our municipal affairs are, by sanction of law, published in a newspaper printed in the German language. Why should such custom be permitted in a community which should be, or should be forced to be, a 100-percent English speaking people?

"You may ask me why I object to this. My answer is, as an American citizen, exercising the sacred right to the American franchise, I object to any utterance, written or oral, on any topic pertaining to our national, state or municipal affairs, in a language which I, an American citizen, cannot understand."

It was at this point in his address that Wells related his "English Spoken Here" anecdote.

Should Adopt Our Ideals.

Wells added that he did not wish to be understood as objecting to any one speaking German or other languages as individuals; that he regarded a person who spoke a plurality of tongues as accomplished, but he believed a person who adopted the United States as his country should also adopt its language, customs and ideals. He said a person, even though born in this country, when trained in a foreign tongue would, unconsciously, think and act the ideals of the country whose language he used.

His objection is the use of any foreign language in the transaction of public business and he has no objection to foreign-language papers as purveyors of news events, when not used to spread propaganda and to inculcate foreign ideals.

Wells said his ideas on the use of foreign tongues in this country were not new to him at this time. He had given the matter thought since 1883, when he visited Lincoln County, New Mexico, and while there saw a young American on trial for his life before a jury of mixed nationalities. Part of this jury were Mexicans and a Spanish interpreter was necessary to explain testimony to the judge and jury. He felt then that a law that permitted this was not right and did not believe that full justice was being done this American in what should have been an English-speaking country.

After Foreign Vote.

He also expressed dissatisfaction with practices in use in the election of President of the United States. As treasurer of the Democratic National Committee in 1913, he said, he became aware that the national committees employ foreign bureaus from whence speakers in foreign tongues are sent to garner the votes of various nationalities. This practice, he said, should be stopped by legislation and he had so advocated after his severance with the Democratic National Committee. He declared he took the matter up with an Eastern Federal legislator, but immediately saw that this man began to weigh in his mind the effect of the advocacy of such a bill at coming elections.

2 SOLDIERS ON WAY TO PRISON FLEE, BUT ARE RECAPTURED

Men Were Convicted by Courtmartial at Jacksonville, Fla., of Defaming President When Drunk.

Frank B. Dunn and James J. Butler, each 22 years old, being taken from Camp Johnson, Jacksonville, Fla., to Fort Leavenworth prison, broke away from Corporal Max Freiberg at Nineteenth and Market streets yesterday morning and tried to escape; but both were recaptured.

The men had just had breakfast and Sergt. Merrell, who accompanied Corporal Freiberg, had gone to see about the transportation. They were not handcuffed and each carried hand baggage. They dropped their baggage and ran north on Nineteenth street to Pine street and east to an alley. Freiberg followed, firing at them. In the alley he caught Dunn. Butler was turned back and was caught by a policeman at Seventeenth and Pine streets. In the pursuit Freiberg fell and dislocated his left arm and sprained his right knee.

Dunn and Butler were convicted by a courtmartial after getting drunk and going on a rampage and defaming President Wilson. Dunn was given 10 years and Butler five years, but their Colonel had recommended that they be paroled after serving six or eight months. Dunn did not know this and when caught by the policeman begged to be shot, saying he would rather be dead than serve 10 years.

6000 ACRES OF FARM LAND IN COUNTY UNDER WATER

Meramec River Overflowed at Several Points—Creeks Near Gumbo Out of Banks.

About 6000 acres of farm land in St. Louis County is inundated and many thousands of dollars' damage to wheat crops has been done by rivers and creeks overflowed by recent incessant rains.

Several families in the east part of Valley Park have been forced to move by waters of the Meramec River, which is raising at the rate of two inches an hour. It is thought that the crest has not yet been reached.

Lowlands above and below Valley Park are covered with water. It is estimated that 3000 acres, 20 per cent in wheat, are flooded. The gauge at Valley Park is 25 feet, 11½ feet under the stage of the floods of 1914.

Creeks flowing into the Missouri River near Gumbo are out of their banks over about 500 acres of farm land. At one point on the Olive street road between Gumbo and Chesterfield the road is covered by six inches of water.

Twenty-five hundred acres of land within a one-mile radius of Fenton are flooded. The Gravois road at a point where it nears Fenton is under 10 inches of water. The Meramec River at Fenton is 12 feet above normal.

NO NEW CLASSES IN GERMAN IN HIGH SCHOOLS

Only Pupils Studying Language Will Be Permitted to Continue It to Complete Their Course.

BOARD ELIMINATES ONE TEXT BOOK

Contains Objectionable Passage Relating to Franco-Prussian War and Alsace-Lorraine.

The Board of Education yesterday announced that pupils in the St. Louis high schools will not hereafter be permitted to begin the study of German. Those who are now studying German will be permitted to continue it as far as is necessary to complete the requirements for entrance into college.

As the course of instruction in foreign languages in the high schools is a two years' course, this means that those who have begun studying German this year will be permitted to study it next year, but no new class will be organized hereafter. There are now 13 teachers of German in the six high schools, two of them negroes.

The board also decided that a German textbook entitled "Hoeher as die Kirche" (Higher Than the Church) will be eliminated from the German classes. This book, it is stated, contains an objectionable passage relating to the Franco-Prussian War and Alsace-Lorraine. Two other books which have previously been eliminated are "Gluck Auf" and "Im Vaterland."

Inquiry by Withers.

President Murphy of the board, in announcing the decision, gave out a statement as to an inquiry which has been carried on by Supt. Withers. Dr. Withers, he said, made inquiry from Secretary of Agriculture Houston as to the attitude of the Federal Government toward the teaching of German. Secretary Houston replied that he had not heard the matter discussed.

Dr. Withers sent telegrams to the superintendents of instruction in nine large cities, asking whether they were giving instruction in German, and whether they expected to continue it. The replies showed that German is still taught in the high schools of all the cities, and that its elimination was being officially considered in only two of the cities, Los Angeles and New Orleans.

The Superiintendent compiled a table showing the enrollment in German classes in the St. Louis high schools. "This table," the report says, 'shows public sentiment in St. Louis on this question, better than any other available source of information. This table shows that in the white high schools there are at present 42 classes, enrolling 810 students. In January, 1916, two years ago, there were 83 classes, enrolling 1915 students. Consequently there has been a decrease of 58 per cent of the total enrollment within the last two years. In Sumner High School there are at present 9 classes, enrolling 195 students, as against 12 classes and 253 students in January, 1916. In all of the high schools, white and colored, there are at present 51 classes and 1005 students. In January, 1916, there were 95 classes and 2168 students, a total decrease of students amounting to 54 per cent.

"These figures, however, do not adequately reveal the actual public sentiment toward the study of German in the high schools of the city. Of the 810 now enrolled in the white schools, 580, or about 72 per cent, began the study of German before we entered the war, and only 230, or 28 per cent, since. At the opening of the term in January, 1916, 538 students, or 21 classes, in the white high schools began the study of German for the first time. At the opening of the present term, January, 1918, only 56 students elected beginning German, a falling off of 90 per cent in two years. Moreover this decrease is general throughout the city. The falling off of the enrollment in beginning German was 100 per cent at Soldan High School, 94 per cent at Central, 90 per cent at Yeatman, 86 per cent at Cleveland and 84 per cent at McKinley."

Textbooks Are Censured.

A censorship of the German textbooks now in use was undertaken several weeks ago, resulting in the immediate abandonment of "Gluck Auf" and "Im Vaterland" and the dicision to omit certain passages in reading from 'Hoeher also die Kirche," the book which has now been eliminated altogether.

In explaining the decision to continue German instruction for those now studying that language, the following statement is made:

"The condition imposed by the course of study is that any student who elects as a part of his course a foreign language, must continue the study of that language for at least two years, if he wishes it to count at all toward the completion of his course. This requirement is due partly to the fact that it is not much worth while for a student to pursue a foreign language for a shorter period of time than two years, and partly to the fact that admission to the colleges of the country requires it. If, therefore, a student who is scheduled to graduate from the high school in June, let us say, and who is now taking his fourth term in German, would not only fail of graduation in June, if German were dropped from the high school course, but he could not even count toward graduation from the high school or toward admission to a college the three terms of German which he had already satisfactorily completed."

PLAN TO CONTROL NOISES IN CITY IS PROPOSED

Art League's Committee Will Try to Bring About Coordination to Produce Harmony, Not Discord.

St. Louis will have a municipal music commission for the control of noises, musical and otherwise, in the interest of harmonious community life, if a plan proposed by the Music Committee of the St. Louis Art League, and adopted by the league, it put into operation.

The idea, as outlined by Charles Claflin Allen, chairman of the committee, is "the co-ordination of the consonant vibrations in daily life to a common end of utility and beauty producing harmony and not discord." The purpose, as stated by him, is "the training of human beings by unconscious and subconscious influences of the external sounds on the internal senses till the result of harmonious vibrations is an increase of agreeable sensations producing happy hearts and willing minds and creating correspondingly greater efficiency in the indvidual and greater combined efficiency in the mass."

As tending to show that the thing is feasible attention is called to the analogous case of military music arousing a martial spirit, a dirge suggesting death and a funeral, a waltz suggesting pleasure, an old street car running on an old track disturbing the nerves, a new car on a new track quieting them, a rumbling boiler making itself a nuisance and a ringing church bell making itself a blessing.

The method proposed by the committee is to procure legislation for the appointment of the commission to work out a system or organzing and controlling, at public expense, the causes and conditions of vibrant sounds which promote or retard the harmony and efficiency of community life.

The other members of the committee are Mrs. Everett W. Pattison, Mrs. Morris Skrainka, Mrs. E. R. Kroeger, Frank Gecks, Noel Poepping, E. L. Coburn, Edward A. Faust and Dr. Max A. Goldstein.

SOLDIERS' FATHER AN ALIEN

Papers Are Denied to Austrian Whose Sons Are in Army.

Anto Kugler, 41 years old, of 4809 Germania avenue, who has two sons in the military service of the United States, has been refused final naturalization papers. He is a native of Hungary and came to St. Louis in 1904.

One of the sons, Rudolph, 18, is an enlisted man in the regular army. The other, Frank, 16, is with a hospital unit in Georgia. Both enlisted with their father's consent before the state of war with Austria-Hungary.

Kugler was deeply affected when informed that he could not become naturalized while the country was at war with his native land. "I want to be an American," he exclaimed. "I have given my boys to the country."

STUDIES ENGLISH TO WRITE TO HER SON IN THE ARMY

German-Born Woman, 58 Years Old, Goes to Night School and Takes Lessons From Grandson, 11.

ONLY MISSED ONE NIGHT DURING WINTER

"Willie, He Says My Letters Are Best Ones He Gets," Mrs. Minnie Mayer Tells Reporter.

When William C. Mayer of 4017 Kossuth avenue became an aviation student in the United States army his mother, Mrs. Minnie Mayer, who was born and educated in Germany started to night school to learn to read and write English, so she could correspond with him. She is 58 years old and he is 29.

"Willie is an American, and he couldn't read German so much; besides, it wouldn't look good to write to an American soldier in German," she told a Post-Dispatch reporter yesterday. She added: "Anyhow, we are trying to forget about Germany; we don't want to think about it any more."

Now, after five months of school which she attended three nights a week, Mrs. Mayer writes clearly and legibly, and reads her son's letters and the newspapers with comparative ease. However, she said, she intends to enroll again as soon as school opens in the autumn.

Taking Home-Study Course.

In the meantime she is taking a home-study course, with her grandson, Raymond Wamser, 11 years old, in the role of tutor. She gets her lessons regularly, two or three times a week, she said, and her work is criticised by her youthful instructor.

Mrs. Mayer came to this country from Germany when she was 23 years old. Her husband, Gottlieb, a cabinetmaker, who died a year ago, also was born there. She was educated in German, and that language sufficed for the small amount of correspondence she had until war was declared.

Her son enlisted last September and was sent to Camp Charleston, Fla. Mrs. Mayer became a night student at Bryan Hill School Nov. 11. The term ended two weeks ago.

"At first I was bashful—I was so old," she said. "Then I thought, ach, he is all I have, and it will break my heart if I don't write to him, so I started right in.

"It is 11 blocks from my house to the school, and sometimes the rain and snow were bad, but I didn't miss but one night. I wasn't at home that time. I went visiting, and I hurried back, but when I got home it was too late to start.

Son Likes Her Letters.

"Oh, I don't know so much yet, but I don't try to put in big words, so I get along all right. Willie, he says, my letters are the best ones he gets. Of course, I couldn't learn so quick, but the teacher said I did fine.

"At first I started with arithmetic too, but it was so much, and I thought what would Willie need with figures, so I just took reading and writing. All my lessons I kept, and now I have a box full."

She produced a stationery box filled with ordinary copy book leaves.

"I can't talk English so good, or maybe I could write still better," she said. "But Willie understands, and he writes that he is as proud of me as I am of him."

Mrs. Wamser has one other son, and lives with him and her daughter, Mrs. John B. Wamser.

POLICE CAPTAIN ACQUITTED OF CHARGE OF KILLING WIFE

Street Arrested After Mrs. Street and Policeman Were Found Dead in Alley.

A jury in Judge Falkenhainer's court in 15 minutes yesterday acquitted William Street, 36 years old, Captain of Police of Madison, Ill., of the charge of killing his wife.

Mrs. Catherine Street, 40 years old, who was separated from her husband, and Patrolman Charles F. Barmeier of the Angelica Street Police Station were found dead in a blind alley opening on Salisbury street between Ninth and Eleventh streets, Nov. 25, 1915, at 11 p. m.

Street testified that he had entered the alley in pursuit of his wife, who had broken away from him as he was taking her to her home at 917 Salisbury street from a saloon in which he had found her drinking with a man.

He said that as he followed her into the alley he heard someone say: "I'll get you now," and open fire. His wife exclaimed, he said, "I'm shot." Street himself was shot in the leg. He fled from the alley. He declared that he did not fire any shots.

The patrolman's body was found a short distance from that of Mrs. Street. Beside it was his revolver with two discharged cartridges in it. The State produced no witnesses to the shooting.

M'ADOO CANCELS VISIT; DISSATISFIED WITH LOAN DRIVE

Secretary of Treasury in Telegram Says He Cannot Understand Situation in St. Louis.

"THOSE WHO DO NOT AID U. S. AID KAISER"

Questions Whether Wealthy Individuals and Corporations Here Are Doing Their Share.

Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo, who had planned to visit St. Louis today, yesterday canceled his engagement and sent to William R. Compton, chairman of the Eighth District Liberty Loan Organization, a telegram expressing his dissatisfaction with this city's showing in the Third Liberty Loan campaign, and particularly with the attitude of wealthy individuals and large corporations here.

In his telegram Secretary McAdoo said:

> Do not understand situation in St. Louis. Reports indicate a tremendous per capita distribution. It would seem that wealthy corporations who are enjoying unusual prosperity, perhaps because of Government contracts or otherwise, and citizens of large wealth, are to less extent refusing to buy substantial amounts of Liberty Bonds.
> Is it possible that there is any feeling among these classes of subscribers that they did more than their share in previous campaigns, and are now unwilling to repeat their former splendid efforts?
> Need Is Imperative.
> It is inconceivable to me that corporations enjoying prosperity and citizens of large wealth should refuse to lend their money to their Government at this time, when the needs of our soldiers and sailors who are actually dying upon the battlefields in France were never more imperative.
> Those who fail to subscribe to Liberty Bonds when they are able to do so are actually helping the Kaiser, because to the extent that they fail to help keep the Treasury supplied with adequate funds to carry on the war, they are depriving our soldiers in the fields of the necessary food, clothing and arms to effectively fight him.
> No American soldier or sailor ought to expend his life to save shirkers and unpatriotic, if not disloyal, people. How can we expect our soldiers to go to the maximum on the battlefields of France if those who stay at home in safety and prosperity are unwilling to even go to the minimum to support our gallant men? A great war like this is a war not only between the armies on the battlefield, but is a war of production by the rural population, production by all people, production of the needed money to carry on the war and production of the essential things with which to fight.
> I earnestly hope you will impress upon wealthy corporations and individuals the importance of going the limit in the amount of their subscription. St. Louis has done her part so admirably heretofore that I appeal to every good citizen in St. Louis not to let her splendid record be sullied.

76 Per Cent of Quota Subscribed.

With the campaign three-fourths over, St. Louis was yesterday shown to have subscribed a little more than three-fourths of its quota. The total announced yesterday afternoon, for the city and St. Louis County, was $29,725,750, or 76 per cent of the quota, which is $39,107,350. The campaign will end next Saturday night. The total did not include the subscriptions obtained Friday, Liberty day, by Home Guards and other special house-to-house canvassers. This amount will probably exceed $450,000 and it will pass through the banks and appear in the totals of tomorrow and later days.

The total for the Eighth (St. Louis) Federal Reserve District, announced at the same time, was $146,406,300, or 112 per cent of its quota of $130,000,000. With St. Louis excepted, the remainder of the district has subscribed 128 per cent of its part of the quota.

Chairman Compton, commenting yesterday on the comparative showing of St. Louis and the district, declared that "something is wrong locally." He said:

"The returns in the city within the last few days have improved. Men of wealth are coming forward with substantial subscriptions, but not in sufficient numbers and amount to even reach our quota.

"This district is known as the "St. Louis District" and practically every important newspaper published in New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Chicago and many other places has given publicity and credited the City of St. Louis with having achieved this remarkable record. In the last campaign, without great effort, we sold $74,000,000 worth of bonds in St. Louis. In this campaign, so far, the figures are less than $30,000,000 Something is wrong locally and evidently Secretary McAdoo is aware of this fact, as is shown by his very urgent telegram to me.

"Distribution Is Gratifying."

"The distribution of bonds among the people of the district is gratifying, as compared with the results in previous campaigns. But we shall have to do some tall hustling if we are to sell even 15 per cent of the people in this district. This would mean around 1,500,000 subscribers.

"Unless there is a tremendous effort put forth during the coming week, we shall be behind the showing of some other districts in per capita distribution. Every state in the district is well over the top, with the single exception of Tennessee, and we are confident that it will also be in the banner column. The State of Missouri, outside the city of St. Louis, is oversubscribed 25 per cent, but if St. Louis were taken into consideration, as it rightfully should be, the State would not show in the 100 per cent column.

"The Liberty Loan Organization and patriotic bankers of the city of St. Louis have done everything possible to swell our totals and they are going to continue their efforts until the last day of the campaign. In no part of the district is there any diminution of activity. We are determined that the Eighth District and that every single community, whether city, town or village, shall be in the honor class. It is not enough to simply subscribe our quota.

$50,000,000 More Needed.

"Secretary McAdoo has expressed a desire that each district go 50 per cent over the top. Our totals now are $146,406,300, and if we are to secure an oversubscription of 50 per cent the totals must be $195,000,000. We are therefore about $50,000,000 short of the goal. I cannot believe that the city of St. Louis will fail to do its share. We should have $75,000,000 in subscriptions in our city. I know full well that some are not doing their duty.

"It is bonds or taxation. Individuals or corporations who are paying large income or war excess profits taxes must multiply many times the enforced contribution to the Government if they are to pay their share of the cost of this war. We need the influence of the prominent men of our city—men outside our banks—who are devotedly loyal to the campaign, so that all individuals and corporations will be impressed with the full measure of their duty. One short week remains of this campaign and action must be had quickly if we are to reach the desired goal."

First Regiment Sales $288,300.

The First Regiment, Missouri Home Guard, completed last night the tabulation of its house-to-house canvassing work of Friday, Liberty Day. It obtained 2131 subscriptions, for a total of $288,300. The Third Regiment has not completed its tabulation, but Col. H. Chouteau Dyer said last night that its total for the day's canvass would amount to about $160,000. This will mean a total of nearly $450,000 for the Home Guard, in addition to the very large subscriptions already obtained by the guard. The First Regiment's total, before Friday's canvass, was nearly $1,500,000.

The Boy Scouts opened their bond campaign in the rain yesterday morning. They will continue the campaign through this week. The various troops are in rivalry for the winning of the first honor flag. Medals will also be awarded for individual achievement.

Fifteen counties in this Federal Reserve District, six of them being Missouri counties, have qualified for honor flags, which are awarded for raising their quotas and attaining the alloted per capita distribution of subscriptions.

The counties are, in Missouri, Carroll, Harrison, St. Charles, Pettis, Warren and Saline; in Illinois, Calhoun, Monroe, Washington and Wabash; in Tennessee, Louderdale and Crockett; in Kentucky, Henderson and Barren, and in Arkansas, Faulkner.

Returns From District Units.

The different states and parts of states comprised in the reserve district have made returns showing the following total subscriptions, per capita distribution and percentages of their respective shares of the district quota:

Kentucky (Western), $25,756,650, from 84,516 subscribers, 149 per cent; Indiana (southern one-fifth), $12,049,900, from 52,963 subscribers, 131 per cent; Missouri (without St. Louis, Kansas City and western border counties), $25,806,350, from 133,645 subscribers, 124 per cent; Illinois (Southern), $21,936,400, from 71,742 subscribers, 120 per cent; Arkansas (entire State), $18,060,900, from 75,076 subscribers, 117 per cent; Tennessee (Western), $7,279,300, from 27,592 subscribers, 75 per cent.

Seventy-nine of the 94 Missouri counties in the district have been reported as having subscribed their quotas. Of these counties, 41 have reached their alloted number of subscribers, and will be able to qualify for honor flags on certifying the figures to the Federal Reserve Bank.

Liberty Loan Notes

Subscriptions by employes of the United Railways yesterday reached a total of $200,000, and Supt. Bruce Cameron received a telegram from President Wilson's secretary conveying the President's "gratification and appreciation" to the motormen and conductors, all of whom have now bought bonds. Other departments of the company are conducting a 100 per cent drive, but the transportation department believes it holds the record among street railways of the country.

The congregation of Bethany Evangelical Lutheran Church, 4100 Natural Bridge avenue, has subscribed, through the church's bond committee, for $14,700 worth of bonds. An entertainment was given by the young women of the church Thursday evening, in behalf of the committee.

Of 32,000 regular employes of the Missouri Pacific Railroad, 30,170, or 94 per cent, have already subscribed for $2,143,350 of the bonds. This railroad in the Second Liberty Loan, had 17,400 subscribers to $1,423,000 bonds.

Mrs. Theodore Benoist, chairman of the Missouri Women's Liberty Loan organization, yesterday received a telegram from Mrs. George Bass, secretary of the National Women's Liberty Loan Organization, congaratulating her upon the success of the Missouri women's sale of $6,834,134 of Liberty Bonds the first two weeks of the campaign. In this was included $5,000,000 sold by the women's Metropolitan Division, which has charge of the sale among the women of St. Louis. Sales made by the Metropolitan Division on Liberty day amounted to $525,800, divided among 3266 subscribers. Included in the amount were sales of $8000 made to members of the Liederkranz Club by Mrs. E. L. McBride.

The Catholic Women's League of St. Louis which has obtained subscriptions to the Third Liberty Loan aggregating $907,000, has begun a final drive to go over the $1,000,000 mark. Special committees of members have been in charge of a booth at Nugent's store since the campaign started and other committees will continue the work this week.

Subscriptions obtained by public school children have now reached a total of $2,935,350, from 23,860 subscribers.

A detachment of the Great Lakes Naval Training Station Band will give concerts at the high schools this week, beginning tomorrow night at McKinley High School.

The pupils of the Lincoln (negro) School obtained 158 subscriptions by a canvass in the neighborhood of the school, at 2233 Eugenia street.

In a canvass of the Bevo plant of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing Association, 547 subscriptions, amounting to $34,000, were obtained. The canvass is not complete.

The St. Louis Jovian League of Electrical Interests—221 members—was the first fraternal organization to receive an honor flag. Cliff R. Croninger is chairman. The flag will be presented Tuesday, at a midday luncheon at the American Annex, by G. Prather Knapp.

Owners and managing officers of the National Tool and Manufacturing Co., 2536 University street, met at the Planters Hotel last night and after a banquet and general talk, took part in a sale of Third Liberty Loan bonds, the employes buying $15,000 worth of the issue. After the banquet, of which 75 persons partook, addresses were made by E. S. Knight, president; H. G. Cook, treasurer, and W. S. Ireland, general manager of the company. Ensign Stanley Bates of the United States navy made an address and a round table discussion of best methods of increasing production of war materials was held by the employes.

LETTERS OPPOSED OFFICIALS ACTING IN PRAGER CASE

Communications to Coroner and Judge Made Public After All but One of Indicted Men Are Arrested.

Letters protesting to the officials of Madison County against the legal efforts put forth after the lynching of Robert P. Prager at Collinsville on April 5 were made public yesterday, after all but one of the 16 persons indicted had been placed under arrest.

Coroner Roy A. Lowe, whose investigation resulted in the detention of the first five men, said he had received many threatening letters. The tenor of most of these was to the effect that officials should not attempt to discover the identity of the lynchers.

Writing from San Jose, Cal., a man who did not sign his name, but gave his postoffice box number, said:

"I was born in Illinois: my father, a veteran in the Civil War. I trust you will, with the Justices of your county, refuse to act against the men implicated in the R. P. Prager matter. The sooner such acts are repeated the sooner the war ends. If necessary I will return to old Illinois to sustain your refusal. This confirms my telegram to you today at Collinsville."

Lost Son in an Explosion.

Mrs. B. Thompson writes from Wichita, Kan., to the Coroner and to the Judge who will preside over the hearing:

"Would your city officials punish a man for shooting a mad dog? Don't punish those men that hung Prager, the low German spy. What would Kaiser Bill do to one of ours in Berlin?

"Remember Nurse Cavel.

"Remember the Lusitania.

"Remember the terrible disaster at the Butte (Mont.) copper mines last June. That was fired by a German spy. My dear, beautiful boy, 19 years old, lost his life with 167 other poor souls, young college boys. Our young America there, working to pay their way through school, to meet such a death! I could shoot every low German who gets his living under the Stars and Stripes and still is for Germany. Every true American is crying to you to turn those men loose.

"They did a grand, noble deed to hang the German-dog. We have been too easy on these Germans. The people are sick of putting them in jail for our Government to feed, when our own boys 'over there' need it.

"Please read my letter to the jury; it is from a heartbroken mother, crying for justice in behalf of my darling son, murdered by a German."

Another communication, addressed to Coroner Lowe, unsigned and printed in capitals throughout, was posted on a train on the Illinois Central at Centralia, Ill., said:

"As a warning to you—be careful. The people put you where you are, and the people are the law. The people say 'To hell with the Kaiser and with the German sympathizers.' The people have just awakened in America.

"I may have the pleasure of meeting you face to face, and I say again—be careful.

"Yours truly,
"A FREE BORN AMERICAN."

Judge J. E. Gillham, presiding jurist of the Circuit Court, said yesterday that he considered the letters as of no importance.

Judge Gillham has a nephew, Raymond Pierce, who is now on the firing line in France, and another who is on his way across.

The Judge and the State's Attorney's office were uncertain yesterday when those accused in the Prager case would be tried. Other criminal cases are set for the coming week, and the following week is docketed for civil actions. The week of May 13 is open for criminal cases, but as the May term starts on the fourth Monday, putting the cases over to that term is being considered. It is anticipated that habeas corpus pleas for the release on bond of those indicted for murder may be instituted.

George Davis of Collinsville, who was also indicted and who is now known as the "sixteenth man," was not apprehended and search is now being made for him.

WILL ALLEGE FRAUD IN EFFORT TO FREE MOONEY

Attorney for Convicted Man Says He Will Charge Malfeasance in District Attorney's Office.

SAN FRANCISCO, April 27 (By A. P.).—A new legal battle which may take the case of Thomas J. Mooney, awaiting re-sentence to death on a murder charge, to the United States Supreme Court, was opened here today after it was thought that all possible legal services in Mooney's behalf had been exhausted.

Maxwell McNutt, Mooney's chief counsel, filed notice with Judge Franklin A. Griffin, that on next Thursday he will move that all previous proceedings in Mooney's case be set aside and that he be granted a new trial on the ground of wilful fraud and malfeasance in the office of the prosecution.

The notice was so unusual that Judge Griffin declared he could not at once decide whether he had jurisdiction in the case. This set the proceedings over until Thursday, when McNutt will make his motion and Judge Griffin will then decide his jurisdiction. Meanwhile, Mooney, who was scheduled to be re-sentenced today, gained a short respite.

Based on English Common Law.

McNutt explained that his motion will be based on English common law, which established that any judgment could be attacked where fraud had been committed and could be shown. He said the defense would offer proof of fraud in the proceedings which ended in Mooney's conviction on a murder charge which grew out of the preparedness parade bomb explosion here July 22, 1916.

In the event that his motion is denied McNutt said he would appeal, and declared that the case could be carried to the United States Supreme Court on the ground that Mooney was being deprived of his life without due process of law. An appeal to the highest court was considered a remote contingency by McNutt, who contended that he had ample evidence to support his charge of fraud, and that his motion would be allowed in the lower courts.

Prosecution to Fight Motion.

The prosecution objected to McNutt's proposed motion. District Attorney Charles M. Fickert, who was charged with fraud in the notice, said that if Mooney were not sentenced to death when the case was called Thursday he would appeal to the State Supreme Court for a writ of mandate to compel Judge Griffin to resentence him to hang.

Three affidavits to support the charge of fraud were filed by McNutt with his notice. They were made by Mooney himself, William H. Smith, acting inspector of Oakland, Cal., police department, and F. E. Rigall of Grayville, Ill., who declared that efforts to induce him to testify falsely against Mooney had been made by F. C. Oxman of Oregon. Oxman was a material witness against Mooney and was acquitted later of attempted subornation of perjury in connection with Rigall's charges.

Proposed Mooney Protest Strike Is Called Off.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., April 27 (By A. P.).—The proposed one-day strike May 1 by local labor unions, as a protest against the death sentence imposed on Thomas J. Mooney in San Francisco, has been called off, it was announced today. Labor unions acted in order that industry be not disrupted.

FIVE-YEAR-OLD BOY READY TO PAY CASH FOR BOND

Oliver Biermann Makes Purchase and Boosts Other Sales in His Neighborhood.

Oliver A. Biermann, 5 years old, of 4400 North Broadway, would have you know that he has bought a Liberty Bond and he would like to know whether you have bought yours and, if not, why not. That is the general tenor of his conversation since he signed up day before yesterday for a $50 bond.

When he is notified that his bond is ready he will draw on his account at the Lowell Bank and pay cash for it. This time payment plan doesn't appeal to him. He is wearing his button and it riles him to see anybody without a button and the impromptu speeches he is making are boosting the sale of the bonds in that neighborhood.

Oliver is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Biermann of 1725 North Ninth street, but lives with his uncle, William Huettemann, at the Broadway address. He puts his savings in the bank and so has enough to pay for his bond and a little besides.

GRANITE CITY DOUBLES QUOTA

Announcement Follows Big Demonstration and Parade Yesterday.

At the close of a Liberty Loan demonstration and parade at Granite City yesterday, the Boy Scouts announced that Granite City has doubled its quota of $283,000. The celebration was pronounced the greatest ever held in Granite City. More than 12,000 men, women and children marched in the parade through a pouring rain. All the public school children and teachers were in line, and the Catholic parochial school children were led by the Rev. Father D. J. Ryan of St. Joseph's Catholic Church. All the churches, fraternal orders, Boy Scouts, Red Cross members and industrial workers participated. There were 25 bands, including those from Jefferson Barracks and the Western Military Academy at Alton, which also sent two troops of cadets.

The 100 per cent Liberty Loan industries represented in the parade were: American Steel Foundry, Commonwealth Steel Co., Granite City Steel Works and Rolling Mills, Corn Products and Refining Co., Hoyt Metal Works and the National Enameling and Stamping Co.

OFFERS TO MAKE WESTLICHE POST AN ENGLISH PAPER

DEFENDS LOYALTY OF PUBLICATION

Believes It Could Do More to Help Win the War as a German Language Newspaper.

G. A. Buder, president of the German-American Press Association, which publishes the Westliche Post, in a statement given out yesterday afternoon, in relation to the movement started by the National Security League to suppress all German language newspapers and periodicals, expressed a willingness to convert the paper to English if doing so would help win the war and if English newspapers of the city would consent to the transfer of its Associated Press franchise to an English language paper.

His statement follows:

As president of the Westliche Post, I wish to state that the Westliche Post is an American newspaper printed in the German language and during the 61 years of its existence, its loyalty has never been questioned. The Westliche Post has been licensed by the United States Government and has been and is frequently called upon to publish articles and matter sent to it directly from Washington so that such items may receive a wide range of publicity among those people of the United States who can only read German. It is second to no German language paper in the United States.

I very much regret the feeling which has arisen against the German language newspapers, for I feel and believe that if directed by loyal, patriotic Americans, they are capable of doing and accomplishing more good than the average English paper in the present crisis. President Wilson has repeatedly stated that the foreign language press can be of great service. My purpose and ambition is to have the Westliche Post render that service. The motto of the Westliche Post, carried in English at the top of the front page, reads: "An American Newspaper Standing for American Ideals and Principles." How unswervingly the Westliche Post holds to its declared American policy may best be understood by reading the Liberty day editorial which appeared on its front page, in both English and German, on that day. No firmer and more patriotic editorial has ever been written.

I unqualifiedly and unequivocally state that if converting the Westliche Post from an American newspaper in the German language to one in the English language would in any way, or to any degree, contribute toward our winning the war at an earlier date than otherwise, I would unhesitatingly cause the change to be made.

The Westliche Post has an Associated Press franchise. Everyone knows how reliable the Associated Press dispatches are. The other St. Louis members of the Associated Press represent the Globe-Democrat, Post-Dispatch and the Republic. I hold the membership for the Westliche Post, and unless the Globe-Democrat, Post-Dispatch and Republic waive their right of protest, we could not, without taking other and further steps, which would involve great delay, convert the Westliche Post into an English language paper. Of course, if the papers mentioned will give their consent to the transfer of the Associated Press membership of the Westliche Post to an English language paper, without requiring the Westliche Post to take other action in the premises, the change of the Westliche Post from a German language to an English language daily can be made without much delay. Let us hope their spirit of patriotism will prompt them so to consent.

I point with pride to the good work which the Westliche Post has done towards helping win the war. The loyalty of its staff cannot be questioned. Its editor, Mr. Hans Hackel, was a member of the expeditionary forces to Porto Rico in the Spanish-American War. I was one of that same expedition, and because of the military training I then received, I was and still am anxious to enter service in the present war. My application for an appointment is on file in Washington and I shall gladly do anything I can, either through the Westliche Post or through personal service, which will help win the war.

The Westliche Post subscribed $25,000 to the Second Liberty Loan and has subscribed for $25,000 of the Third Liberty Loan, and every member of the Westliche Post staff is a subscriber. The Westliche Post contributed to the American Red Cross and every member of its staff is a member of the Red Cross. If the editors and publishers of the Westliche Post have left anything undone which a true, red-blooded, loyal American can do towards helping win the war, the same has never been brought to my attention. The Westliche Post is here at the service of the President and the country and whatever the President directs will be done.

No newspaper, English, German or other language, can succeed or ought to succeed unless its policies are American and its columns devoted to winning the war.

George M. Brown, president of the St. Louis branch of the National Security League, received official notification yesterday from the Executive Committee of the national organization of the decision to make a nation-wide fight on German-language publications. Brown said that the procedure here would wait upon suggestions from headquarters, but that probably mass meetings would be held and other steps taken to bring public sentiment to bear.

WHO CONCEIVED THE IDEA OF A "MOTHERS' DAY" AND WHY?

Since May 19, 1914, a day has been set aside every year by the Government at Washington for national celebration in special honor of the home and noble motherhood. When does it occur this year?

Someone conceived the idea. Who was it and why?

What flower should be worn by observers of the day and why?

What is the special tribute asked of observers of that day?

The answers to these questions may be found today in the ANSWERS TO QUERIES column on the first page of the WANTS and REAL ESTATE DIRECTORY.

After reading the answer to the last question, it may set you to thinking as to what would be the most appropriate thing for you to do.

When you get to this point, if "the best mother who ever lived" does not own a home of her own, turn to the Residences For Sale classification and spend a quarter or a half hour in its columns. Or, if you prefer suburban life, turn to the classifications Webster, Kirkwood, Maplewood, Ferguson, University City, Wellston or Suburban Property For Sale.

This may take up a half hour of your time, but who wouldn't give a half hour, a half year—yes, a whole lifetime to bring everlasting joy to the heart of "the best mother who ever lived?"

This joy would mean—A HOME of her OWN!

GREAT LAKES NAVAL BAND TO GIVE DAILY WAR LOAN CONCERTS

Former Gov. Yates of Illinois to Be Speaker at First of Series Tomorrow Night.

A detachment of the Great Lakes Naval Band, consisting of 125 pieces, will give a free public concert in the interest of the Third Liberty Loan at the Coliseum at 8 o'clock tomorrow night. Former Gov. Yates of Illinois will speak and moving pictures, with the Kaiser as star, will be shown.

The band will give daily concerts this week in the down town district and in the high schools at night. Divided into five units, it toured the Eighth Federal Reserve District and was largely instrumental in putting this district "over the top" first.

At Clarksville, Ark., Thursday, an aged man became so enthused with the music that he bid $7500 for "Dixie," in a sale of bonds in which the largest single purchaser was given the honor to name the piece to be played.

NEARLY 90,000 MEN THROUGH BARRACKS HERE WITHIN YEAR

Many Transients Ill, Taken There, Makes Report of High Sick Rate Misleading, Commandant Says.

Since the entrance of the United States into the war a little more than a year ago nearly 90,000 army recruits have passed through Jefferson Barracks, where 12,950 drafted men are to be mobilized early next month. The figures on the number of recruits handled were given yesterday by Col. George K. Hunter, the commandant, in the course of a discussion of health conditions at the post.

A recent dispatch from Washington said that Jefferson Barracks had the highest sick rate of all the army stations. Col. Hunter said this was misleading because it did not take into consideration the fact that Jefferson Barracks cares for many cases of soldiers who become ill while passing through St. Louis. Also cases of illness among recruits attending trade schools in St. Louis are sent to Jefferson Barracks. On the whole, the Colonel said, health conditions are as good at Jefferson Barracks as at any army post.

Preparations are now being made at the Barracks to care for the drafted men who will begin arriving about May 1. About 600 additional tents have been procured to help shelter the men. The first arrivals will come from Illinois. Others will come during the succeeding days up to May 20, from Missouri, Iowa and Kansas.

Jefferson Barracks will not be turned into a training cantonment, such as Camp Funston, but will serve only as a receiving station for drafted men, just as it has been used for regular army recruits. The drafted men will be given final physical examinations there, uniformed and given preliminary drill instruction, remaining not longer than about 10 days, after which they will be sent to regular training camps.

STRAWBERRY PICKERS ENROLLED

Units of 15 to 20 Will Go to Southwest Missouri.

The enrollment of women applicants for strawberry picking in Southwest Missouri this spring was begun yesterday by the Women's Central Committee on Food Conservation, 905 Locust street. Among those who enrolled were Mrs. R. Auer of 4264 Shenandoah avenue and her daughter, Miss Wilma Auer, a Hosmer Hall graduate.

Another applicant was a factory worker who said she wanted to spend her vacation picking strawberries. The women will be organized in units of from 15 to 20, each under a chaperon and supervisor. The growers will furnish houses or tents and fuel, stoves and straw for mattresses. The women must furnish bed tick, towels, cooking utensils and their clothing. They will have to pay their railroad fare to and from Sarcoxie, where the units will be mobilized. The pay will be from 2 to 3 cents a quart.

FILM EXPOSE OF GERMAN PLOTS TO AID LOAN DRIVE

"The Eagle's Eye," Motion Picture Story by William J. Flynn to Be Presented at Coliseum.

An interesting feature of the Third Liberty Loan campaign in St. Louis will be the presentation of "The Eagle's Eye," a moving picture story of the imperial German Government's spies and plots in America, by Wm. J. Flynn, recently retired chief of the United States Secret Service, which will be given free at the Coliseum, at 7:45 o'clock tomorrow night.

There will also be a concert of the Great Lakes Band of 125 pieces, and Richard Yates, former Governor of Illinois will speak.

The theme of the story is an expose of the German Government secret service. William J. Flynn made the following significant statement: "The imperial German agents were quick to realize the importance of American labor as a part of the great industrial machine in this country. In New York were 23,000 longshoremen keeping American exports moving. To stop this great force would pile up on piers, in freight yards and warehouses, millions of dollars' worth of supplies. It is by giving the broadest publicity to such efforts as this by the Kaiser's spies to demoralize America that the nation will become thoroughly aroused to the fullest realization of the dangers threatened by this great secret menace."

There will be three reels of the film. The first episode is "The Hidden Death," showing how the sinking of the Lusitania was plotted and achieved.

MEDICAL SOCIETY DELAYS ACTION ON WEINSBERG CASE

Committee Appointed to Investigate Doctor's Utterances Will Report After Court Disposes of Disloyal Charges.

The St. Louis Medical Society at a meeting last night at 3525 Pine street, on the recommendation of Dr. W. E. Shahan of 6170 McPherson avenue, chairman of a committee appointed a week ago to investigate utterances of Dr. Charles H. Weinsberg of 2805 Lafayette avenue, published in the Post-Dispatch, deferred action until the United States District Court shall have disposed of the charges of disloyalty pending there.

The committee, composed of Dr. Shahan and Dr. F. L. Davis, was appointed at the previous meeting under a resolution introduced by Dr. Albert F. Koetter, President of the society, in accordance with an agreement of the Missouri State Medical Association, concurred in by the St. Louis Medical Society, that any member giving aid and comfort to the enemy would be disbarred from membership.

Dr. Shahan was not present last night but he sent a communication stating that a report would not be made until the court had acted on the charges. The communication was approved by the society.

OVERMAN BILL'S OPPONENTS LOSE IN 2 TEST VOTES

Result Presages Giving of Blanket Authority to President to Reorganize Government Departments.

RESULT ON BOTH BALLOTS CLOSE

Determined Attempt to Exempt Commerce Commission and Reserve Board From Law's Operations.

WASHINGTON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Victory for the administration in the long Senate fight over the bill to confer blanket authority on the President to reorganize Government departments and war agencies was forecast late today in the defeat, by narrow margins, of amendments exempting the Federal Reserve Board and the Interstate Commerce Commission from the operation of the law.

Both amendments were offered by Senator Smith of Georgia, and opponents of the bill concentrated their strength on them. The first, to exempt the Federal Reserve Board, was rejected, 41 to 37, and the second, relating to the Interstate Commerce Commission, was voted down, 42 to 35.

With these tests of strength, which administration leaders said and Senators among the opposition admitted, presaged passage of the bill without limitations on the blanket authority insisted upon by President Wilson, the Senate adjourned until Monday, when it was expected the bill would be passed without important changes.

In the votes on the amendments today, 10 Democratic Senators voted to limit the President's authority. Seven Republicans, however, voted with the Democratic majority against exempting the Federal Reserve Board. Another Republican, Senator Borah of Idaho, joined them in voting down the amendment affecting the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Vote on Amendments.

The roll call on the amendment to except the Federal Reserve Board, on which leaders of the opposition had stated they expected to muster their maximum strength, follows:

For the amendment: Democrats—Chamberlain, Gore, Hardwick, Hitchcock, King, Reed, Smith of Georgia, Thomas, Underwood and Vardaman—10.

Republicans—Borah, Brandegee, Cummins, Curtis, Dillingham, France, Freylinghausen, Gallinger, Gronna, Hale, Harding, Johnson of California, Kellogg, Knox, Lenroot, Lodge, McCumber, New, Norris, Page, Poindexter, Sherman, Smoot, Sterling, Townsend, Wadsworth and Watson—27. Total for, 37.

Against the amendment: Democrats—Ashhurst, Bankhead, Beckham, Culberson, Fletcher, Gerry, Guion, Henderson, Hollis, Jones of New Mexico, Kirby, Lewis, McKellar, Martin, Myers, Nugent, Overman, Phelan, Pitman, Snultsbury, Shafroth, Sheppard, Shields, Simmons, Smith of Arizona, Smith of Maryland, Smith of South Carolina, Swanson, Thompson, Tillman, Trammell, Walsh, Williams and Wolcott—34.

Republicans—Baird, Colt, Jones of Washington, McLean, McNary, Nelson and Warren—7.

Total against, 41.

The same alignment was made on the amendment for exemption of the Interstate Commerce Commission, except that Senator Borah voted with the majority and a few Senators who had voted previously were absent from the chamber.

The tide of today's debate, which was as spirited as any since the bill was first brought before the Senate, April 2, swung apparently with increased force in favor of the bill.

Before the final vote on the bill is taken next week it is planned to have the Senate vote again on the amendments defeated today, as well as on other pending amendment proposing express limitations of the President's authority to co-ordinate Government agencies. Senator Overman, after today's votes, expressed confidence, however, that the measure would be passed in the form the President desires.

Senate's Debate on Bill.

When consideration of the Overman measure was resumed in the Senate today under a limited debate agreement, Colt, Republican, of Rhode Island, declared his support of the measure.

"If the President cannot be trusted to exercise the powers conferred in this bill in a wise and reasonable way he cannot be trusted to exercise the other powers given him," the Senator said. He declared he would vote for the bill because he believed the only way to win the war was for Congress and the people to co-operate with the President.

Senator Kellogg of Minnesota said he would support the amendment eliminating the Interstate Commerce Commission.

Further strength was received by the administration when Senator McLean of Connecticut, Republican, unexpectedly came to the support of the bill. He declared he did not fear abuse of the President's powers, which, he said, should extend to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Reserve Board.

"I will vote for the bill and then hope the President will remove the monkey wrenches from his machine and put in men of demonstrated ability," he said. "I cannot vote on the theory that the President will act unwisely or unpatriotically."

"Slavish beyond words, the attitude of courtship," Senator Lodge asserted of the argument that Congress should not question what use the President might make of the bill's powers.

"The whole theory of our democratic Government is that when unlimited power is given anywhere the rights of the people are crushed," he said. "There is some sort of a theory here that the President needs a personal victory in the Senate, and that some outcomes of votes here are victories. I am glad that he can win a victory, but let me say that the only place to win victories today is across the seas.

"The President, if he will only gather around him men who can win victories; if he will only send men abroad who can command the respect of our allies and will just win this war, so far as I am concerned he can have the presidency and the Senate and everything else."

Replied to by Lewis.

Replying, Senator Lewis of Illinois said any suggestion that the administration had been slow in sending troops to Europe was unfair. The allies, he declared, requested that supplies, instead of soldiers, be sent during the first year after this nation's entrance into the war.

Interrupting to say that he was "somewhat surprised" at this statement, Senator Gallinger of New Hampshire said Gen. Joffre called upon this country when he visited America to send troops immediately, adding that they could be trained in France.

Lewis insisted that Gen. Joffre's first request was for officers to stimulate the allies' morale, and that his later request was for some American regulars that were prepared.

"Gen. Joffre told me personally, 'Send all you possibly can, we can train them over there,'" Lodge interrupted.

The Overman bill, Lewis said, would enable the President to take steps to comply with new demands for American troops.

Another Republican joined the supporters of the bill when Senator McCumber of North Dakota announced he would vote for the measure rather than have Congress criticised for failing to support the President. He indicated he would support amendments, exempting as to the Interstate Commerce Commission and the Federal Reserve Board.

Senator Smith of Georgia said the measure could have been passed two months ago if the administration had consented to exemption of these agencies.

"I am here to tell you that the President has not the slightest idea whatever of interfering with the Federal Reserve Board," Overman replied, asserting that there had been much "cheap talk," politics and unjust criticism of the President in the opposition.

ICE DISTRIBUTION IS PLACED UNDER FOOD CONTROL ACT

Chairman Gephart Calls Conference of Manufacturers and Retailers on May 5 to Discuss Prices.

PROFITEERING WILL BE PROHIBITED

Domestic Consumers Will Be Taken Care of in Preference to Non-Essential Industries.

The manufacture and distribution of ice has been placed under the provisions of the food control act, according to a telegram received yesterday by the Food Administration Committee of St. Louis from the law department of the Federal Food Administration at Washington. Acting on the telegram, Chairman W. F. Gephart of the committee has called a conference of all manufacturers and distributers for May 5 to discuss plans for a uniform scale of prices, and for working out a scheme of co-operation between the local administration and the ice industry.

Chairman Gephart said to a Post-Dispatch reporter that the effect of the ruling of the law department was to place those who handle ice on the same basis as those who sell food, subject virtually to the same regulations.

"The question of whether all manufacturers and dealers of ice are to be licensed depends largely on the amount of co-operation which the Food Administration receives from them in this new arrangement," said Chairman Gephart. "I believe, however, that all will be glad to conform to the new order. I am sending out a letter to all those affected asking them to attend the conference, and requesting them not to increase prices pending the outcome of the meeting.

Will Prohibit Profiteering.

"The Food Committee, under the ruling of the National Administration, is authorized to investigate all price increases, and any evidence of profiteering would result in prosecution under the food act."

One of the chief reasons for the action of Food Administration, it is said, is to protect these persons who are financially unable to buy large quantities of ice. No increases in price will be approved unless dealers can prove through the production of their books that an exorbitant profit is not involved and that the raise is justifiable.

The telegram from the Food Administration reads:

Law Department has ruled that manufacture and distribution on ice comes under food control act. The Food Administration is concerned that there should be no profiteering in ice, and especially that cost of ice to those elements of community which are least able to protect themselves should not be increased over last year unless absolute proof can be given by ice companies as to necessity.

Any increase in price over that ruling last season to the household consumer will therefore justify investigation as to whether it constitutes profiteering. All ice dealers should be required to file with you any proposed schedule of increased prices before these increases are put into effect and no increase to household consumer shall be made until after investigation.

To Aid Domestic Consumer.

Care should be taken not to injure dealers by premature publication of proposed increased schedule. Your attention is called to that section of food control act in which provision is made with regard to unfair practices and in case of proposed increase in price you should investigate tendency to make unreasonably lower prices to commercial users than to domestic consumers considering at all times cost in distribution an unreasonable difference would be an unfair practice.

The ice problem is essentially a local problem and we do not wish to intervene where local dealers do not increase prices or come to any arrangement with municipal authorities which will be satisfactory both to dealer and consumer. If, however, such settlements cannot be made by local authorities in caser where there is an attempt to unreasonably increase prices we suggest that you investigate and in first instance endeavor to arbitrate settlement.

Should this fail please so report and then we are prepared in interest of reasonable prices to use all powers we have including of license in any given locality and to place ice handlers in that locality under restraints of food bill. Greatly hope that matter can be settled by local authorities in all cases and that as few appeals as possible be made to you.

Chairman Gephart said that it might come to a point this summer where the amount of ice which nonessential industries could buy would be limited in order to insure a supply for the consumer.

Dr. Isabel Gray, First Woman Army Surgeon

St. Louis Physician Called Into Service---Will Get Pay and Insignia of First Lieutenant but Not the Commission.

BY MARGUERITE MARTYN.

Dr. Isabel Gray of 5175A Delmar boulevard is the first woman to be called into the service of the United States Army Medical Corps.

She will not have a commission in the army, since, according to laws made before women needed to be consulted as voters, no women may be commissioned in the United States army. The same law militates against Ruth Law, who established several new records in aviation, who has worn the uniform and devoted herself to patriotic service ever since we entered the war, but who isn't permitted to enlist in the aviation corps.

Dr. Gray will be a "contract doctor." She will wear the olive-drab, the scaduces and other insignia of the medical corps and will have the status and privileges, the pay and all the appurtenances that go with the rank of First Lieutenant. So reads her contract signed by Surgeon-General Gorgas.

Woman in Red Cross Work.

St. Louis is furnishing another woman doctor to war work in Dr. Elizabeth Reed, but she goes into the service of the Red Cross.

It was only after long persistence that Dr. Gray broke down the barriers excluding women from service in the army. Eight times in various guises she knocked at headquarters doors. Letters, personal visits to Washington, continued recommendations of the local officers who have had charge of recruiting St. Louis' quota of medical men, always brought the same reply, "We are not taking any women."

Finally one letter left a loophole which Dr. Gray was quick to perceive and of which she immediately took advantage. It was contained in a postscript—who will say that the most important part of a letter, where women are concerned, is not always in the postscript!

To one letter, following the usual formal rejection of a woman's services to her country, was added, as if it were a last, eleventh-hour possibility, "we have just received instruction to admit a few women as anesthetists."

Dr, Gray wired her application to be an anesthetist and by wire her application went under consideration and so quickly was her examination passed that there is every reason to believe her case was the first acted upon and that she was the first woman accepted.

DR. ISABEL GRAY.

The physical examination, more severe and no different in application than that required of male officers, was an order to test not only the physical endurance but the earnestness of more than the average woman. This test she passed excellently.

Quickly Passes Examination.

And when it came to examination in professional equipment, Dr. Gray was able to show such exceptional qualifications, both of education and experience, that there was no denying her capacity and value as a surgeon wherever she might be needed. Even the usual intensive special training required of many newly recruited anesthetists is to be waived in her case, her ability being too well known to physicians on the Examining Board, whom she has assisted in that capacity.

Dr. Gray leaves an extensive practice in St. Louis, her patients being mainly children in whose maladies she has specialized. She is enthusiastic over her appointment to take part in the biggest medical job Uncle Sam ever has contracted for. In an interview she expressed herself as glad to serve in the comparatively subordinate position of anesthetist if it will relieve another surgeon for service where he is more urgently needed. And as a woman, who, by her connection with public spirited movements, with suffrage, the Town Club and other such organizations—she always has shown herself interested in the advancement of women— she was gratified at having established a precedent which may be the opening of another road to equal opportunity for women.

FIRST WEEK OF FUR SALES ENDS WITH $4,000,000 TOTAL

The week's buying at the fur sale of Funsten Bros. & Co. totaled $4,000,000. The 350 buyers in attendance have remained for the second week's sale. Opinion was expressed that the War Trade Board embargo on the importation and exportation of furs will not be felt in North America, but will have an effect upon America's associates in war.

Yesterday's sale was marked by the first appearance in this market of New Zealand rabbit skins, which brought an unexpected price, 25,000 pounds selling for $60,000. Civet rose 20 per cent in price under spirited bidding in the belief that, because of war shortage of other materials, women next winter will be wearing fur-lined coats, for which civet is expected to be the most desired lining.

He was a son of Gustav Pauk, who died in 1907, and of Emma Pauk, who died the next year, and from whom he inherited the estate.

PRIEST DENOUNCES NEGROES' MOVING INTO HIS PARISH

Pastor of St. Ann's Catholic Church, From Pulpit, Says They Are Not Welcome in His Congregation.

ASKS THEM TO STAY AWAY IN FUTURE

The Rev. Father Walsh Says People in His Parish Are Terrified as Colored Folks Buy in 4200 Cook Block.

The invasion of the 4200 block on Cook avenue by negroes who have taken up their residence in the neighborhood hitherto occupied exclusively by white persons, caused the Rev. Father Walsh, pastor of St. Ann's Catholic Church, Whittier street and Page boulevard, last Sunday to call upon his communicants from his pulpit to protest against the coming of the negroes.

Father Walsh told a Post-Dispatch reporter last night that he had said in his sermon that negroes were hovering over the white people like airplanes over a battlefield. Coming to the front of his chancel, he said, he announced that if there were any negroes in his congregation, they should know that they were not welcome and in the future to stay away from his church. He said that he previously had observed without objection the presence of a few negroes among the worshipers in his church.

Blames Realty Profiteers.

Father Walsh, in relating the incidents of the last few weeks, said that he believed the coming of the negroes was the work of profiteering real estate men who desired to force down values and seize the opportunity to purchase property at prices much below its actual value. He also advised that the women of the neighborhood should organize some sort of a military company in which they could receive instruction in ways to protect themselves from the negroes, whom he described as intolerably bold. He said that the people of his parish actually were terrified by their new living conditions.

Many who own property in the 4200 block on Cook avenue have placed "for sale" signs before their homes and, according to Father Walsh, others who are renters have signified their intention of moving.

"The first negro family to venture into the white neighborhood came three weeks ago," Father Walsh said. He was followed by two other families.

"There had been negro residents of the parish, but only along its boundaries, never in the heart of the parish. There are many negro families along the north side of Finney avenue, which is one line of parish, and about one block west of Sarah street, which is another boundary. Now there also is a negro family in the 4100 block of Cook avenue, come within a week.

Clashes Have Resulted.

"Clashes already have resulted from the intrusion. The building at 4233 Cook avenue has been stoned repeatedly by boys. The damage has been more than nominal, I understand. The negro boys have retaliated by rocking the windows of my church on their way to school.

"The negroes promenade on streets hitherto unfrequented by others than whites. The white women are afraid to venture out after night. Petty crime has increased.

"This coming of the negroes also threatens the disintegration of my parish, which represents an investment of $200,000 in church building and parochial school, where 135 white children attend. My congregation has in seven years shrunk from 400 to 250 families and now is facing still further sacrifice by the further encroachment of these negroes."

COUPLE WITH FIVE SONS IN SERVICE HONORED BY TOWN

Silk Flag Presented by Hays, Kan., to Parents Whose Sixth Son Will Enlist Shortly.

HAYS, Kan., April 27 (Special).—A silk service flag of five stars was formally presented by the city of Hays to Mr. and Mrs. Anton Gross, at a celebration here yesterday which packed the largest theater. Five of their sons are already in the army and a sixth will enlist as soon as the school where he is teaching closes for the summer. This will make six of the eight Gross sons in the service of Uncle Sam.

One is already in France and another supposed to have sailed.

Mrs. Gross, the mother, responded to a speech of presentation. She thanked the people of Hays and said she deemed it a privilege to have been the mother of the men who would help to make the right more powerful than force and aggression.

Martin Gross is with the 137th Infantry, John is in France in the heavy artillery, Theodore is at Jefferson Barracks, Paul is supposed to have sailed for France, and Jacob is at Camp Greene, N. C.

CAMPS FOR ARTILLERY OFFICERS

WASHINGTON, April 27 (By A. P.).—Special training camps for artillery officers are to be established at Camp Jackson, S. C., and Camp Eustis, near Fort Monroe, Va.

Camp Jackson will be given over to instruction of field artillery eligibles from the third officers' training camps. About 4000 men will be ordered there. Camp Eustis will be used for heavy artillery, comprising former coast artillery units. It will be a two-brigade camp.

GEORGE BELCHER ORDERED TO QUIT AS SALOON MANAGER

Excise Commissioner Says This Will Correct Conditions About Which Police Complain.

Excise Commissioner Lewis announced yesterday that George Belcher, manager of a saloon and cafe at 519 Market street, would have to sever his connection with the establishment, which is licensed in the name of his brother, Vincent Belcher. Lewis made this ruling following an investigation of a complaint that women police characters frequented the saloon.

Policemen of the Central District visited the saloon about two weeks ago and arrested two women customers. At the trial before Commissioner Lewis on Wednesday patrolmen walking beats in the vicinity of Sixth and Market street testified that they had never observed bad characters in the saloon and that it was not disorderly.

Commissioner Lewis said he thought his order compelling George Belcher to quit the management of the saloon would correct conditions of which Capt. Schwartz of the Central District, complained.

BRINKMAN HEADS LIEDERKRANZ

Ben G. Brinkman, vice president of the Lafayette-South Side Bank, was chosen president of the Liederkranz Club at the annual election of the organization held yesterday. Frederick Widmann is the retiring president. Otto Tietjens was elected first vice president and Otto Gossrau second vice president. The directors elected are Albert H. Bertram, E. W. Stamm, Charles J. Sutter, George J. Texter, Jacob Walter, Frederick Widmann, Louis F. Yeckel, Andrew Abank, O. W. Linde and R. G. Huber.

It was announced that the membership of the club will be asked to vote, at a meeting Tuesday night, on the advisability of changing the name of the club to something more American and on a proposal to keep the records of the club henceforth only in English, instead of in English and German, as at present.

BILL REQUIRES LICENSE FOR EACH DRIVER OF AUTO

Measure Before Aldermen Requiring Chauffeurs' Plate for Everybody—Protested by Owners and Dealers' Organization.

If Board Bill No. 3, now pending in the St. Louis Board of Aldermen should become a law, every person who drives an automobile on the streets of the city of St. Louis will be required to take out a drivers' or chauffeur's license, every six months. This license is to cost $1 each six months.

The bill was introduced by Alderman McChesney, by request on April 16. It has had its second reading and has been referred to the Legislative Committee, and a public hearing will be announced this week.

A vigorous protest against the passage of the proposed law is to be made by the automobile trade, and by organizations representing automobile owners in St. Louis. The St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' & Dealers' Association will have delegations at the hearing to protest. So will the Motor Accessory Association. The Automobile Club of St. Louis will send a delegation and a special committee of three has been appointed by the new South Side Automobile Club.

The principle provisions of the proposed bill are that it will be unlawful for any person, whether owner, hired chauffeur, employe, either male or female, to drive or operate an automobile, auto truck, auto car, auto cab or other auto vehicle, through or on any street without having first obtained a license permitting him or her to do so.

Violations will be punishable by a fine of not less than $10 or more than $25 for the first offense. The second offense would be punishable by a fine of $25 to $50 and a workhouse sentence.

A provision of the bill requires that the applicant for the license must give good satisfactory proof to the license collector that he or she is a proper person to be trusted with an automobile in the public streets, and shall give evidence of skill, experience and general knowledge of automobiles, and of the traffic laws governing streets, and shall pay a fee of $1 for each six months. The license is nontransferable and when found in the possession of any person to whom it was not issued, it is to be taken up, and not renewed.

Licenses will not be issued to persons of vicious or flagrantly immoral character, to anyone of criminal or police record, to any one addicted to intoxication, and the police are to make the investigations for the license collector.

The bill presupposes that a boy of 18 has more inteligence than a woman of 20, because it specifies that license shall not be granted to any male person under the age of 18 nor to any female person under the age of 20. The license can be revoked at any time because of misconduct or serious accident, or for reckless or careless driving.

NEW LOCAL AUTO CLUB WANTS 2000 MEMBERS

The final organization of the South Side Automobile Club of St. Louis was completed at a meeting held Thursday night at Victor and Jefferson avenues. This new automobile club has been in process of formation for the past two months, but formal organization was not completed until the return from Jefferson City of articles of incorporation under a pro porma decree of the Circuit Court of St. Louis.

Expression at the first meeting was enthusiastic as to the future of the club, and predictions were made that there will be at least 2000 members enrolled by Aug. 1. The membership fee for the first year only and for charter members, has been fixed at $2.

It is planned ot have a clubhouse probably with cafe attachment, a paid secretary, who will keep on file touring and other information. The principal purpose of the club, as expressed at the meeting, was to actively look after street improvements and street repairs in St. Louis and road improvements and repairs in the counties surrounding St. Louis, and to watch out for legislation for and against motorists, and to take a hand in every movement in which motoring or good roads are concerned.

A strong resolution was passed, condemning Board Bill No. 3, now pending in the Board of Aldermen, which will require that every person, male or female, who drives an automobile in St. Louis must take out a driver's license every six months. A committee of three, Frank Riefling, Albert Von Hoffman and Henry Mene, City Treasurer, was appointed to appear before the Board of Aldermen to present the resolution of protest.

The election of officers to serve for the first year resulted in the selection of Henry P. Riefling for president, Albert Von Hoffman for vice president, W. F. Heinecke for secretary and Eugene J. Sartorius for treasurer. Other members of the board of directors selected were, Earnst Hess, Henry Menne and Frank J. Riefling. The new president appointed a committee on membership and another committee that would arrange for a service station with telephone in St. Louis County, and another to look into the matter of mutual insurance.

REX MADE SUB-DEALER.

The Rex Motor Car Co., 2201 Pestalozzi street, has been made sub dealer in St. Louis under the Briscoe Motor Sales Co. for the Brisco and Liberty lines. Manager Frank Bishop of the Briscoe Co., reports unusual activity both in the retail and the wholesale fields, the principal difficulty being in getting enough cars to supply the demand.

A Liberty shipment arrived last week which included a sedan, a coupe and a special roadster. W. J. Carter, district manager for the Liberty, is now at the factory in Detroit, endeavoring to hasten shipments to St. Louis.

Used cars and auto accessories are being sold through Post-Dispatch Wants.

WILL ESTABLISH CENTRAL SERVICE FOR CAR OWNERS

St. Louis Plan Contemplates Closing of All Agency Service Nights and Sunday and One Station Subject to All Calls.

An important movement will be proposed at the next meeting of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association. To the automobile owner, the importance is in the probable establishment of three or four service stations located in convenient parts of the city for the accommodation of owners, whose cars may need attention after closing hours or on Sundays.

According to President Joseph A. Schlecht of the association, the centralized service station idea originated with Herman L. Schnure of the Velie Automobile Co.

Schnure's plan is to have a principal station at, say, Compton and Leonard avenue, with the Henry Motor Service Co., another in North St. Louis, a third in West St. Louis and a fourth in South St. Louis. Then, if the motorist has mechanical trouble of any kind, needing immediate assistance, he will telephone to the nearest station, instead of calling up the firm from which he bought his car, knowing, as he will, that the firm is closed after 6 o'clock p. m. and all day Sunday.

To carry out the idea, cards will be issued to motorists by the firms from which they buy their cars, giving telephone numbers of the several stations and these stations would only give emergency service, not attempting general repair work, which would be left to the option of the owner of the car.

The real purpose of this move is to meet the requirements of the War Department for mechanics. At present nearly every automobile dealer in St. Louis maintains night and Sunday service which frequently is not called into use. If the central service idea becomes a fact, this will release for war service possibly as many as 100 skilled mechanics from St. Louis.

A committee consisting of H. L. Schnure and Phil H. Brockman of the De Luxe Automobile Co., has been instructed to report fully on the proposed plan at the next meeting of the association, and it is announced the committee is distinctly committed to the idea of having all of the service stations established under one general management and direction.

TO STANDARDIZE SERVICE

A bureau of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' and Dealers' Association, to be known as the "Junior Officers' Bureau, is to be established, the membership of which is to consist of the accounting and service officers of the various automobile agencies of St. Louis.

The plan was advanced to the association by W. L. Housman, secretary of the Velie Automobile Co., and adopted. The purpose will be for this bureau to have separate meetings for the discussion of standardized accounting methods, by all automobile agencies and of standardized service methods.

An important conference of salesmen and officers of the Federal Truck Co. of St. Louis, with L. B. Dudley, advertising manager of the Federal Truck Co., and J. Fred Woodruff, advertising man, was held early last week. Announcement was made by Allen Baker, president of the company, that a 1½-ton truck was driven to Marion, Ill., recently in 10 hours by Fred D. Dow, for delivery to the Goddard Grocer Co., branch house there, and a five-ton Federal truck for freighting across the Free Bridge, bought by the Noble Express and Transfer Co., is now being fitted with an enormous body by the Franz Carriage and Wagon Co.

ENTHUSIASTIC OVER TRUCK OUTLOOK HERE

On an inspection tour of the Middle West Gramm-Bernstein dealers, H. B. Willower, general sales manager of the factory, and G. W. Stratton of the Stratton-Gramm-Bernstein Truck Co. of Chicago, last week visited the Welling Motor Co., 5033 Delmar avenue, which has recently taken over the St. Louis distribution of this truck.

Both Stratton and Willower were enthusiastic over the prospects here in the truck field and especially gratified over the arrangements the Welling company had made for giving service to the many Gramm-Bernstein owners now in St. Louis. A large shipment of parts will be received this week and a portion of the service station will be devoted exclusively to truck work.

Welling will leave next week for the Gramm-Bernstein factory at Lima, O., and the Olympian factory at Pontiac, Mich. The factory has promised him a large shipment of the new Olympian models and it is to arrange for these that he is making his trip to Pontiac.

Several new Olympian dealers have been appointed in the territory recently, among which are: A. F. Maurer Carriage and Auto Co., Cape Giradeau, Mo.; Blum Bros., Kahokia, Mo.; C. H. Keker, Decatur, Ill.; Sunnen Auto Co., Mexico, Mo.; Olympian Auto Sales Co., Charleston, Mo.; C. A. Skaelton, Eldorado, Mo.; Caruthersville Plumbing and Supply Co., Caruthersville, Mo.

SECURED TRUCK DELIVERY

F. H. Fahrenbrog of the Kardell Motor Car Co., returned last week from the Kelly-Springfield Truck factory at Springfield, O., where he arranged for the delivery immediately of a number of the two and one-half ton size.

For some time the Kardell company has been short on this size although they have been able to get regular delivery of the heavier models. This shipment will make the third large order of Kelly trucks that has been placed by the local distributers, it being almost impossible for them to get a sufficient number to accumulate a reserve stock of any size.

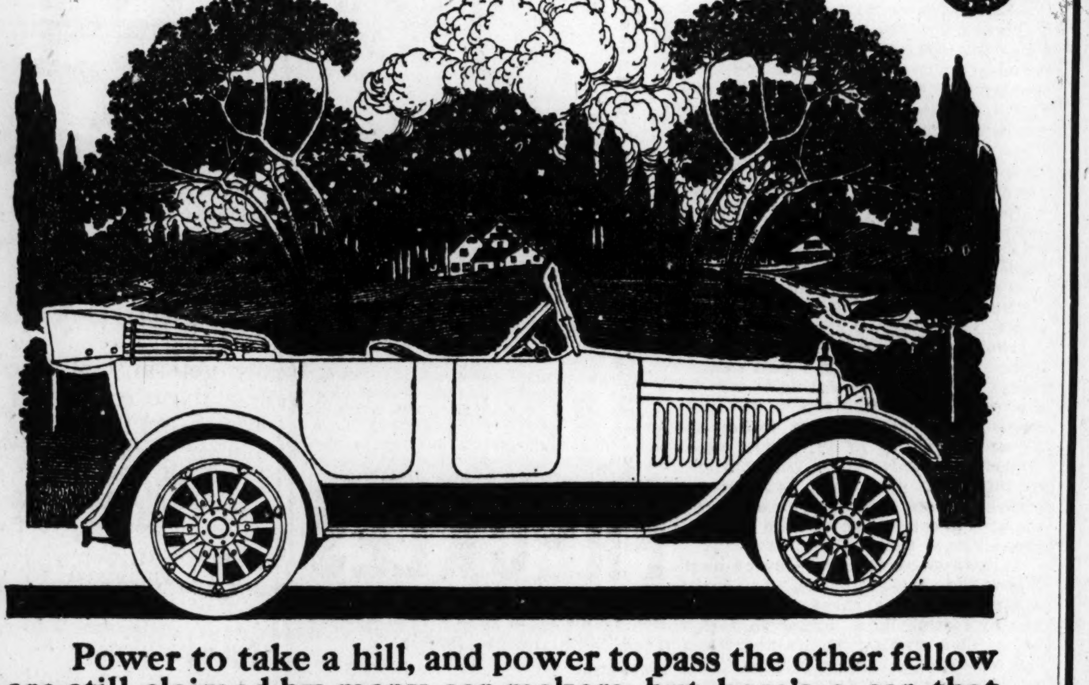
An engine that translates gas into a new kind of thrilling power through the "Hot-Spot" and "Ram's-Horn" Manifold—Chalmers devices



Power to take a hill, and power to pass the other fellow are still claimed by many car makers; but here's a car that puts such expressions into the dark ages of automobiling.

It is the current Chalmers, equipped with the famous "Hot-Spot" and "Ram's-Horn" Manifold, which wrings from gas more power than was ever taken out of gas before.

But not merely brutal power (for that it has), but a newer kind, a softness of power that is as thrilling to bear witness to as the technique of a great musician.

Accomplished how? By those two great devices: a "Hot-Spot", which fairly cooks the gas, then "cracks it up fine as a powder", and the "Ram's-Horn" Manifold which "sets it down" in the combustion chambers with celerity and without disturbance.

So that when the spark touches it off, it gives nothing but power; soft, harnessed, controlled power that you will never forget once you have had its feel.

QUICK AND ECONOMICAL TRANSPORTATION

Nash Trucks Prevent Hauling Delays

Your business is protected against hauling delays when Nash trucks are carrying your loads.

Congested freight conditions have made your hauling problem more vital than ever before. The one solution seems to be a greatly increased use of high grade motor trucks such as the Nash.

For long range hauling between cities, as well as for a greatly extended transportation service within the city itself, Nash trucks are especially adapted.

They are unusually powerful, dependable and economical in the hardest service. Equipped with automatic locking differentials, they get through where other trucks not possessing this important feature cannot go.

This automatic differential is an equalizer of power. If for any reason one driving wheel loses traction momentarily, its mate gets practically all the power and pulls the truck out of difficulty.

Let a Nash transportation expert show you which Nash truck will best fit your hauling needs.

DEMAND FOR TRUCKS IS UNPRECEDENTED

The constantly increasing demand for motor trucks coupled with the gigantic requirements of the Government is taxing the capacity of the truck factories. Frank A. Martin of the Martin Motor Truck Co., who returned last week from a visit to the Denby truck plant at Detroit, reports building activity on a large scale at the factory.

Since Jan. 1 two large buildings have been completed and put in use, doubling the former capacity of the plant. However, the demand for the Denby, which is of the internal gear type, has already outgrown the increased output to a point where it has been found necessary to start construction on two other large additions.

These are well along toward completion and Martin reports that within a few months they will be daily turning out additional trucks. While at the factory he was advised by officials that while the Denby factory is co-operating to the limit with the Government, it will make every effort to increase production to keep pace with the constant demand from individual commercial users.

TRUCK USE IN ST. LOUIS GROWS TO LARGE EXTENT

Wide Range of Businesses Have Motorized Deliveries and Use of One Truck Leads to Elimination of Horse.

Rapid strides have been made in the last year, and even more so in the last six months, in motor truck transportation in St. Louis. The number of new trucks that are appearing on the street has been a source of much comment.

Three principal factors have entered into this big movement toward motoring transportation. In these strenuous times new conditions are arising in almost every business that requires transportation. Manufacturing concerns find increased burdens placed upon their delivery system. They must be speeded up to meet the requirements. Where heavier loads must be hauled or quicker time made, trucks have been the only solution, and the business world has turned toward it.

Horse Cost Prohibitive.

The constantly increasing cost of horse transportation has also had a definite influence. The market page will show the hitherto unparalleled heights to which oats, hay, straw and other feeds have soared. The war demand on the horse markets has put values on horses that change any past appraisal of the cost of a horse-drawn system. Thus, from a comparative standpoint, trucks are becoming more economical every day.

But the element that has been by far the most influential in bringing about the increased use of motor transportation is within the truck itself—its proven value to the user. The motor truck can in no sense be considered an experiment in any line of business, for it has proved its efficiency, its stamina and its practicability.

Competition in business, the new standard of service rendered by firms using trucks, has forced many a firm to recently make its first investigation concerning motorizing their equipment.

One Leads to Other Trucks.

No better argument in favor of the truck can be given than the percentage of trucks that are purchased by firms already operating one or more machines. The first one might have been an experiment, but the second or third or fourth were purchased only on the strength of performance. In going over the list of owners of one heavy duty truck dealer, it was found that out of 86 trucks in use, 61 are operated by concerns owning more than one and that nearly half of the remainder are used by firms that also operate trucks of other makes. This kind of proof of efficiency cannot be refuted.

In any discussion of the value of trucks, the part taken by the Government cannot be overlooked. Thousands upon thousands have been ordered after the most exhaustive test ever given. These trucks are driven overland from the factories to the concentration points on the seaboard. Plans are now on foot for their extensive use in the mail service. Anyone who wishes to get at the bottom of the truck question should investigate the results of the Government's tests and the final unqualified indorsement of motor transportation.

Forced by Railroad Situation.

The railway congestion and the necessity of firms to make deliveries to surrounding towns has made many firms turn to trucks as a real salvation. There are several firms which are operating motor trucks to the suburban towns within a radius of 50 and 60 miles of St. Louis on a regular schedule, while, in addition to this, firm after firm has put its own machines into interurban service at a great saving of time and inconvenience to its customers.

In this connection the Government has urged the adoption of some means to supply these trucks with return loads. It is urged that this be carried further than interurban delivery and arrangements be made to economize on delivery expense within the city through the solution of the return load problem.

Several local truck dealers are giving much thought to this problem and plan to urge the local dealers' association to appoint a committee to work along these lines.

Versatility of the Truck.

The versatility of motor truck transportation cannot be better illustrated than by pointing to the wide range of firms that now operate them. Men familiar with the truck situation in St. Louis make the statement that there is not a line of business where hauling is a factor that is not listed among those now using motor transportation. It would be, of course, impossible to enumerate all the firms now using trucks, but the following list gives 50 firms that have purchased trucks within the past 30 days:

Arron & Ferrier, junk dealers; Avery Coal and Mining Co., Becker Ice and Fuel Co., A. Braun Manufacturing Co., pickles and vinegar; Broderick & Bascom Rope Co., William Braumer, contract hauling; Bruckman Cooperage Co., Coca Cola Bottling Co., Craudolet Express Co., Du Pont Powder Co., David G. Evans Coffee Co., Fruit Supply Co., commission merchants; Goddard Grocery Co., wholesale; Goedde Lumber Co., wholesale; Grafeman Dairy Co. Peter Grossgloss, truck gardener; Gruendler Manufacturing Co., butcher supplies; Gunn Transfer Co.

Kroger Grocery Co., retail; Haas-Leiber Grocery Co., wholesale; Hartman & Sons Commission Co., Hesse Envelope Co., Hub Furniture Co., Wm. Jacobsmier, county delivery; Albert Kalkbrenner, drayman; May, Stern & Co., furniture; Missouri Portland Cement Co., John T. Milliken Co., chemists; Missouri and Illinois Coal Co., Missouri Motor Transportation Co., National Candy Co., Noble Express Co., Robinson Coal Co, George P. Schmidt Produce Co.

Stifel Brewing Co., St. Louis Basket and Box Co., St. Louis Express Co., St. Louis Lumber Co., Henry Schutter & Son, coal; Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., Southern Illinois Light and Power Co., C. L. Smith Gasoline and Coal Co.

GENERAL OBSERVANCE OF NEW HEADLIGHT LAW

With the improvement of road conditions throughout the country districts, the town and township officials are awaking to the fact that Missouri has a law which forbids glaring headlights, according to the reports of many Missouri dealers who have been in St. Louis to drive out cars.

The conditions of the roads on Feb. 1 when the law went into effect, were such that there was but little motor travel. With the opening of spring this is rapidly changed and with it is coming the enforcement of the safety headlight law.

Several serious accidents have already been reported through the State which were primarily caused by the drivers being blinded by the lights of other machines. These have awakened the officials and reports of enforcement are being received from many sections.

Additional evidence of this was given by H. A. Burch of the Auto Devices Co., who reported that last week over 50 cars that dealers drove home from St. Louis were equipped with Osgood Lenses before leaving St. Louis.

The city officials here have had little difficulty in enforcing the law. The St. Louis motorists have long realized the need and safety of lenses which eliminate the glare and yet give good roadlight, and they respond to the law readily. It has not been necessary at any time for the police to make a crusade against them.

However, the police are keeping an eye open for glaring headlights and hardly a day passes but that some motorist is effectively reminded that the law is in force. The attitude of the Police Department has been to give ample notice and not to embarass the motorist and the public has appreciated it to the exetnt that few cars are seen on the street that do not have proper lenses. This condition will soon prevail throughout the entire State. The sooner this is true the sooner one of the gravest dangers will be removed for Missouri motorists.

OUTPUT REDUCTION REPORT UNFOUNDED

A telegram was received Friday from the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce, by President Joseph A. Schlecht, of the St. Louis Automobile Manufacturers' & Dealers' Association, which is intended to reassure the automobile trade and automobile buyers, as to possible curtailment of output of passenger cars. The report has been printed, as telegraphed from Washington, indicating that there is to be a general curtailment of thirty per cent of passenger cars. The telegram from the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce reads as follows:

"St. Louis Auto Manufacturers' & Dealers' Association: A meeting of the special committee on the next twelve month's production of passenger automobile is scheduled for Washington on May sixth. There is no basis for newspaper articles, indicating that any decision has been reached as to the curtailment of production. The story was a result of an interview with an official, but no authoritative figures were given. You will be advised of any action.

CARS SHOULD BE PREPARED FOR SUMMER

"It is not unusual for the man who has stored his car all winter to give it a good overhauling when he takes it out in the spring," says John Boe, manager for the Mitchell Automobile Co., Inc., of St. Louis. "But how many people who have driven their cars all winter stop to realize that with the coming of spring and summer, there is a definite change in the character of service the car will be called upon to render, necessitating equally definite provisions to get the greatest economy and pleasure.

"One of the first things to think of is to remove the anti-freeze mixture from the cooling system. Anti-freeze mixtures generally boil at considerably lower temperatures than pure water and this is the simple explanation of many a strange case of 'overheating' in the spring and early summer.

"The cooling system should not only be drained by opening the drain cocks or removing the plugs, but a generous cleaning by forcing water through it from a hose should be given. In fact, the careful operator will make the system chemically clean by using a soda solution—a pound of ordinary washing soda is enough for a car—being sure to wash out the soda with pure water. He will also take the pains to remove and inspect the rubber water connections.

"Another spring hint which will bear repetition," continued Boe, "is to use heavier lubricants throughout the car. This is especially true of the oil in the motor and the grease in the transmission and differential. It is not enough simply to drain out the old oil or grease. They should be washed out along with any deposits or sediment with a copious dose of kerosene.

"It is an old automobile axiom and never so true as today, that every minute spent tuning the car up in the spring will mean hours of pleasant, satisfactory service in summer."

COMBING WON'T RID HAIR OF DANDRUFF

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight, and by morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better. You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.—ADV.

NEW WAR COLORS BEAUTIFY LIBERTY

The natural spring desire for relief from the sombre colors that have prevailed in motor car decoration during the winter, and in fact for several seasons past, is pleasingly gratified by the attractive color designs shown in recent models of the Liberty Six, in which striking use is made of the new war colors.

One of the most pleasing color schemes ever turned out at the Liberty factories is that of the four passenger "chummy" roadster. This car is finished entirely in "Mist o' Marne" blue, a beautiful new war color. It is really different, and sets off the four passenger car to a queen's taste. The color is serviceable and at the same time unusual.

A color combination which is particularly pleasing is that in which the two passenger roadster is finished. The body of this car is painted "Artillery Red," a rich, bright shade. A strip of rounded black molding starts at a point a few inches from the hood and follows the body lines to the bottom of the rear deck. This rear deck slopes down to a tapered, rounded point. The wheels are red, striped with black. The two passenger car instantly gives the impression of thoughtful good taste, while still conveying an appearance that is far from ordinary.

The standard "Liberty Blue" of the touring car has maintained such steadfast popularity that this color will be continued. It is handled in St. Louis by the Briscoe Motor Sales Co.

DOCTOR BOUGHT CAR ON ITS REPUTATION

Paying his own expenses to St. Louis and then driving home a brand new automobile was not considered a hardship by Dr. William Ellery of La Grange, Mo., when he discovered that his practice in Lewis County demanded a motor car he could put full reliance in to always be ready to answer a call far out into the country. The unreliable time freight shipment could be made from St. Louis to La Grange caused him to make the drive.

He needed an automobile in his practice. Because he desired a car that was known to possess reliability of performance, coupled with economy in fuel and upkeep the Lewis County physician chose a Maxwell car.

"I decided on a Maxwell after learning that it was the automobile which held the world's title for long-time running—44 days and nights—without a motor stop," Dr. Ellery told Milton Koenig of the Weber Implement Co., St. Louis territory distributors of all Maxwell products.

"Any car which could stand up to that test, and which no other car has ever come near equaling, should stand up going over the hills of Lewis County," declared the physician. He also discovered that the Maxwell held many other world's records such as the greatest one-day's touring, 803 miles from Detroit-Indianapolis-Chicago to Detroit in less than 24 hours. Besides these two big records the Maxwell salesmen called Dr. Ellery's attention to the many road records and gasoline economy records established by the Maxwell engine—which is the same today as the one which made the great 44 days and nights test run.

TAKES BOSCH PLANT BUT SUPPLIES PARTS

Speaking of the Government's recent taking over of the Bosch magneto plant, George Holthaus of the Holthaus Saddlery and Auto Supply Co., 3225 Locust street, local Bosch agent, has been advised that production will go on as usual and although a large part will be used by the Government, parts will still be available.

Government officials have asked the Holthaus company to place a certain number of army mechanics in its shop to train them for magneto experts for the service. Several men from the mechanical divisions of the army have already completed their course of instruction and others are being detailed for this schooling in magneto work.

DISAPPOINTS THE CROAKER

"The world seems to have a certain quota of commercial croakers, whose mission is to keep the rest of the world on tip toes and not too sanguine. For instance, our difficulties in bringing out a car at a little over a thousand dollars, were greatly exaggerated, before we began, by a lot of commercial croakers," said Stewart McDonald, vice president and general manager of the Moon Motor Car Co., St. Louis.

"We began the manufacture of our new light six, our 6-36, under the false prognosis that it would not sell. In all our years of building automobiles we have never met such warm support as on this model. Though the material market has forced us to charge $1295 for it, we are selling every 6-36 that we can turn out in our plant and we are booked far ahead with orders from our dealers.

"My conclusion is that any man who wants an automobile had better get in his order now. I even predict a higher range of values for good used cars before the end of the 1918 season."

One Kind That "Pep" Hornsby Never Falls For: a Highball on the Inside

CARDINALS BEATEN IN 12 INNNINGS IN FINAL AT CHICAGO

Knot Holers Rally and Take Lead in Eighth, but Bruins Take Third Straight When Meadows Falters.

TYLER WINS FIRST OUT WITH NEW CLUB

Southpaw Formerly With Braves Makes Bow for Mitchell's Club — Hornsby's Error Hurts.

CHICAGO, April 27.—The St. Louis Cardinals escaped from this city tonight highly pleased to get away. They dropped a heart-breaking fracas today to the Cubs, 5 to 4, in a dozen innings. The defeat was hard to take, as the locals practically presented them with a chance to get into the running, and it was the third straight time the Cards came out on the wrong end of the score here.

No one can put a finger on a certain spot in the contest and pick it out as the turning point. It was full of curves, ups and downs, ins and outs and all of the uncertainties that go to make up the national pastime. Hornsby might be blamed, as he made an error at a critical point. The pitchers, too, should be censured, as they issued passes that resulted in runs.

Where It Began.

But to start at the proper place. George (Lefty) Tyler was on the mound for the Cubs. It was his first start here as a Chicagoan. Horstman opposed the former Brave. Things began to happen to the St. Louis hurler in the second round. Paskert and Merkle opened with singles and were advanced by Kilduff. Deal stepped in with a double that counted both men.

Nothing transpired until the visitors fourth when Hornsby doubled after one was out. Rogers watched Cruise fan, then Paulette smashed a single to left, which with the aid of a fumble by Mann, allowed Hornsby to tally.

Deal's single following a similar blow by Merkle accounted for the third Cub run. This crossed over in the seventh. The next round was the big one for Hendrick's men. The Cardinal manager did some judicious switching. Snyder hit for Horstman and doubled as a starter. Smyth then ran for the catcher. Smith cracked a one baser that placed Smyth on third. Niehoff rolled to Deal and Charley heaved wildly toward second and Smyth scored. Hornsby popped out and Menze fanned but Paulette smote a single that scored Smith and Niehoff. That was all and it put St. Louis one run ahead.

Hornsby's Fumble Hurts.

Lee Meadows took up the hurling job and might have clung to the narrow lead, but Hornsby fumbled Flack's grounder. Hollocher walked and Barber beat out an infield hit filling the bases. Les Mann hit safely through Baird and the score was tied.

The two teams then battled until the twelfth when Lee became unsteady and started by passing Kilduff. Deal beat out a bunt and Kilduff went to third when Meadows hit Kilduff with the ball trying to get him at second. Tyler's fly to Jack Smith was long enough to let in the winning run.

The Cardinals next stop is Cincinnati. They open there tomorrow.

Cruise was ejected from the game in the fourth when he kicked on Hank O'Day's decision calling him out on strikes. Menze took his place. Cruise probably was right as Hank handed the Cards a close one previously and perhaps was trying to even up.

He "Kicked" Too Long.

However, his crudeness in objecting to Hank getting square rolled the umpire's finer sensibilities. O'Day had refused to recognize interference on the part of Gonzales when he deliberately got in Kilduff's way on a bunt. This brought strenuous kicking from Manager Mitchell and probably is the real reason Cruise was tincanned.

Gene Paulette had a great day with the stick. He got three hits. Hornsby kicked in with two.

MUNICIPAL ASSOCIATION IS FORCED TO POSTPONE FIRST GAMES OF SEASON

Rodowe Abeken, director of Municipal athletics announced yesterday that the opening games of the Municipal Baseball Association, which were scheduled to be played this afternoon had been postponed because of the poor conditions of the diamonds. Rain which fell during the past week has kept the park attendance from putting the fields into condition and they were in no shape to play upon. The heavy rain which fell yesterday also hurt.

The official openings will now be held next Saturday and Sunday.

BRAVES LOSE THIRD STRAIGHT TO PHILS

BOSTON, April 27.—National Philadelphia made it three out of four today by beating Boston, 4 to 1. Bases on balls off Ragan and errors entered largely in the scoring of all the visitors' runs. Hogg gave Boston five hits, no two in the same inning, and was given good support.

Umpire Moran put Smith of Boston out of the game for protesting a called strike and ordered several other Boston players off the bench. The Boston players bought $7500 in third Liberty Loan Bonds, before the game.

PRATT SCORES WINNING RUN FOR YANKS IN NINTH

NEW YORK, April 27.—The New York Americans broke even with Washington in their four-game series by winning the last contest today, 2 to 1. The game was a pitching duel between Russell and Shaw and errors by Washington infielders enabled the local pitcher to win in the ninth. Pratt was safe on Foster's fumble, reached second on Pipp's sacrifice, took third when Moran fumbled on Bodie and scored the winning run when Miller hit the first ball high over the left fielder's head. Miller also drove in New York's first run in the second inning with a two-base hit.

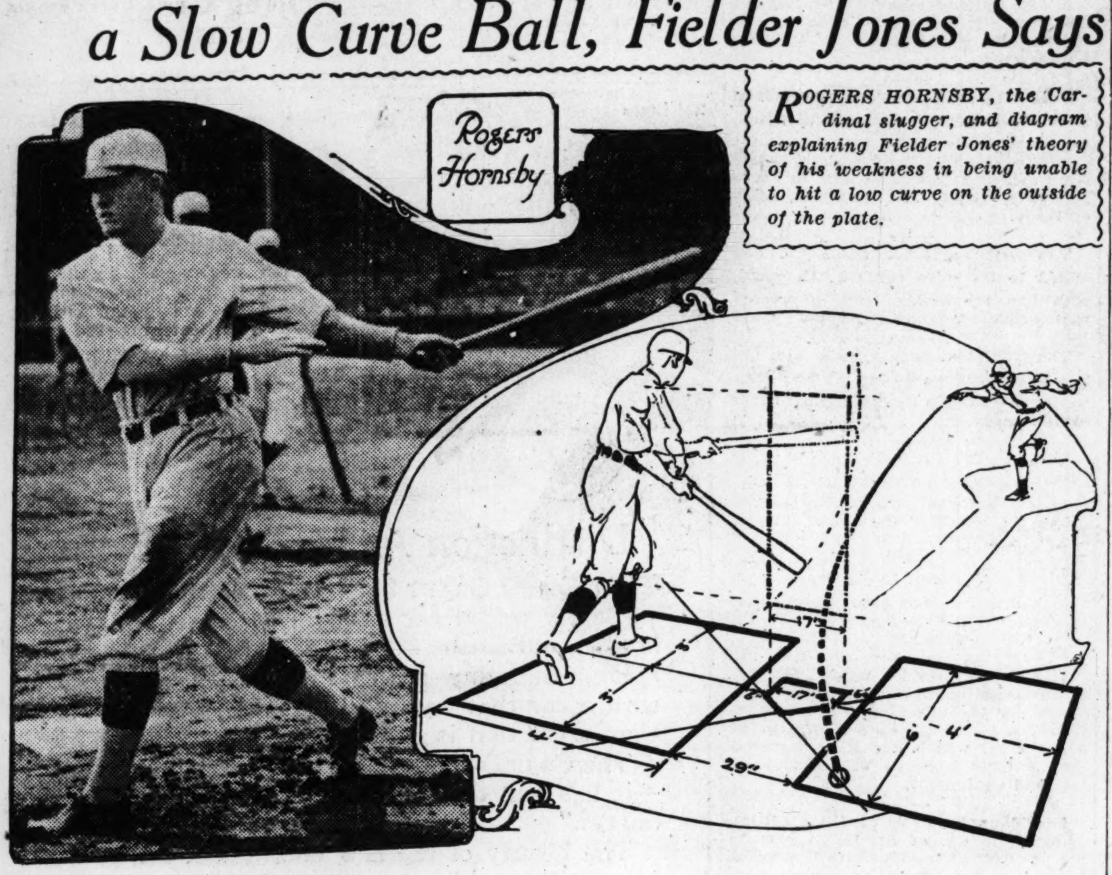
Hornsby Is Helpless, Batting Against a Slow Curve Ball, Fielder Jones Says



ROGERS HORNSBY, the Cardinal slugger, and diagram explaining Fielder Jones' theory of his weakness in being unable to hit a low curve on the outside of the plate.

Browns' Manager Declares His Pitchers Stopped Cardinal Slugger by This Means in Spring Series—Says He Told Hurlers Never to Give Texan a Fast Ball.

HAS Rogers Hornsby, the star slugger of the Cardinals, a weakness? Those who have watched the youthful Texan through an entire season in the National League, have seen him punch out base hits against the veteran as well as the recruit pitchers, believe Hornsby is a natural hitter and is equally at home against any sort of pitching.

But Fielder Jones disagrees with those who hold such a belief. The manager of the Browns says Hornsby has a weakness. It is, according to Jones, a slow curve, low and on the outside of the plate. And Fielder goes this one better by saying that smart pitching will stop Hornsby every time.

Looks for Faults.

"By smart pitching," Jones explains, "I mean that kind in which the head as well as the arm is employed. I don't want to detract from Hornsby's ability. He certainly knows how to hit—in the National League. But I believed that, like all other great batters, he must have some weakness and I set about to find out what it was.

"I looked over my records in the club house previous to the start of the spring series and I found that, while Hornsby did not make many safe hits in the fall series last year, yet he hit certain kinds of balls hard, thus making difficult chances for the outfielders.

"Investigation brought to light that the balls he hit hardest were fast ones either on the outside or inside and about waist high. It is difficult to pitch a ball on the inside to Hornsby because he stands at such a great distance from the plate. Thus, if a pitcher tries an inside throw, it either plays right into Hornsby's hands or else he can let it go by and it is a ball.

Gets Power Into Bat.

"That is the reason Hornsby can get such power into his swings. He stands sufficiently far from the plate to enable him to step into the ball. He swings from the shoulders, with all the force of his body, as well as his arms. Consequently, when he does connect, the ball is given a terrific impetus.

"And Hornsby can hit fast balls, too, That in my opinion, is his specialty. He seems to have a particular fondness for fast balls on the inside, which to a batter crowding the plate would be too far in. Hornsby's stance enables him to meet such a ball squarely in the middle of his bat and long hits naturally result.

"I made such a deduction by watching him last fall and this spring I instructed my pitchers to throw him nothing but low balls on the outside and to disregard speed. They were told above everything else not to give Hornsby a fast ball. What was the result?

"In seventeen times to the plate, Hornsby did not get a safe hit. Moreover, he reached first safely but twice, once when he was hit by a pitched ball and again on a fielder's choice. He was retired at first seven times, twice on infield flies, five times on flies to the outfield, while he fouled out once.

Another Test of Idea.

"I think I have located Hornsby's weakness and I'm going to pursue my theory in the fall series. Then we'll see whether smart pitching will stop his slugging or whether he can get around it."

Jones' idea was demonstrated in the opening game of the season against the Cubs when Hornsby cracked a triple off Grover Alexander in the initial inning, his first hit of the year. Alexander "grooved" the first one for Hornsby. It was called a strike.

The second pitch was high and inside, a ball. The third was a trifle low on the outside and Hornsby fouled it. Then Alexander shot over a fast one, waist high and rather close, one of Hornsby's favorites. Rogers connected and the result was a triple.

Alexander was careful after that not to give Hornsby a fast ball, either on the inside or the outside. He failed to get another hit.

FORMER MACKMEN HELP BEAT ATHLETICS 4 TO 1; BUSH WINS 3D VICTORY

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., April 27.—Four former Athletics defeated Philadelphia today 4 to 1, giving Boston the series, three out of four. Joe Bush, for five years Mack's mainstay in the box, held the locals safe in his first appearance against them, while McInnis, Strunk and Schang drove in all Boston's runs. It was Bush's third victory in three appearances this year. The locals outhit the Red Sox, but Bush did not pass a man while Boston's first hit drove in two players who had received bases on balls.

'CHICK' EVANS TO SHOW AT FORMAL OPENING OF SUNSET HILL COURSE

Charles ("Chick") Evans, Jr., national amateur and open champion and Warren K. Wood, one of Chicago's best known golfers, will play a special match at the formal opening of the new golf course at the Sunset Hill Country Club, Wednesday afternoon, May 1.

Evans and Wood are to begin their match at 2 p. m., and elaborate preparations have been made to entertain the visitors. Evans showed here last year with "Ned" Sawyer, also of Chicago. They were then touring the country in the interest of the Red Cross.

The Sunset Hill club's new course is 18 holes and was completed only recently. Some of the members have gone over it and those who have completed the course say it should be negotiatd in about 74.

Ballade of the Last Laugh.

WHEN Alexander called the Great
Was sold to Charley Weeghman's clan,
The rooters sang a hymn of hate
And put the owners on the pan;
They sympathized with Pat Moran
And raised a most terrific row;
It was a blow to every fan—
But where is Alexander now?

When Alexander pulled his freight,
The carping critics soon began;
They said the club was tempting fate
In getting rid of such a man.
The team would be an also-ran;
The rooters one and all did vow
'Twould put Chicago in the van—
But where is Alexander now?

ENVOY.

C. Weeghman now reviews the plan
With sadly corrugated brow;
His money's in the Phillies' can,
But where is Alexander now?

Willard and Fulton will fight half way between Minneapolis and St. Paul. Something like a St. Paul sandwich which is composed principally of ham and eggs.

Walter Johnson hasn't won a game this year. But then it has been a very backward spring for "Fireball Kings."

"Germany" Schaefer bashed out Pete Johns in the nose with a batted ball. Fielder ought to insist on "Germany" being interned for the duration of the war.

Eddie Plank, the Gettysburg Gunner, has signed with the Bethlehem Steel Corporation where the big guns are made. The gunner will pitch two games a week at $100 per game, win, lose or draw.

In the meantime Miller Huggins, who purchased the Gunner from the Browns, is thinking deeply.

However, Nick Cullop hasn't reported to the Browns yet, so that kind of evens it up.

A man caught two fish the other day and sold them for $6000 worth of Liberty Bonds. They weren't gold fish, either.

How about that song, "It Takes the Irish to Lick the 'Dutch'?" Probably refers to the kind we raise in America.

Reverse English.

Lee Magee was the first major league player to get five hits in one game, this year. And Lee used to give a party and have a flag-raising when he got one hit in five games.

We take it that "Mule" Watson hasn't struck his gait as yet. It took the "Mule" 10 days to go from St. Louis to Philadelphia.

"Mule" is described by a Philly scribe as a huge person, weight 190 pounds, with the strength and endurance of a team of horses. Some Mule!

Led by the "Mule" those Phillies might take the bit in their teeth and make a runaway race of it.

Lee Magee's slump in New York and his comeback with Cincinnati may be explained thusly: When Lee is a star he isn't. When he isn't a star he is.

All Is Well.

So far as the season has progressed nothing discouraging has transpired to indicate that the grand old pastime is on its last legs. The weather and the umpiring has been as rotten as could reasonably be expected and the playing has been in keeping with the weather and the umping. The price of admission and hot dogs has been raised to meet the requirements of the times and the attendance has been fairly good considering size of the crowds. Taken all in all there is no cause for alarm.

NEBRASKA WINS MEET.

LINCOLN, Neb., April 27.—The annual dual track meet between the University of Nebraska team and the Ames Aggies was won by Nebraska here today, the Cornhuskers piling up 79 points to their opponents' 35. The events were run in a drizzling rain which put the track in bad condition. Nebraska won eleven firsts out of the 14 events of the day's program.

HARVARD TAKES GAME.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., April 27.—Harvard defeated Princeton, 8 to 7, in a ragged game today. Five of Princeton's runs were due to infield erorrs, Captain Gross being the principal offender with four. Score:

Nosed Out in Title Event by Pittsburg—Sylvester Places in Broad Jump.

PHILADELPHIA, April 27.—Pittsburg University today carried off the one-mile relay college championship of America at the annual relay races of the University of Pennsylvania, principally through the great running of Shea, the national quarter-mile champion. Massachusetts Technology captured the two-mile national relay title, and Iowa State College won the four-mile relay championship.

For the first time in many years at a Pennsylvania relay meet no records were broken, but there were close finishes in several events.

The honors of the day belonged to Shea of Pittsburg University, the national quarter-mile champion, who by his wonderful sprinting won two races for his team, the National one-mile relay championship and the Class B title. He was anchor man in both races.

He ran the quarter in the class B championship in 49 2-5 seconds, beating out Columbia, and an hour later ran the quarter in 48 4-5 seconds in the national title race. Missouri had a lead of 30 yards when Shea took up the running for Pittsburg in the last relay in the national event, but he won by more than a yard.

Missouri University finished second to Pittsburg in the mile college championship event, the team having been composed of Pittam, Sylvester, Roney and Mattingly.

Jackson Scholz, also of Missouri, captured the 100-yard dash in 10 seconds flat. He ran a great race and although closely pressed at times, shook off his opponents at the wire. Another Missouri U. athlete to place in the meet today was Sylvester, who finished second in the broad jump, with a mark of 20 feet.

The showing of the Missouri squad was particularly pleasing to its coach, Schulte, in view of the fact that students at the school had subscribed a fund of $300 with which to send the men East. The Missouri Athletic Board added an additional $100 to this fund.

HUSTON PROMOTED TO LIEUTENANT-COLONEL

Friends of Til Huston, half owner of the Yankees, have just learned of his success in France with a regiment of engineers which he himself helped recruit in Cincinnati and Detroit. We called him Til above because we do not know whether it is right still to call him Captain. According to a letter from a Brooklyn newspaper man, which arrived from "somewhere in France" yesterday, Huston has been raised in rank from Captain to Lieutenant-Colonel. This letter was the first intimation of the honor that has been bestowed upon him. Of course, Huston is the last man who would ever speak of it to his friends back home.

How to Breathe in Using Crawl Stroke

THE accompanying illustrations give a correct idea of inhaling and exhaling, and of the proper "form" for the "crawl" stroke.

(2)—Shows the stroke proper; note that the swimmer's finger tips are in line with his nose, when "catching" the water.

BENNY M'NEIL VISITS HERE EN ROUTE SOUTH

Benny McNeil, the Canadian bantamweight, arrived in St. Louis yesterday en route to Memphis, Tenn., where on May 6, he will meet Battling Lahn in an eight round bout to a decision. McNeil will remain here for several days and work out with Eddie Randall, who meets Bobby Anderson Tuesday night at the South Broadway Club.

Subsequent to his contest with Lahn, McNeil has several matches pending, one with Young Chaney in Baltimore and another with Joe Lynch in Philadelphia. Lynch is a New York bantam and recently gained fame by knocking out Kid Williams, former champion.

"Crawl" Stroke, Made Official by Navy, Easiest Way to Swim, St. Louis Star Says

Correct Breathing and Leg Movement Important Factors in Successful Use of Style Adopted by Naval Training Stations.

Laubis Shows How to Employ Crawl Stroke

ILLUSTRATIONS for the accompanying article on the "crawl" stroke, recently adopted as the official swimming style at U. S. Naval stations, were posed by Herman Laubis, former Missouri A. A. champion and now member of the greatest 400-yards relay team in the country, that of the Great Lakes Naval Station. Laubis, who has been visiting here on a two weeks' furlough, returned to his station last night.

By John E. Wray.

ATTENTION of the swimming world was last week directed anew to the now world-famous "crawl" stroke, used for speed racing by practically all expert swimmers today. The Naval Commission on Training Camp Activities, after asking the advice of the aquatic instructors in the country, announced that henceforth the "crawl" would be exclusively taught to recruits.

A scheme of preliminary training was also promulgated, and all beginners will be put through it.

The "crawl" stroke was chosen because it is the most easily taught, and gives the best results. Adaptations of it can be made to suit both short or long distance swimming. The fact that it has sent back to oblivion such time-honored styles as the breast stroke (the "sailor fashion" of boyhood days), the "side stroke," and, to some extent, the old overhand style speaks sufficiently as to its popularity.

Australian Originated "Crawl."

THE crawl stroke is comparatively new to watermanship. It originated in Australia and the type imported from the country is still referred to as the "Australian crawl." J. H. Sterrett, in writing of the origin of that storke gives credit to Dick Cavil, member of a famous family of watermen, for discovering and developing its principles. He relates that Cavil, in discussing his ability with a rival, one day, declared that he "could beat him with both feet tied together." A match was made and Cavil won it under the conditions mentioned.

Cavil had always argued that his legs were not of much use to him in fast swimming, and that he believed they hindered other swimmers when performing at top speed, "because, in drawing them up and separating them, they stopped the run of his stroke." Cavil experimented with the theory and the "crawl" stroke resulted.

Since that time the "crawl" has been adopted by all the famous swimmers and champions of the world. C. M. Daniels set record after record using the crawl, only to see his own performances beaten by still greater masters in its use, such as Duke Kahanamoku, Norman Ross, Ludy Langer, Perry McGilivray and others. The Hawaiian still holds the world's record for 100 yards at the crawl, 53 1-5 seconds—miracle time, when it is considered that a few years ago anything under 1 minute was marvelous.

Laubis Explains the Stroke.

HERMAN LAUBIS of St. Louis, member of the Great Lakes Station's famous relay team, and former champion of the Missouri Athletic Association, yesterday explained the "crawl" stroke to the Post-Dispatch as follows:

"One of the first things to master in perfecting the 'crawl' or any other stroke for that matter, is correct breathing. This must be timed and executed methodically, or also the swimmer becomes exhausted early.

"In the crawl exhaling takes place under water; inhaling is accomplished through the mouth by turning the face slightly to the side. Once under way in a race I find it necessary to breathe with every complete cycle of the arm.

"Drawing breath in swimming is exactly opposite to that in any other form of athletics, where the athlete inhales through the nose and exhales through the mouth. In swimming the time for inhaling is extremely brief so the swimmer merely gulps in air with his mouth wide open, then he turns his face to the right so that his mouth and nose are under water, and while in that position exhales.

"He inhales always when his face is turned to the left side. With a little practice it becomes automatic and is not a labored effort. In breathing the swimmer must not roll his body out of line, but must merely turn his head slightly to the left.

Swimmers Must Relax.

"ONE of the first things to remember in learning the crawl is that the legs and body muscles should be relaxed, not rigid. Swimmers tire very quickly unless they can both relax and breathe properly.

"The crawl stroke itself is easily mastered. In this method of swimming the body is kept close to the surface of the water and almost horizontal. Except when breathing the face and head are partly submerged, and it is at this time that the breath is exhaled The eyes are above water and looking straight ahead.

"The arms are alternately extended in front of the body, slightly bent outward at the elbow and directly in front of the nose when the backward propelling stroke is begun. Some swimmers complete the forward extension of the arms under water, for a few inches, before starting the down stroke; others extend the arm forward entirely out of water and start the back pull immediately the hand touches the surface. Norman Ross, the most notable swimmer of the day, is one of this type. McGillivray, Kahanamoku and others, including myself, complete the forward extension of the arm for about six inches under water.

"After the catch on the water the arms must be brought down to a line parallel with the shoulders and the hand will describe an oval in the recovery, and then extended forward again. Before the pull of one arm has ended the other must have begun its backward drag so that a continuous pressure is exerted on the water, insuring an even progress forward, instead of a jerky one.

"THE leg movement varies with different swimmers. It is not considered important in propulsion, by some; but it is a fact that former Champion C. M. Daniels once swam the length of a tank in good time using only his leg thrash.

"The 'leg thrash' has many variations. St. Louis swimmers who learned under Tom Whitaker were taught only a slight thrash, say six inches. By thrash I mean moving the legs alternately up and down, the feet being separated by a maximum of six inches.

"Most swimmers today use a 10 or 12 inches thrash, with four beats to each cycle of the arm movements. Other swimmers use the six beat thrash and some swimmers do not think it necessary to move the legs in co-ordination with the arms. With some, the 'scissors' kick is employed, a form of leg movement which lends greater propelling power.

"The legs are kept straight, but not rigid, with toes extended. Unnecessary force exerted with the legs retards, rather than helps the crawl movement. The main idea of the thrash is to support the body in a horizontal position and back up the arm motion in keeping the body in a continuous 'run' forward."

Commission Adopts "System."

IN adopting the crawl stroke the Navy Commission has established a preliminary system of training which includes "land" and "water" drills.

The land drill is as follows: Raise arms to level with shoulders and then bend them forward from the elbows to right angle with upper arm, bringing left arm sharply down to the thigh.

When this point is reached, the right arm prescribes the same movement, while the left arm is carried upward and sideways until it reaches a position at right angles with the shoulder when the stroke is completed. The right arm is exactly the same. Continuity of action is vital.

In the water drill, the pupils enter shallow water. Each man assumes a horizontal position, face downward, his hands supporting him. The legs are held as near the surface of the water as possible and not more than four or five inches apart. The legs must have free action from the hips and should alternate continuously in quick shallow kicks.

Hank Severeid Has Lost 35 Pounds; Browns Play Sox in Final Today

Because the rain yesterday insisted on emulating Tennyson's brook, the Browns and White Sox again were forced to postpone combat on the diamond, and if they are unable to get together this afternoon, the champions will leave the city tonight with a record of but one game played in five scheduled. Today's contest, if played, will start at 3 p. m. The grounds yesterday were thoroughly soaked and unless the sun gets on the job early this morning, there is a very slight chance for the contest to be played.

Neither club was able to get in any great amount of work yesterday. Consequently the day was spent in fanning bees around the hotel lobby for the Sox and the clubhouse at Sportsman's Park by the Browns.

Severeid Loses 35 Pounds.

One of the chief topics unearthed during the Browns' conversational toiling was the announcement by Manager Jones that in a letter received from Hank Severeid yesterday, the catcher stated he had lost 35 pounds in weight due to the attack of pneumonia which has kept him in a hospital at Shreveport.

From this letter, Jones infers that it will be many weeks before Henry is able to get back in harness. He is now able to walk about the hospital but is very weak. Jones, therefore, has practically given up all hope of having the catcher back for service before the middle of June, as he believes it will be fully that long before he regains his strength.

Grover Cleveland Lowdermilk, ace pitcher, is visiting an osteopath in an effort to press out the kinks which have appeared in his shoulder, thus preventing free movement of his hurling arm. Grover took another treatment yesterday and the gentleman with the steamroller who attended him said Grover should be able to bend over the elusive curves in old time form in a very short time.

Shocker's Finger Healing.

A bit of cheering news also cropped out at Sportsman's Park yesterday when Fielder announced that Urban Shocker had removed the splints from his broken finger. The former Yankee probably will be available for duty by the end of the week and in the present state of affairs he is badly needed.

Peter Johns, pinch hitter extraordinary, is expected to return from a hospital in Cleveland some time this week, but his nose was so badly crushed he will not be able to make the grade to the plate for a couple of weeks at least.

Manager Rowland of the Sox stated there were no new developments concerning his club during the idle afternoon. He is greatly pleased at Cicotte's quick recovery from his attack of grip and he said last night that the shine baller may start on the hill this afternoon, providing a game is played. Urban Faber is his second choice.

Either Davenport or Sothoron will work for the Browns. Fielder isn't particularly anxious about playing the game, unless the field gets a chance to dry out this morning. He says it is almost impossible to run bases with the infield in its present state. However, the game will be played if there is a possible chance to do so, in order to avoid the bulge of twin bills that will accrue later in the season because of postponements now.

Governor Awaits Telegram Saying Big Bout Is Off

Col. Miller, However, Says St. Paul May Yet Land Willard-Fulton Go.

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 27.—It was learned this afternoon that Gov. Burnquist is "expecting" a telegram from Col. J. C. Miller announcing that he has abandoned his efforts to stage the proposed Willard-Fulton fight in St. Paul on July 4. There were intimations that the expected telegram would definitely close the affair as far as Minnesota is concerned.

It was understood that State officials expected Miller to make such an announcement from either Chicago or New York, and thus make it unnecessary to hold a public meeting at the Capital here on May 4, to discuss the propriety of the fight.

Miller has been informed by local friends of strong organized opposition to his project. Twin-City Red Cross chapters, members of the G. A. R., clergymen, leaders of women's clubs and others have announced their opposition to the contest.

Says He Is Undecided.

CHICAGO, April 27.—Col. J. C. Miller said this afternoon that he had not definitely decided not to hold the Willard-Fulton fight in Minnesota.

"Two other points want it and as I have never stated definitely that St. Paul would get it, I shall choose whichever location offers the greatest advantages," said Col. Miller. "If nothing better than St. Paul appears, I shall go there."

Col. Miller said he would leave Chicago tomorrow or Monday, but would not make known his destination.

"I don't want to advertise where I am looking as it merely invites publicity-seekers into the limelight with objections," continued the promoter. "I have not telegraphed Gov. Burnquist, nor have I any present determination to do so. St. Paul is still on the map so far as I am concerned. However, there is an attraction elsewhere which I think would allow more than the ten rounds possible under the Minnesota law."

Y. M. C. A. LEADERS ASK FOR BIG LEAGUE TEAMS TO EXHIBIT IN FRANCE

NEW YORK, April 27.—A request from Young Men's Christian Association leaders in France that two baseball teams made up of professional players be sent to the zone behind the Western front has been received here by the war work council of the Y. M. C. A. and is under advisement.

Dr. George J. Fisher, head of the athletic department of the war work council, said he expected to leave tonight for Cincinnati to confer with Christopher Mathewson regarding the appeal sent by the Y. M. C. A. leaders in France that the Cincinnati manager be sent to Europe to promote baseball among the American troops. If "Matty" consents to do this, Dr. Fisher said, he would probably be asked to recruit the two teams asked for, providing the American and National leagues co-operate.

ARMY LOSES CLOSE ONE.

WEST POINT, N. Y., April 27.—The University of West Virginia defeated the Army at baseball here today, 2 to 1. June's pitching was too much for the soldiers. Score:

U. of W. V.	1	0	0	0	0	0	1	0	0—2		11	1

LOOKING THEM OVER WITH OLD MAN DOPE

By J. E. Wray

ALL unwittingly the War Council of the Y. M. C. A. has scattered a few thorns in Christy Mathewson's bed of roses by asking his release from the Cincinnati club and his own consent to go to France to be the Y. M. C. A.'s baseball instructor.

Had the request been made in midwinter, giving the Cincinnati club time to find a substitute manager, the situation would not have borne so heavily on the Reds. As it now stands, the club, with a first division outlook and possibly a pennant prospect, will have to lose its ace—a man who proved himself, last year, to be a successful handler of men. Not only this, but the club would lose an asset for which it paid an equivalent of about $20,000 to the New York Giants.

On the other hand, Mathewson is unquestionably wealthy—he is rated as having over $100,000 in property. The Cincinnati club owners, too, are men in the millionaire realm and can afford financial setbacks.

The persons really entitled to pass on the Y. M. C. A.'s request are the Cincinnati fans. Doubtless their O K to his departure would be instantaneous.

Matty ought to feel highly honored, however. To be chosen as the first of all baseball men by the American soldiers is an indication of the highest respect for his baseball talents and for his manhood.

"They had baseball back in Biblical days."

"How do you know?"

"I've just been reading about that famous 'grass-eater,' Nebuchadnezzar?"

We HAD to do that. There are days when even the sausage factory feels compelled to get away from its daily grind.

Back to the Arithmetic.

A NEW YORK writer estimates that the management of major league baseball clubs cost owners $174,000 annually, expended as follows:

NATIONAL.
J. J. McGraw, Giants	$30.000
George T. Stallings, Braves	12.500
Christy Mathewson, Reds	10.000
Pat Moran, Phillies	8.500
Wilbert Robinson, Robins	7.500
Fred Mitchell, Cubs	7.500
Jack Hendricks, Cards	6.000
Hugo Bezdek, Pirates	6.000
Total	$88.000
AMERICAN.
Fielder Jones, Browns	$20.000
Miller Huggins, Yankees	12.500
Hugh Jennings, Tigers	10.000
Clarence Rowland, White Sox	10.000
Clark Griffith, Senators	10.000
Connie Mack, Athletics	10.000
Edward G. Barrow, Red Sox	7.500
Lee Fohl, Indians	6.000
Total	$86.000

If all the items are as incorrect as that relating to the emolument of the manager of the Browns, the total amount actually expended for team leaders would figure to be $103,750.

Now then, the first-class in mathematics will please tell us: How much is fielder Jones paid per year?

Explosive!

The man who wears a celluloid collar would do well not to get hot under it.

Answered.

A NEW YORK baseball fan wrote a baseball man a scorching letter against major league professionalism. He said, in part:

"The teams belong to a gang of millionaires who have formed one of the biggest trusts in the country. The players are notoriously ill treated. The public is tired of the low-brow balderdash connected with the politics of the game. It is only a question of time until the managers will have to paint people on the seats, in baseball grounds. Baseball is rotten to the core and fans are wise."

And the next day, despite chill weather, 30,000 fans turned out to see the Giants open the season.

"I don't like that fellow," remarked the cynic as the butcher hung a bunch of frankfurters onto the hook, "he has such a hang-dog look."

All Dolled Up.

NEW YORK is throwing a newspaper spasm over that game of pocket billiards, which is just "pool," with a new front and some Parma violets sprinkled over its ancient reputation.

Officially "pool" is dead. The "trust" executed it, when the game became so notorious that the Sunday school teachers began lecturing their sons about the evil of frequenting "pool halls." It is true that the deserving and well meaning Scriptural instructors had not the slightest cognizance of the fact that the "bad name" originated in that form of pool once sold on running horses and trotting races.

Monsieur Rudie Le Blang is quoted in a New York sporting page as saying that many New York halls would discard their regular billiard tables in favor of pocket billiards next season. He adds: "I wouldn't be surprised if billiards were entirely forsaken before the passing of this year."

Rudie need not be alarmed. The test of his composure will never be undergone, for pool will have passed out and on long before the ancient and highly esteemed game of billiards is forgotten.

RANDALL PREDICTS KNOCKOUT VICTORY IN ANDERSON BOUT

Local Veteran Believes He Can Stop Opponent in Fight Tuesday Night.

SHOULD BE GREAT BATTLE

Both Are Aggressive and Clever —Final Show of Season at Broadway Club.

Local followers of boxing are looking forward to Tuesday night in expectation of witnessing the best exhibition offered here this season when Eddie Randall, veteran local lightweight, and Bobby Anderson, the Duquoin slugger, meet in the ring at the South Broadway Athletic Club. All things considered, this bout should measure fully up to the standard expected of it.

The chief reason for such a belief is found in the fact that both Anderson and Randall are exceptionally aggressive. It is hardly necessary to go into details concerning their respective methods of fighting, since both are well known here. Anderson probably possesses a harder punch than his veteran adversary, but Randall figures his knowledge of boxing will offset such an advantage.

Randall Trains Hard.

The mere fact that he so decisively outpointed Jimmy Hanlon several weeks ago, has not caused Randall to treat his coming bout lightly. On the other hand, Eddie has found it necessary to train for the Duquoin boy along entirely different lines. This is due to the fact that Anderson and Hanlon differ radically in style.

Hanlon prefers infighting and boxing at close quarters where he generally is able to get in his most effective punches. Anderson, however, is a long range boxer. Bobby has a wide reach and in most of his contests here he has stood off his opponent with a straight-left, counting with a right swing at intervals.

The right is his best punch and those who have faced Anderson claim it has a sting. However, Bobby has never yet opposed a boxer of Randall's speed and cleverness, not to mention experience. Randall has been working at long range boxing for the past two weeks and believes he is capable of coping with his younger opponent.

Predicts a Knockout.

In fact, Randall yesterday predicted he would win by a knockout. He is fully confident that he can slip over the haymaker before the end of the eighth round. He would not say, however, how he expected to end the bout, merely stating that he believed he knew Anderson's weakness and could locate the spot early in the contest.

The boys have agreed to make 135 pounds at 3 o'clock. It will be Anderson's first appearance here for almost two years, when he broke his arm in a bout with Freddie Andrews at the Motordrome. He was matched with Jimmy Regan at the Future City Club last fall, but the police refused to permit the bout to be staged.

Hal Clark, former Milwaukee lightweight, who is now a soldier at Jefferson Barracks, will meet Harry Claves, a pupil of Randall, in an eight-round semi-windup. Many of Clark's soldier friends are expected to attend the show. Young Curley and Willie Necla have been matched for a six-round preliminary. Walter Heisner, as usual, will referee the bouts.

Welling Gets Bout.

Joe Welling, the crack Chicago lightweight, who recently recovered from a severe attack of pneumonia, has been matched to meet Frank ("Young") Britt, the New Bedford fighter, for 12 rounds, at the Armory A. A. of Boston on Tuesday night. Ivy Lewis, matchmaker of the club, had booked Kid Norfolk, the colored heavyweight, and George Ashe of Philadelphia for the main bout, but when Lewis learned that Welling was well enough to battle again he promptly dropped the Norfolk-Ashe bout and engaged Welling and Britt.

Jersey Clubs Licensed.

Four sporting organizations in New Jersey have filed $10,000 bonds with Comptroller Hughes at the State House at Trenton in compliance with the Hurley law permitting boxing bouts. They received permission to pull off the affairs when application was made at a meeting of the New Jersey Athletic Committee at the Capitol. The organizations are the Schuetzen Park A. A. of North Bergen, Hudson County; the Cycle Racing Association of Newark; the Eastern A. A. of Long Branch, and the Dover A. A. of Dover.

Joe Lynch, the New York bantamweight, is matched to meet Benny McNeil of Canada for 10 rounds at Adams, Mass., on May 2; Frankie Burns of Jersey City, at the opening boxing show of the New Jersey Sportsman's Club at Weehawken, N. J., on May 9; Jimmy Pappas, for 10 rounds at Scranton, Pa., on May 13, and probably Pal Moore of Memphis, Tenn., May 20.

FOOD SUPERVISORS IN WARDS OF CITY GET INSTRUCTIONS

DEPUTIES TO COVER EACH PRECINCT

Says Wheat Problem Is Serious and That Hoover Is Concerned Over Possibility of Bread Riots.

William F. Gephart, dean of the School of Commerce and Finance at Washington University and chairman of the Food Administration Committee of St. Louis, in instructing newly appointed ward supervisors at a meeting yesterday at the Chamber of Commerce, said that it must be borne in mind that the local food trade is not "coining money" because of the increased prices and that most of the dealers would be glad to have the Government take over their business and pay them 2 per cent on their investment.

"It is not the intention of the Food Administration to work hardships on the food dealers," Prof. Gephart continued, "and I would ask you to proceed on the theory that all business men want to obey the law. However, anyone who won't obey the few simple rules of the Food Administration isn't fit to live in this country."

A volunteer organization of Food Supervisors has been appointed by the Food Committee through the aid of the Chamber of Commerce. One man has been selected in each ward and Thomas H. Lovelace, assistant secretary of the chamber, has been chosen General Supervisor. Ward Supervisors will have deputies in each precinct; the purpose of the plan being to create a field force of men in every section of the city to act as a check on all who come within the provisions of the Food Administration laws.

Receive Instructions.

Yesterday's meeting was held for the purpose of hearing instructions from Chairman Gephart, who will have general supervision of the men. Each man, with the aid of deputies, will watch the situation in his own ward, be a source of information on all food matters and report violations to the Food Committee.

Chairman Gephart emphasized the seriousness of the wheat situation and said that Food Administrator Hoover "is very much concerned over the possibility of bread riots before August, when the new wheat crop comes in."

"The wheat problem is the big problem before the food administration and the American people," said the chairman. "We have only 15,000,000 bushels of wheat to last until August, or from one-fifth to one-eighth of the normal supply. Now 9,000,000 bushels of cornmeal are being turned out by the mills each week, enough to feed us without the use of any wheat flour. Rye and barley flour is fairly plentiful.

"If the weather man acts nicely we will have plenty of wheat next August, present indications for a large crop being good."

In telling of the food situation here Chairman Gephart said that St. Louis has done more effective work in food administration and conservation work than any city in the United States." And the Food Administrator at Washington recognizes this fact," he added. This record was made possible, Gephart said, by the excellent help given by the Women's Central Committee on Food Conservation and the patriotic co-operation of most of the wholesale and retail dealers in food.

One Case to Washington.

"Out of several thousand cases handled, only one has been referred to Washington since the committee organized last November," he said. "The whole plan is based on voluntary agreement on the part of dealers and consumers to observe the regulations. We are holding from 20 to 40 hearings of violations a day and dealing with 10,000 to 12,000 men engaged in the food business in St. Louis, including 2600 retail grocers.

"Controversies between the shipper and consignee which have arisen here over the shipment of nearly 500 cars of foodstuffs, have been settled by the food committee. Many tons of food which might otherwise have spoiled has been saved through the bureau which handles this work."

The food committee is spending about $500 a month, but has asked for an additional appropriation, which would bring the expenditures to $800 a month, Chairman Gephart said. The women's committee is spending about $1000 a month, he added.

At the close of the meeting the supervisors were given metal badges which they will wear and which authorize them to investigate all places in their district which come under the jurisdiction of the food committee. Deputies also will be given badges.

Printed instructions and forms for making complaints against violators also were given to the supervisors. Another meeting will be held at the Chamber of Commerce next Friday at 11:30 a. m. The men were told to bear in mind the three chief aims of the food committee, to see that no food is wasted, prevent hoarding and insist on fair prices.

INFORMAL CEREMONY CHANGES BERLIN HOTEL TO THE "BONAIR"

Petition Being Circulated to Have Board of Aldermen Change Name of Berlin Avenue.

With informal ceremony the Berlin Hotel, Taylor and Berlin avenues, was rechristened last night as the Bonair, and at the same time a petition was circulated among property owners in the neighborhood requesting the Board of Aldermen to rename Berlin avenue. Several names have been suggested for the avenue, but the one most in favor now appears to be "Bonair avenue." It was for this reason that the proprietors of the hotel, Messrs. George H. White and R. C. Kennedy, selected the name of Bonair (good air) for the hotel.

The Bonair has been under the White & Kennedy management for more than two years. R. Campbell Kennedy, one of the proprietors, has been the chief St. Louis representative of the Big Four Railroad for many years, and his partner, George H. White, was with the French Lick Hotel for years before he came to St. Louis.

EVERY MISSOURI CHILD UNDER THE AGE OF 6 TO BE LISTED

Part of Work in the Save-the-Babies Campaign Under Direction of Defense Council.

The Federal Children's Bureau at Washington has failed to get to St. Louis at the appointed time 500,000 children's registration cards, to be used in the preliminary work of organizing Missouri's "Save-the-Babies" campaign, but the Missouri Women's Committee of the Council of National Defense, upon receipt of the cards, will begin the listing of every Missouri child under the age of 6. The registration, purely voluntary, will be done under supervision of women's committees organized by the Women's Council of National Defense.

Space will be given on the cards for the entry of each child's birth date, age, sex, height and weight, together with such facts regarding heredity, physical condition and degree of approach or divergence from the normal, as may be found upon examination by competent medical advisors. With these statistics as a nucleus, the mother will be exhorted to make periodical visits to the baby centers to be established in each country and center of population, to have her baby weighed and measured, to ascertain its degree of improvement, and to confer with the visiting nurse and county baby experts there.

RUSH FOR HOMES GREATEST SINCE BIG FAIR YEAR

Demand for Houses Added to That for Apartments and Flats, and Office Buildings Vacancies Are Few.

RELIEF ONLY IN PASSE DISTRICTS

Plants in Making for Several Large Building Enterprises and Numerous Extensive Trades Are Reported.

By Berry Moore.

Both the renting and selling branches of the real estate business in St. Louis are characterized by a display of activity that bespeaks a highly improved situation in this sphere of operation.

Demand from renters, which was formerly confined in a large measure to apartments and flats, has extended to houses and is now depleting the supply available for this class, according to Albert Wenzlick. It also embraces office buildings, vacancies in which are rapidly disappearing, several of the larger of these structures being filled.

"Four dwellings,' said Wenzlick yesterday, in discussing the situation with a Post-Dispatch reporter, "were rented from my office this week. One of these had been vacant more than three years, and another a year and a half. The other two had been vacant for several months. The World's Fair year recalls the only parallel to the present rental demand in St. Louis. It is comprehensive, extending to both residential and business buildings, and, if sustained, by fall there will not be a vacant dwelling, flat or apartment in the city, except in the not altogether desirable sections.

"The situation promises to become so acute that recourse to houses and flats in the passe districts will be the only alternative for the better-to-do classes, to say nothing of those who are excluded from abodes in apartments by virtue of the higher rentals. Many owners of houses and flats in these sections are modernizing and putting their buildings in repair in anticipation of the foreseen demand for them.

Vacancies Becoming Scarce.

"As to apartments, renters are virtually bidding against one another for them. Leases are being made or renewed only at material advances, which ostensiby is to provide for the increased cost of maintenance, especially of coal. The demand for offices in the downtown structures is rapidly disposing of the vacancies which formerly made such holdings unprofitable, the indications being that there will not be a vacant office in any of these structures before long."

Plans have been made for a number of large apartment buildings, but most of them are for larger suite structures. The only kitchenette project on an extensive scale so far disclosed is one of eight stories to be erected on the south side of Berlin avenue east of Belt, by Chase Ulman, an attorney. Work on this structure is to be started at once, according to Preston J. Bradshaw, its architect.

Joseph Goldsmith, manager of the furnishing goods department of Stix, Baer & Fuller (Grand-Leader), has purchased of the Sam Hamburg Jr. Realty Co., 50x165 feet on Berlin avenue, opposite Belt avenue, as a site for an eight-story family building, construction of which will be begun at once. The Grand-Leader, under Goldsmith's auspices, furnished the Westmoreland apartments, an eight-story fireproof unit building at 5330 Berlin avenue.

A syndicate of which F. L. Cornwell, an attorney, is the leading spirit, is perfecting plans for the erection on the south side of Berlin avenue, between Union boulevard and De Baliviere avenues, of two apartment buildings. The cost in each instance is estimated at $100,000.

Sam Hamburg Jr. yesterday declined an offer of $200 a front foot for 260x165 feet west of and adjoining the site of the Westmoreland Apartments. This ground, it is said, is to be improved on a scale commensurate with that of the Westmoreland, which was erected by the Midas Realty Co., which was promoted by Hamburg. The ground is a part of the Rock Island tract, purchased by the Cresus Realty Co., of which Hamburg is the dominant figure.

Some extensive trades were effected during the week. These in a majority of instances included large apartments and flats for which smaller holdings were given in part payment.

According to James P. Blake of John S. Blake & Bro. and treasurer of the Real Estate Exchange, sales of seven and eight-room houses in the West End, in Washington Heights in particular, are unprecedented. While not announced, it is understood that this firm disposed of a record number of houses in this class during the week. The demand for larger houses is also a notable feature, purchasers of which represent many who have declined to pay the increased rentals demanded by landlords. Among these are now a few new residents. Realizing that this is an opportunity to dispose of old houses, the owners are offering extraordinary terms to prospective purchasers. In some instances as little as $500 is required to bind a purchase.

Addition to Plant of Coffee and Spice Company

HANLEY & KINSELLA COFFEE & SPICE COMPANY

THE building at the southwest corner of Eighth street and Chouteau avenue has been acquired under a 15-year lease by the Hanley & Kinsella Coffee and Spice Co., which operates one of the largest and most complete coffee roasting plants in the United States. The lease was negotiated through the Martin-Breitt Real Estate Co.

The coffee now supplied by St. Louis includes all of the army cantonments, which formerly obtained their supply from Kansas City, Omaha, Atlanta, Ga., and San Antonio, Tex., also a substantial proportion of oversea requirements amounting to 50 cars, or 1,500,000 pounds, per month. This volume will be largely increased in the near future.

The Hanley & Kinsella plant occupies the entire block, between Eighth and Paul streets, on Chouteau avenue. The building is owned by John B. Holman.

Mrs. McKenzie is enthusiastic about the future of St. Louis as an industrial center.

MOTHERS' CONGRESS MEETS THIS WEEK

Thursday Allotted to Red Cross and Closing Day Will Be Given Patriotic Tone by Public School Children.

The first week of the annual Household and Industrial Show closed last night, with a degree of satisfaction on the part of the enlarged and still increasing number of exhibitors that will virtually launch the Exhibit Building upon its career as the home of permanent displays of industry, commerce, art, science and all the activities which have a place in business life.

Several of the exhibits installed primarily for the current show are to remain in the building indefinitely, reorganized and adjusted to a condition of permanency, formal arrangements to that end having been made with the management. This decision was reached by the exhibitors after a few days of contact with the enterprise, study of the business possibilities attaching to permanency as gauged by surprisingly large sales from the displays now in position, and the definite plans for the future made and in comtemplation by the Exhibit Corporation.

A further result of the show now at the half-way point in its time scheduie was the submission by outside business interests of proposals to take large spaces for permanent exhibits, representatives having come from Chicago, Kansas City and other centers to confer with the management.

Early Increase of Height Planned.

So decided was the impetus given the enterprise in its permanent aspect, with the positive demand from outside interests, that the corporation has begun consideration of plans for adding three or four stories to the building during the current year, whereas this extension had hitherto merely been contemplated as something for the more or less distant future.

The main event of this week at the building, other than direct features of the show, is the annual Mothers' Congress, sessions of which will be held Wednesday, Thursday and Friday, in honor of which the latter day has been designated Mothers' Congress day by the show management. Delegates will be present from every section of the coutnry, and the local committee has made elaborate plans for program features of unusual interest and educational value.

There are to be daily demonstrations of child welfare work by kindergarten children, with a climax dance by members of the Rhythmic Circle of McKinley High School. Friday evening has been set apart as the occasion for social pleasure, in which dancing in the big convention hall of the building, with orchestral music, will be the order.

"War Duties" Program.

The Friday afternoon program of the Congress is devoted to what is termed "war duties," and includes these addresses or papers: "The Woman's Part in National Defense," Mrs. B. F. Bush; "Education of the Children of the Nation in Home-Making," Mrs. Robert McKittrick Jones; "Food Conservation in Its Relation to Health in Childhood," Dr. W. McN. Miller; "How Shall We Counteract the Moral Effect of the War Upon Our Children?" Mrs. F. O. Cox; "Danger of Neglecting Home and Children for War Work," Miss Doolittle; "What the Child Welfare Work of the Congress Is and Why it Has Been Successful," Mrs. J. H. McBride.

Saturday, which will mark the close of the Liberty Loan campaign, as well as the show in its present form, will be the occasion of a patriotic demonstration by the school children of the city, culminating at the Exhibit Building. All the bugle and drum organizations of the city schools, with banners proclaiming the duty of everyone to support the war undertaking by taking Liberty Loan bonds, will march from the city hall to the building, where they and other school children will have full sway for such enjoyment as may appeal to them.

Thursday will be Red Cross day, and all the net receipts will be turned over to that organization. On that day there are to be no free admissions, the management assuming that no one would be content to attend the show without paying the door fee for the benefit of the great war relief institution.

Fun and Business Merged.

"Make Lyman laugh and get a lot in Hi-Pointe for nothing," was a challenge that hundreds of men women and children who attended the Household and Industrial Show last week accepted, but at last accounts Lyman had not cracked even a faint smile during the hours in which he "did his derndest" to "take the joy out of life" by imperviousness to humor bombardment.

On the other hand, Lyman forced smiles of greater or less audibility from the thousands who collected about the Hi-Pointe exhibit, which occupied a commanding space near the main entrance to the building day and night. Not only did good humor effervesce from his stolid air of gloom, but a diminutive negro, garbed in red and playing the role of valet to the principal living figure in the display, proved to be a distinct success as a comedian.

The Hi-Pointe exhibit, while one of the most conspicuous and interesting among the hundred or more assembled in the building for the annual show, is also among the leaders in positive returns, it was stated yesterday by Charles De Largy, manager of the Broadway Savings and Trust Co., real estate department and in charge of the development and sale of lots in Hi-Points subdivision, which is foremost among the exclusive residence tracts in the West End being offered to home-builders this spring.

Results More Than Pleasing.

"I am more than pleased with the results from the first week of the show," De Largy said, "and sanguine as to better returns during the last half of the show period, when more auspicious weather is probable. We had hundreds of inquiries which indicated real interest and prospective sales, and a considerable number of engagements to meet our salesmen on the grounds on Sunday."

The Hi-Pointe exhibit was both attractive and instructive in its arrangement. Grouped about a model bungalow or the type which will abound in the subdivision were plans along which the tract is being improved, showing streets, alleys and beauty spots already completed and under construction, plats and other essential information, all of which was supplemented by special knowledge of details imparted to interested visitors by attaches of the display.

REALTY CONVENTION COMMITTEES WORK FOR NOTABLE MEET

Fourteen Bodies From St. Louis Exchange to Hold Weekly Joint Sessions on June Event Details.

ELABORATE PLANS FOR DECORATIONS

Patriotism Will Be Made Distinct Feature of National Gathering—Dinner for Local Exchange Officials May 7.

The Fourteenth Convention Committee of the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange, under the general chairmanship of James M. Franciscus, are working in harmony to make the eleventh annual convention of the National Association of Real Estate Boards, which will be held here June 17-20, a notable esuccess.

Franciscus has called a joint meeting of the committees for Tuesday, 3 p. m., at the exchange, where reports of progress will be made. Similar meetings will be held each Tuesday thereafter until the convention date.

The Decorations Committee met last week, when Chairman John W. Gibson reported that contracts for decorating the assembly room of the exchange, which will be convention registration headquarters, the American Theater, which is to be convention headquarters, and the information booth at Union Station, had been let. Arrangements have also been made for the decoration of every building on Chestnut street from Fourth to Twelfth streets, and for a number of streamers to be stretched across Chestnut street in each block, thus giving Realty Row the appearance of a great white way.

Industrial Trip Eliminated.

At a meeting of the chairmen of the Convention Committees it was decided to eliminate the industrial trip feature of the entertainment which was to have been made on flat cars, as the Government is utilizing all available cars in keeping traffic on the move.

The first night of the convention will be known as Patriotic night, and Edward K. Love was appointed chairman of a special committee to make the necessary arrangements for making it memorable.

At noon of the initial day a luncheon will be given by the local exchange to the board of managers, executive officers and visiting presidents of boards. This probably will be given at the Statler Hotel. On the second day a luncheon will be given to all visiting secretaries at some downtown hotel or club. The same day a luncheon will be tendered to all visiting women delegates at a country club.

The feature of the third day's entertainment will be an automobile ride for visiting delegates through the parks and residence sections of the city, terminating at the Sunset Hill Country Club, where will be held a swimming party and dinner dance. Chairman R. King Kauffman is in charge of this affair.

Officers' Installation Dinner.

The installation dinner of officers and directors of the St. Louis Exchange will be held at the Statler Hotel on Tuesday evening, May 7, at 7 o'clock. President William A. Giraldin has appointed Henry R. Weisels, vice president of the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co., chairman of the entertainment committee for this evtn. Weisels has named as his assistants R. King Kaufman, John W. Gibson, Joseph Hannauer, W. E. Caulfield, A. R. Schollmeyer and T. S. Gerhart.

Invitations have been extended to Gov. Gardner, Mayor Kiel and several prominent St. Louisans and officers of the nations associated in the allied war who will be in the city at that time. Every member of the exchange is expected to attend and each has the privilege of inviting as many friends and clients as he desires. It will be a strictly patriotic affair and the usual cabaret will be dispensed with. Each speaker will be limited to 10 minutes.

Lot to Pass to Owner Tuesday.

It was announced yesterday that the North Market street lot donated by W. B. Thompson, an attorney, to be disposed of for the benefit of the Red Cross, will pass to an owner at the St. Louis Real Estate Exchange Tuesday. Stubs from evidences of interest in the property must be returned to the exchange not later than tomorrow.

Goessling Box Co. to Expand.

John C. Greulich Realty Co. reports the sale of 1524-6 North Blair avenue, a three-story building and large stable, adjoining the Goessling Box Co., at Blair and Mullanphy streets. Improvements will be made to enlarge the factory.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO SACRIFICE THE SMALLEST COMFORT—FOR YOURSELF OR FAMILY—AND YOU HAVE MANY ADVANTAGES NOT OBTAINABLE IN A LARGE CITY.

WEBSTER GROVES

Your Family and Your Home—They're Nearest to Your Heart

Webster Groves' reputation as a "Home City" is due largely to the fact that most of the families living there own their own homes—and home-owners make a City great in the things that count—civic spirit, honest government, good schools, clean streets, progress and patriotism. Sometimes we have homes to rent in Webster Groves; but mostly we are property owners.

There's something big and vital in working and striving for a home. Every dollar paid on it is an investment that pays immediate dividends—dividends every day in the year to every member of your family. There is nothing you can BUY that is more worth-while and that will give pleasure to more people.

Webster Groves is a sociable city, and you'll be made welcome. Your young people will enjoy the Athletic Field—with its baseball grounds, running track, basket ball and football. And there are halls where many semi-private dances are given for them.

The time-worn joke about the suburbanite having to go home loaded down with all the city purchases of himself and wife is out of date—for, if you wish to shop in the city, the merchants will deliver your packages for you.

But you don't have to shop in the city! Buy your every day needs right in Webster Groves—patronize the home-town merchants! Whether it's a bank or a butcher, candy or coal, flowers or a feed store, a garage or a grocery, printing or plumbing, lumber, lime, cement, painting, hardware, interior decorating, electrical work, tires and auto accessories, men's furnishings, dry goods, doctors or drugs—your needs can be best supplied right in Webster Groves. Competition is as keen between our merchants as in a larger city, resulting in a friendly rivalry between merchants in the same line that induces superior service.

There is not a Factory, Saloon or Pool Room in Webster Groves—BUT

WEBSTER GROVES has—

- Gas
- Electric Light
- Telephone Exchange
- Water System
- Sewers
- Many miles of Paved Streets and Sidewalks
- Streets Named and Houses Numbered

THE USE OF $50,000.
CASH, CREDIT OR LIBERTY BONDS.
To be repaid out of first earnings, will result in enormous increased production of two vital war essentials and yield profits greatly exceeding the average commercial enterprise. Ninety-nine per cent of those who read this will dismiss it as impossible or at least improbable. There is a chance, however, that some man or woman who cannot go to the front in person will consider it a patriotic duty to investigate the claim that it will contribute materially toward the winning of the war, and if convinced lend his or her support. Investigation requires no technical knowledge, little time and no expense and entails no obligation. There is also opportunity for personal service abroad for the man or woman who can qualify. If not interested yourself, please call to the attention of someone who may be. Curiosity-seekers and amateur promoters, kindly desist. Box J-3, Post-Dispatch.

SPRING CLEANUP CAMPAIGN BEGINS MONDAY, MAY 6

Street Commissioner to Put on 50 Wagons and Force of Men in Annual Drive Against Rubbish.

The St. Louis Continuous Clean-up and Paint-up Campaign will open its spring activities with the Streets and Sewers Department making their annual collection of rubbish beginning Monday morning, May 6, and continuing on until all of the rubbish has been gathered and hauled to the public dumps.

Street Commissioner Talbert will put on 60 wagons and a force of men and hopes to have the collections completed not later than May 18. However, if this time is not sufficient, the work will continue.

"The householders and property owners are asked to take rubbish from the garrets, cellars and yards," said Talbert, "and put it in receptacles convenient to the alley, so that it may be gathered in the least possible time by our drivers and rubbish collectors. It is more essential than ever that the householder and property owner give attention to the cleaning up of his premises, as we must use every effort to avoid epidemics of any kind from filth and rubbish, and also to conserve property from loss of fire, as the cost of materials at this time is extremely high and almost unobtainable, and it costs twice as much to build as it did a year or two ago. It is part of the economic program of the Government that all buildings should be preserved, and property owners and householders should pay close attention to the painting of property and preserve it from the elements of the weather, and make all needed repairs."

The expense of the two weeks' clean-up and paint-up campaign for 1917 was $4295.60.

More vacant lots were cleaned in 1917 than in any previous campaign and it is safe to estimate that 25 per cent of the rubbish collected was taken from vacant lots. This was due to the thrift garden movement, which was a part of the clean-up and paint-up propaganda.

The Woman's Council is now making a survey of all vacant lots in the city as to their condition and will report their findings to the Street Department that they may be cleaned up. The thrift garden work this year is being conducted under the direct charge of the Central Committee on Food Conservation under the supervision of the St. Louis Continuous Clean-up and Paint-up Committee.

The officers of the St. Louis Clean-up and Paint-up Campaign are: Allen W. Clark, chairman; Charles M. Talbert and Mrs. G. V. R. Mechin, vice chairman; John G. Lonsdale, treasurer, and Miss Anita Moore, secretary.

City Items in Brief

Oscar Ploeser Jr., 13 years old, of 6813 Pennsylvania avenue, yesterday started a fire in the cook stove at his home with gasoline. His clothing ignited and his right leg and arm were severely burned.

Madeline Hudson, 19 years old, of the St. Nicholas Hotel, Broadway and Market street, was arrested yesterday on complaint of Charles Dubois of 1280 Hamilton avenue, who said she pawned his diamond ring for $125 and then mailed him the ticket. He told the police she borrowed the ring while they were automobile riding in the county for the purpose, she said, of "making a flash."

Oda McFarland, 27 years old, was arrested yesterday at Eighth and Market streets, and the police found a selective draft notification card in his pocket. He admitted he should have reported for service April 25 at Sapulpa, Ok. He is being held for Federal officers.

Herman Thierfelder, 54 years old, who was discharged from the employ of the Union Electric Light and Power Co. last Wednesday on a report that he had said he would rather hang than buy a Liberty Bond, was arrested yesterday at his home, 1700 Chestnut street, and is being held for Federal officers.

Mrs. Myrtle Hobart, 28 years old, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Otto Sutter of 6360 Washington boulevard, died yesterday afternoon of spinal meningitis at her home in Kansas City.

A Hungarian and a negro were arrested last night for alleged disloyal remarks. Antone Judkovich, 22 years old, 1518 South Eleventh street, a gardener, native of Hungary, was reported to have spoken disparagingly of the flag. William Bailey, 6220 North Broadway, the negro, said, according to Eugene Sale, a bartend at 6308 North Broadway, that didn't care anything about the and wouldn't fight for it.

MEN

The Wagner Electric Manufacturing Co. recently placed in effect the most liberal wage increase made by any St. Louis concern since January 1. These increases range from a minimum of 25% of the lowest rates to 10% of the highest rates and were effective April 1.

The Wagner Co. wants patriotic men who have the courage of their convictions to make artillery hubs and six-inch and eight-inch shells; no experience necessary; good wages and steady work, and ample protection if necessary.

The men that left this Government work did so through mistaken sympathy for others, but the Government needs this work badly because the Germans won't wait.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

Query for Sunday must be mailed a week beforehand.

BEAUTY CULTURE.

A. G. E.—Never wear any cotton or heavy cloth to pad the breast; by heat and absorption they diminish the size. Pads made of seagrass or hair are light, cool and impart a graceful curve. The same thing applies to the hips, when they are small. To develop bust: Stand before open window (not too much draft) in early morning; rest weight of body on balls of feet, abdomen in, chest out, head erect. Take long, deep inhalations through the nose, hold the breath for a few moments, and exhale through the nose. Repeat five times. Rest a few minutes, and repeat again five times. Wear properly adjusted corset. Teaspoonful or more pure olive oil or cottonseed oil after each meal may increase flesh.

CLEANSING.

—. —. —.—To clean white broadcloth: Try making white cornmeal hot and rubbing it in. Some persons use hot wheaten flour, but that might almost wear out the garment, because of the shaking and brushing required to remove it. If much soiled, neither the flour nor the meal will cleanse it. Either gasoline or soap and water must be used. To prepare the gasoline bath provide sufficient fluid and add to it a teacupful of soap jelly. Into this the garment must be placed and allowed to soak, covering closely. A wash boiler is a good vessel (covering the lid with a heavy cloth) for the purpose. Wash by squeezing through the hands, and when clean rinse in clear gasoline. If carefully done, broadcloth can be washed in warm soap suds, rinsing in clean warm water to which borax has been added. (Dealer who sold you shoes should tell you about them.)

GREATEST INVENTIONS.

PATRIOT.—A French General calls attention to the fact that nearly all modern appliances with which the war is conducted were invented in America. Among them he names the steamship, the gunboat, the submarine, the torpedo, the telegraph, the telephone, the microphone, barbed wire, the revolver, magazine rifle, the machine gun and aerolane. Dr. Eliot cites seven nations conspicuously illustrating today the worth of liberty in national development—Great Britain and her affiliated commonwealths, France, Italy, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland and the United States; he also refers to the Scandinavian peoples. The efficiency of all these peoples he declares to be based on a high degree of personal initiative and of political and industrial freedom—not on the subjection of implicit obedience of the individual, but on the energy and good will in work which result from individual freedom, ambition and initiative. Propulsion by steam on land and water was first made commercially successful by Englishmen and Americans and English and French chemists made the fundamental discoveries in chemical theory. In the early part of the 19th century the development of the factory system with steam driven machinery was an English achievement and later an American. It was Americans who developed the telegraph and telephone as industrial implements and thereby changed in a large measure the habits of industrial, commercial and financial life, and in many respects of domestic and family life also. Dr. Eliot names a long list of inventions and discoveries in science and medicine, none of which was originated by the Germans. Among these he cites wireless telegraphy, electric lighting, the aeroplane, the cotton gin, anesthesia, asepsia, the rubber and oil industries and the many others in which Germany has been merely a follower in the steps of other nations. The plain fact, he asserts, is that the German system of education and government has not had freedom enough in it, and that the free peoples, among whom there exists a large amount of social and industrial mobility, are the peoples that have produced all the great science inventions of the last two centuries and this

MISCELLANEOUS.

N. F. F.—Christ did not ascend until 40 days after Easter.

KNOWNOTHING.—A white flower is worn by observers of "Mothers' day," celebrated throughout the country the second Sunday in May. The idea of a national memorial day, on which all persons, irrespective of race or creed, may honor the living mother and recall the blessed memories of mothers that are gone was conceived by Miss Anne Jarvis of Philadelphia. Her original idea embraced the simultaneous observance in every part of the world of the love and reverence which all men and women owe their mothers. The white carnation was especially chosen because of its whiteness, which stands for purity; its form and fragrance, representing beauty and love; its wide field of growth and lasting qualities, symbolizing charity and faithfulness—all a true mother's virtues. The purpose of this international honor to "mother" has been indorsed by leading men in the political and religious life of the world, by lodges, societies, churches and schools. The especial tribute asked on that day is some act of kindness in remembrance of one's mother.

H. F.—The Constitution, in refering to the United States, says "their enemies." It is a custom of later years to say United States is. * * * Osteopathic principles; the fluids of the human body contain greater or less amounts of chemical substances, organic or inorganic, and hence carry a store of drugs that may be required for checking and destroying any imaginable disease; disease itself is nothing more than the powers of life being affected abnormally and along with the normal effect, continually arises; only the activity of those powers immediately redirected, under the influence of the drugs in the body, and disease no sooner arises than it is counteracted and disposed of. Osteopaths maintain that the reestablishment of health may be prevented only by one cause, that is the slight displacement of some bone, which would naturally form an obstruction to the flow of the drug-carrying fluids, therefore, to effect the cure of any disease whatever, all that has to be done, they say, is to localize the causative displacement of the bone or bones, and remove it by appropriate manipulations. * * * Chiropractic treatment is through the adjustment of articulations of the human body, particularly those of the spine, with the object of relieving pressure or tension upon the nerve filaments. The operations are with the hands, no drugs being administered. In 1912 there were seven chiropractic schools in the United States and about 7000 practitioners, some of them in Canada. There are patients who have been cured by it.

In Memoriam.

In loving remembrance of our dear father, Anton Kavagevic, who departed this life one year ago, April 22, 1917.
Silently the shade of evening
Gathers round our lonely door,
Silently they bring before us
The dear face we see no more.
So often we go to his grave,
Lingering there and trying to be brave;
But, oh, 'tis hard to bear
To go away and leave you there.
Sadly missed by his WIFE AND CHILDREN.

In Memoriam.

In memory of our dear mother, Henrietta Kompst, who departed this life five years ago, April 28, 1913.
It was the first of May
We laid mother away;
And in the grave yard softly sleeping
Peace will be your sleep.
How we have longed for you, mother dear,
Through five long, lonely years.
Time rolls on; it will not stay,
Days of sadness come o'er us since that day,
And tears in silence often flow.
How we miss you, no one but us knows.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

POULTRY, BIRDS and ANIMALS

MAY IS IMPORTANT MONTH TO POULTRY MEN

Culling of Flocks and Selection From Chicks Just Hatched Should Be Attended To.

By RUSSELL F. PALMER
Of the American School of Poultry Husbandry, Leavenworth, Kan.

There is no necessity or good reason for poultrymen to be greatly alarmed simply because poultry and eggs are cheap just at this time. With pork, mutton and beef selling at record prices, and all higher than ever known, you can depend upon the consuming public resorting to the use of more poultry and eggs. It is only to be expected that poultry would be cheap and the market flooded just after what is known as Rule 14 was lifted.

If your hens are laying well it is unwise to rush them to market. The low price of eggs is also only temporary. The firms and individuals that have been storing eggs in the past, have held off this season. Therefore the eggs produced have gone onto the leading markets in large numbers and this has forced the price down. These parties will now begin to buy and this will gradually bring the price up, and if they do not do so, you can expect to see but few storage eggs in competition with fresh eggs next fall and winter which will cause the price to be much higher than ever known. If you do not need the income from your eggs to pay your feed bills, store your eggs by preserving them in water glass and keeping them in a cool place. In a few weeks many hens will begin to moult and practically stop laying, and that will bring the price up again.

Cull Out Fat Hens.

But we don't recommend wasting feed, time and money caring for unprofitable hens and chicks. Thousands of dollars and much foodstuff can be saved if poultrymen will carefully and fearlessly cull their laying and breeding hens. Hens that are too fat—that "hang down" about their abdomen; hens that appear of low vitality; hens that really do not have the apparent size required of their breed; hens that have long toe nails or long slim, unhealthy appearing heads and beaks should all be culled and placed on the market as soon as possible. They will not produce enough eggs during this month and next to pay for half their feed and any chicks matched from their eggs would very likely prove vastly unprofitable. It is only such hens as these that we would be in any great rush to cull.

Watch your baby chicks and all young stock to keep the flock free of any that are runts or weaklings. Considering present prices of grain it will certainly not pay to endeavor to raise any chicks which do not appear strong when hatched. Keep and brood only those chicks which start growing rapidly and keep going right along.

How to Select Cockerels.

Keep over till fall and winter only such young cockerels as will be used or sold for breeding next winter. Those intended ultimately for market should be caponized as soon as old enough to determine their sex or should be sold as broilers as rapidly as they reach a weight of one and one-fourth to one and three-fourths pounds. Note the difference in the development of comb and in the shape of back, saddle and neck feathers of a male and female. This difference will help you in determining the cockerels to caponize. It will not pay to make capons from the cockerels of light weight breeds such as anconas, leghorns and campines. Young cockerels of these breeds will grow to a weight of one and one-fourth to one and one-half pounds very rapidly, and will show very little gain in weight during the month following, therefore will prove more profitable if marketed early, thus saving feed and work besides giving more house room and range to the growing pullets intended for layers next winter.

It is hoped that most breeders have at least used trap nests during the season for saving hatching eggs. The eggs marked with the leg band number of the hen that laid it (which is determined by the use of trap nests) when placed in incubators can be divided on the morning of the eighteenth day. Ordinary wire corn poppers can be placed in the incubator trays. All birds marked as having been laid by a certain hen are placed in a popper basket and the basket is labeled. When the hatch is completed, the chicks found in this basket are known to be dammed by a certain hen whose leg band number is recorded, and the baby chicks are all marked either with punch holes in the webs of their feet or with open pigeon leg bands which are numbered, and which are later transferred to the wing.

Many years of time can be saved and more rapid progress made both in breeding for standard qualities or high egg production where the dam, as well as the sire, of all chicks is known. It is not too late for every breeder to hatch and pedigree a few chicks from his best hens. It will pay anyone to do so.

During May both lice and mites cause worry and loss to millions of poultry raisers. It is better to prevent these pests than to wait and after suffering loss to your hens and chicks then attempt to get rid of them. To prevent and rid the grown stock of lice, mix two parts of vaseline with one part of blue ointment. Apply an amount about the size of a pea to the skin of each fowl about one inch below the vent. A like amount should be applied to the skin of each thigh. Rub the ointment well into the skin.

To prevent and rid poultry houses of mites. Clean them thoroughly and keep them clean. Dropping boards should be scraped clean at least twice each week. During this month clean out all foul litter from the floors and nests and with the use of a spray pump throw a stream of mite killing liquid on all perches, dropping boards, side walls, ceilings and floor about the roosting quarters. Be certain the liquid reaches and penetrates all cracks and joints. Paint or spray all nests and hoppers and the undersides of the dropping boards or roosts. Treat the brood coops in a like manner. During the hot weather season this treatment should be repeated once a month to all coops occupied by growing youngsters and every six weeks to all houses used by grown stock. We have found a mixture of two parts of kerosene or crude oil and one part crude carbolic acid to be a simple and a very effective spray. We have also used several prepared sprays now on the market and with very good results.

Poultry Problems Solved

Egg Preservatives.

Can water glass that was used last year for preserving eggs be used again this year?—E. J. H., St. Louis, Mo.

We have never tried to use the same water-glass solution two years in succession and would not wish to do so, as it deteriorates and is likely to become putrid from filth, etc., that may have gotten into it with the eggs. The water glass costs so little that it would not pay to use anything but the fresh solution.

MEDIUM-SIZED BREEDS BEST FOR BACK YARDS

Large Hens Get Too Fat to Lay, Small Hens May Eat Egg or Feathers.

Hens of the medium-sized breeds —Plymouth Rocks, Wyandottes, Rhode Island Reds and Orpingtons— are best suited to back-yard conditions. Large hens kept in close confinement are likely to get too fat to lay well. Small, nervous hens are apt to develop such vices as egg eating and feather eating. The bad tendencies mentioned do not prohibit the keeping of large and small breeds in small back yards, but makes it necessary for the keeper to use extraordinary care to keep them in good condition and productive. White and light-colored varieties are not desirable for small back yards, because their plumage soils too easily.

Where to Purchase Stock.

As a rule it is most satisfactory to buy hens of a local poultry keeper or dealer in live poultry. Desirable small flocks are frequently offered by people who are obliged by change of work or of residence to sell their poultry. Dealers in live poultry everywhere sort out from their general receipts the hens that show good breeding and quality to sell back-yard poultry keepers. When satisfactory stock cannot be obtained locally, the advertising columns of poultry papers, agricultural papers, or newspapers that carry poultry advertising should be consulted, and the hens bought from the nearest breeder who can supply what is wanted at a reasonable price.

For the back-yard flock kept to produce eggs only, it is not necessary to have hens of extra good standard quality. What breeders of standard poultry call choice utility hens are as good as any for egg production and cost but little more than ordinary mongrels. Hens of this grade in the medium-sized breeds are usually a little under standard weights, and have superficial faults, as unsoundness of color, or irregularity of markings or of the shape of the comb, which in no way affect their laying capacity, but make them unfit for exhibition and undesirable for breeding purposes.

Note Condition of Birds.

When buying hens in person particular attention should be given to the general condition—whether the bird seems vigorous and lively, and to the appearance of the comb and the condition of the feet. Healthy hens have bright red combs and bright eyes. A slight paleness of the comb is simply an indication that the hen is not laying at the time; but a bird whose comb has either a yellowish or a bluish cast should be rejected, for these are symptoms of internal disorders. The skin and scales of legs and toes should be smooth, and the soles of the feet soft and free from corns.

Girl Lists Birds That Destroy Pests

The careful study of birds and bird habits is increasing in our public schools. It is study of a very useful and interesting kind. Knowledge of birds is uncommon. How many men and women can name practically every bird in America either at sight or from hearing its song? A 10-year-old school girl in Central Missouri recently made a compilation of birds based upon their destruction of various pests. Doubtless it was not complete, but it was correct as far as it went. Here it is:

Destroyers of vermin—Jays, crows, owls, buzzards.

Scavengers—Gulls, buzzards.

Wild weed seed eaters—Doves, sparrows, cuckoos, blackbirds, larks, orioles, cardinals, quail.

Insect destroyers—Wrens, orioles, quails, swallows, mocking birds, fly catchers, larks, blackbirds, cardinals, whip-poor-wills, jays, woodpeckers, doves, killdeer, crows, owls, bluebirds, sparrows, catbirds, cuckoos.

War Economy Brought Guinea Prices Down

War conditions have had a peculiar effect upon the market for guinea fowls. Usually guineas are in demand at comparatively high prices for banquets and high-grade hotel trade. Their dark flesh and gamey flavor have made them acceptable substitutes for wild birds. But since the war, banquets and similar opportunities for lavish expenditures are in disfavor.

W. F. Priebe, poultry specialist of the U. S. Food Administration staff states that owners of storage stocks of guinea fowls are offering them at comparatively low prices and now is a timely opportunity for the public to use guinea fowl for variety on the table and to conserve red meats.

A food substitute class at Yeatman High School will continue for eight consecutive weeks, meeting each Tuesday at 3 p. m.

With Good Pasturage Goose Needs No Feeding

So long as there is any pasturage geese require no feeding. They will come home every night satisfied and happy, literally full to their beaks. While corn given a few weeks before killing time will fatten them for market.

Newly hatched goslings are tender, and must be treated accordingly.

Build a pen of boards, six or eight inches broad, the boards put lengthwise on the ground, and of a size that the goslings may exercise well. Size is not so essential as it is necessary for the pen to be moved to a new place every few days.

A portable pen is the handiest, and a lath coop, bottomless, would be all right, if the lath were set close together.

The idea is to prevent the goslings getting out and wandering, or to prevent their attempting to get out and choking themselves, also to provide a windbreak.

A warm coop should be placed at one end of the pen, clean straw being kept therein.

Select a well-drained grassy spot for this pen. If no grass is obtainable, select a dry spot, and feed grass, either the clippings or slabs of sod. It is necessary for the goslings to have grass. Old-time geese raisers say it is no use to have goslings hatch until the grass is high enough for them to get good bites; but if grass is fed to them they will thrive.

They like corn bread, or corn bread and milk, or any bread soaked in milk. Always use sweet milk.

Have clean sand in their pen, and mix the sand with their bread several times each week.

The lice will not trouble if the young are raised in a pen, without a hen, and a hen isn't at all needed, for one can cover the coop with carpet or sacks, to insure warmth. Sprinkle coal oil on the cloth they are covered with the first night, and if kept by themselves, there will be no louse trouble.

Give water to drink in a can, quart size, for although a water fowl, goslings cannot stand a wetting while young, at least the large Toulouse cannot. Keep penned most of the time until feathers begin to replace the down, then they are counted safe.

"Swat the Rooster," Is Summer Slogan

"Swat the Rooster" is a slogan which should be adopted by every poultry raiser during the summer months, for absolutely millions of dollars' worth of market eggs are spoiled every summer because they are fertile, and the poultry raisers are losing this tremendous sum each year.

The Missouri State Poultry Experiment Station has been advocating a "Swat the Rooster" campaign in Missouri for several years, and other states are also following the plan. We are told by produce men in different parts of the State that the quality of summer market eggs has been materially improved but there are still large numbers of poultry people who do not recognize the importance of marketing infertile eggs during the summer months.

Previous to this year we have been advocating removing the males from the flock during the month of May, but this year on account of the call of our Government for more poultry, we think it best to defer the "Swat the Rooster day" until June 1. At that time all surplus male birds should be disposed of. If you have a good male bird you wish to keep for another year, place him in a pen with a few hens and he will be much better as a breeder another season. Separate these birds from the flock of layers, and use the eggs from them at home.

Every Home Can Help Raise Soldier Foods

Let this fact be remembered: The greater part of the food supply must come from the United States, not only for our 1,760,000 and more boys in the army and navy, but we shall have to feed our people at home, and must also supply the allies who are fighting this world's greatest battles. Mr. Hoover asks for more poultry, chickens, turkeys, ducks and geese.

Every home, no matter how palatial or humble, should maintain a little house flock, to consume what would otherwise go to waste—the offal from the kitchen table, garden and lawn and transform same into one of the best foods known to mankind—strictly fresh eggs, with an occasional fowl for Sunday's dinner. To the dweller in village, town or city, a well-kept flock of a dozen or 25 good laying hens will prove valuable and such flocks may be profitably maintained in every back lot.

Economic Garden at Shaw's Attracts.

The economic garden being cultivated at Shaw's Garden under direction of Alexander Lure, is attracting unusual interest because of the educational value to hundreds of persons who are devoting backyards to the production of foods as a war measure.

IN A MILITARY HOSPITAL

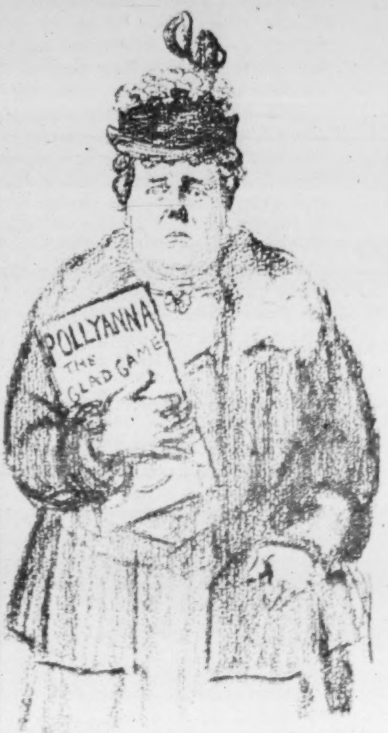
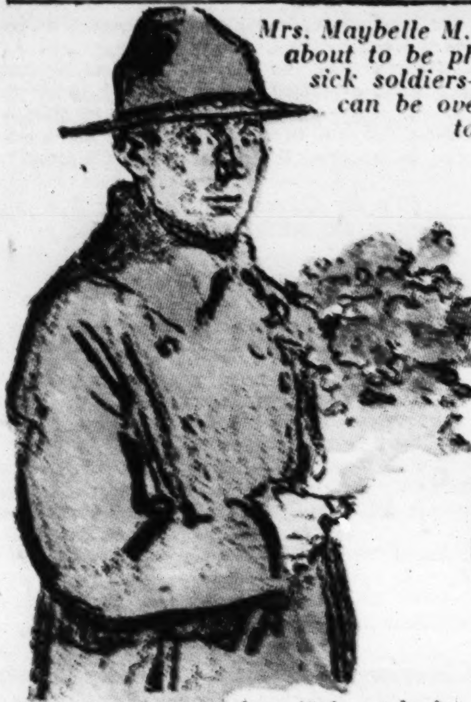
W. E. HILL

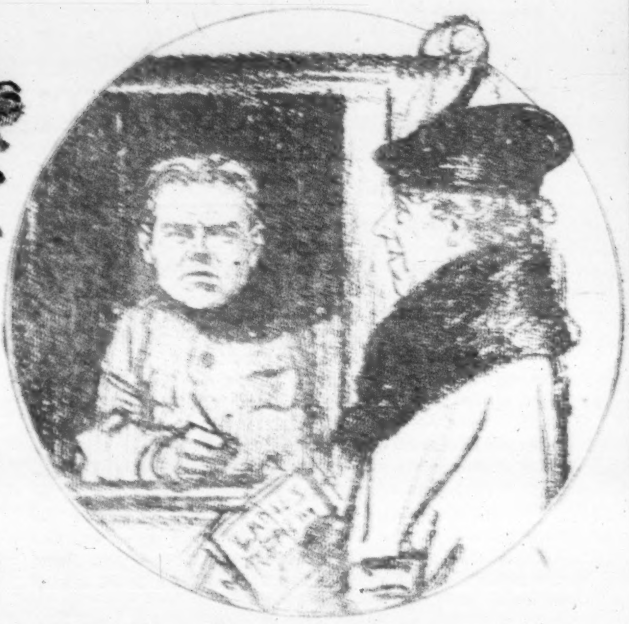


Mrs. Maybelle M. McGooey, suburban social light and angel of mercy at large, about to be photographed in the act of distributing flowers among the sick soldiers—provided the objections of the stupid nurse in charge can be overcome. Incidentally, a perfectly good craps game had to be discontinued when Maybelle M. appeared.

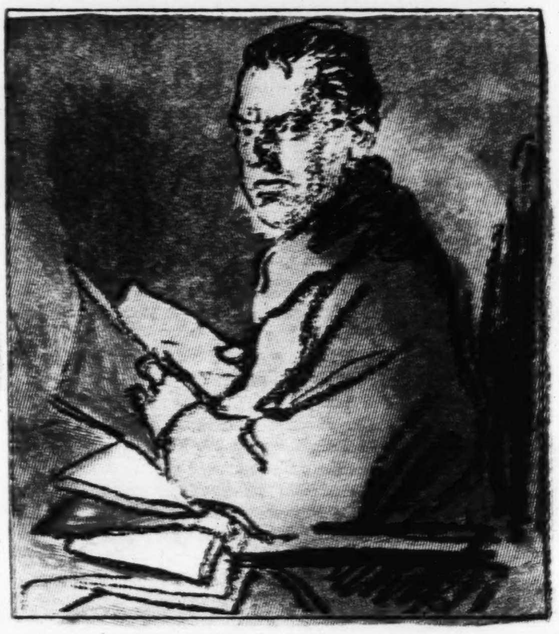
Mrs. Bogle, who came to cheer the shell-shock patients, is awfully upset to find she has got into the contagious ward by mistake. She is making a hasty exit, holding her breath.



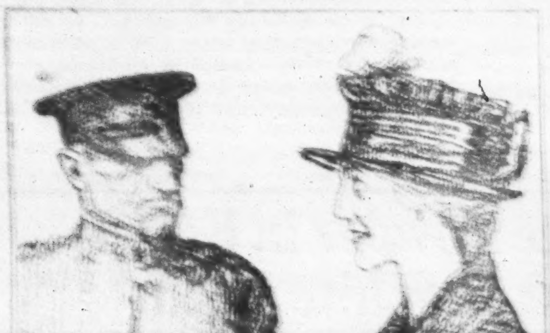
Private Jones, hospital orderly, after seeing to it that all the flowers left by visitors are properly distributed, makes his regular Sunday night call on his girl.



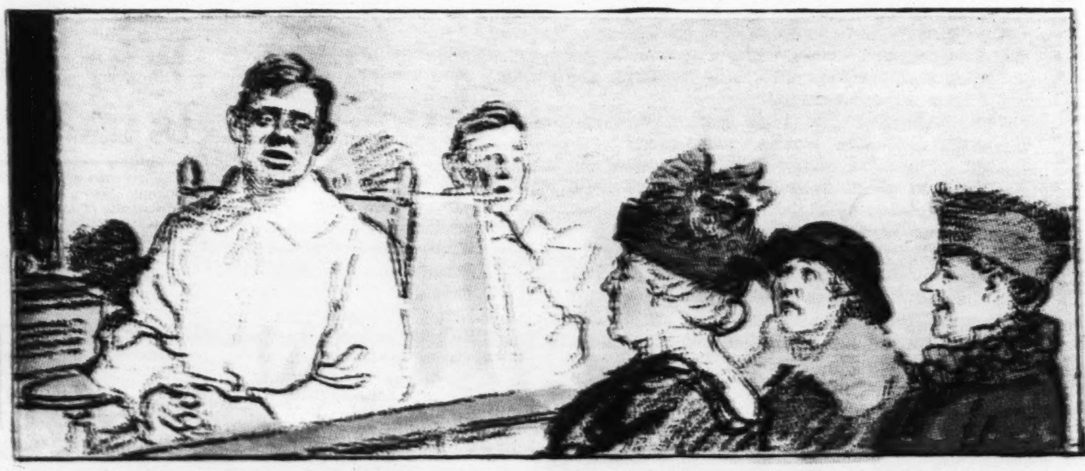
"No young girls admitted without a chaperon!" Private Wattles, in charge at the gate, makes a big hit with the elderly Miss Crawley.



"For a sick soldier laddie," was written on the label of this latest batch of reading matter—three numbers of Good Housekeeping, the Sperry System and 11 copies of the New Republic (one year old).



Miss Mossett, who is "crazy to do something," has a perfectly corking idea and interviews Capt. Ropp to get permission to read aloud every day to those poor boys in the guard house.



"Yes, mam, all I want is to get back to the trenches and hand them dirty Germans a few wallops!" Private Klamm, convalescing from mumps, tries his best to live up to the hero stuff expected of him.

"ARE YOU A PARTNER OR A COMPETITOR IN THIS HERE WAR BUSINESS?"

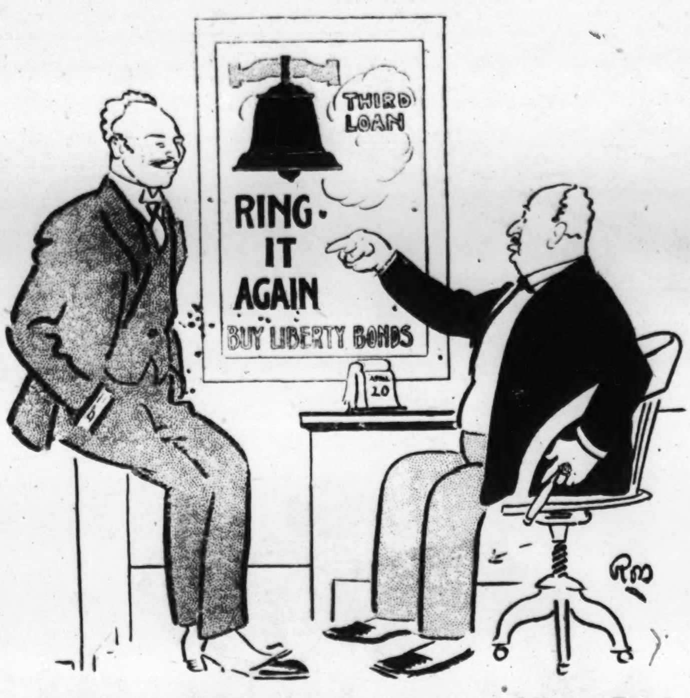
. . MAWRUSS ASKS ABE . .

By Montague Glass.

"SOME people look so charitable when they tell you they just bought it a Liberty Bond, Mawruss, that you would think they had been founding an orphan asylum or something," Abe Potash said one morning in April. "Take for instance Max Immerglick, Mawruss, and the way that feller acted when he showed me the stub of his check book where he paid $500 to the United States Government for a first-class, gilt-edge, A No. 1 investment, y'understand. I expected him to say any moment that he was very funny that way and that he never could resist an appeal from the needy and that his soft heart would be the ruin of him."

"That feller has got a soft heart like the chairman of the Loan and Discount Committee of a conservative first national bank, Abe," Morris commented, "which buying a Liberty Bond is just so much a charitable act as throwing away your bread on the waters with a cast-iron guarantee that it will return as cake in a few years, bearing interest at the rate of 4 1-4 per cent per annum. Nobody could feel when he is buying a Liberty Bond that he is doing the United States Government any favors, Abe. Think what the transaction really means, Abe. A man has got a thousand dollars which instead of keeping it in his home he puts it in a bank because he figures that a bank could take better care of it. Now suppose he buys a Liberty Bond with his thousand dollars. All he is doing is repeating what he has already done, only THIS time he figures that no matter how good his bank really might be, the United States could take better care of his money than any bank on earth. And just for protecting himself like that, y'understand, he gets paid interest at the rate of 4 1-4 per cent per annum."

"Instead of paying him interest for such a thing, the U. S. Government should ought to charge him rent, the same as a safe deposit vault company would," Abe continued.



"Nobody could feel when he is buying a Liberty Bond that he is doing the United States Government any favors, Abe."

"And the fact that his money is drawing more than savings bank interest in a fireproof, burglar-proof and failure-proof super-banks, Abe, ain't all the satisfaction that he is getting out of the transaction, either. Anybody that buys a Liberty Bond is also getting a thousand dollar interest in the United Allies, Limited, the only corporation with a soul, Abe. It's a privilege to be able to buy your way into such a corporation, Abe, because as a matter of fact, the only people who are really and truly eligible to become stockholders is men between 20 and 31 years of age, which has still got their health and a 38-inch waistline. In other words, Abe, the only excuse for living that a fat man has got nowadays is the Liberty Bond which he buys, and if he don't buy all he can afford, y'understand, he is in the same class as a healthy young feller of army age who is trying to dodge the draft."

"Say! What's the use of getting poetical about it, Mawruss," Abe said. "To me it is a plain business proposition. Every man which is living today in this country is a partner in the war business, and, like any other business, if some of the partners give their time and experience to the business, the other partners gives the capital. So whether you call Liberty Bonds 'bonds' or 'articles of co-partnership,' y'understand, everybody over the age of 21 which ain't in a military uniform ought to be able to show such a bond or be kicked off the premises, because the whole United States these days must got to be considered as one big war factory with signs all over it reading:

" 'NO ADMISSION EXCEPT ON BUSINESS.' "

"I would even go farther than that, Abe," Mawruss said. "To my mind, anyone who don't buy a Liberty Bond is not only NOT a partner in this big war business of the U. S., but he is actually working for our competitors, Germany and Austria, because if there is somebody hanging around idle, he is slowing up the output. So this is the question which it is up to every American sitson to answer:

" 'What do you want to be considered in this here war business of ours—a partner or a competitor?' "

"There is only but one answer, Mawrus," Abe said. "Every sitson wants to be a partner. In fact he's GOT to be a partner, otherwise he an't naturalized, even if his grandfather come over on the Mayflower even."

"All right," Morris said, "then if he wants to be a partner he's got to get his article of co-partnership, and with these here articles of co-partnership you don't got to pay a lawyer a big fee to see that the other partners ain't skinning you. All you need is to step to the nearest bank and

"BUY LIBERTY BONDS."

WOULD YOU HIT A MAN WHO IS WEARING GLASSES?

Or accept a receipt dated on Sunday, or testify to what you "saw through glass," or depend on a man's word against a woman's in court, or pay any rent after the landlord tells you to move?—Neither these nor many other things will you do if you are a believer in the "statutes" of "curbstone" law, which have millions of followers, but no existence except in the imagination. -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- -:- -:-

PERHAPS hundreds of thousands, or even millions, of persons believe that a receipt signed with a lead pencil or given on Sunday is void. This erroneous notion constitutes one of the statutes in a large unwritten book which has been called "curbstone" law. The "statutes" have no standing in any court or elsewhere but in the imagination, yet in some mysterious way they continue year after year and decade after decade to retain life and gain new followers. Some of the more important maxims of "curbstone" law have been collected and reduced to writing by a Michigan lawyer, Joseph L Hooper of Battle Creek, who in Case and Comment, a legal magazine, in addition to presenting them, discusses some theories as to their origin.

"Curbstone law," he says, "is that rule of conduct practiced and believed in by about nine-tenths of the inhabitants of these states. It is the quintessence of the common law—the commonest common law. It rests purely on tradition; it has only the sanction of its votaries; but it is a legal system, as certainly as the Code Napoleon.

"Curbstone law forbids one man to strike another who is wearing eyeglasses. To hit a man wearing glasses is a felony, punishable by imprisonment for a long term of years. At least a hundred times in my practice I have heard this unwritten law expounded.

"This immunity has saved many a man from punishment, whether merited or not. I have known of only one instance (which was the real inspiration of this article) where this law was circumvented. A man and his wife had an altercation with an eyeglass-bearing boarder, who broadly insulted the lady. Her husband was about to beat the boarder as to the head, when his spouse interposed, saying: 'Don't hit him! He wears glasses!' Whereupon her husband plucked the legal talisman from the boarder's nose, laid it carefully on a bureau and smote his unglassed opponent, nose, hip and thigh.

"Under the provisions of curbstone law a witness may not testify to acts seen through a pane of glass. In other words, if you are sitting in a hotel window and see a murder committed in the street, you may not, as a witness, give your version of the crime. When I was a prosecuting attorney, I asked a policeman what he was going to testify to as to an affray he had witnessed near the jail. 'Nothing; I can't testify; I seen it through glass,' was his rejoinder.

"Another interesting maxim of this great system is this: 'A woman's word goes further'n a man's in court.' If a woman witness says a thing is so, and a man witness says it isn't, the woman must be believed. Not may be—must be. To us students of other systems, who look on women witnesses as so many Sapphiras, this seems passing strange; but to the curbstone lawyer it is gospel.

"If a man owes you a bill and you dun him for it on Sunday, that cancels the bill. This is equally true if you dun him over the telephone. If a landlord serves his tenant a notice to quit, the tenant need pay no more rent, even if he stays on for a month. The notice absolves him. A prosecuting attorney must advise everybody and try everyone's case for nothing, whether the matter is civil or criminal. If you want to collect a bill, and don't care to hire a lawyer, the prosecutor must 'take it up on behalf of the people.'

"Many a client has come to my office to inform me that someone had garnisheed his pay. 'Do you owe him the money?' I ask. 'Yes, I owe him the money all right.' 'Then you will have to pay him.' 'Oh, no, I paid him a dollar last week. That stops him from garnisheeing me, don't it?' 'Not at all.' 'Why, you can't garnishee a man if he pays a dollar a week on his bill,' says the client firmly. Here the common or garden variety of law (which I practice) and the curbstone variety, in which the client has unbounded faith, struggle for supremacy, and he usually leaves me feeless, to find a lawyer who agrees with him.

"You must bequeath at least a dollar to each of your children or your last will and testament is void. Many a would-be will breaker huskily breathes this maxim into your patient ear.

"Perhaps loosely given opinions by real lawyers are the foundation of many of these maxims. An old lawyer of this vicinity was greatly annoyed whenever he walked from his office to the courthouse by people stopping him and stating hypothetical cases affecting a brother or friend—never the questioner himself. One day one of these parasites stopped him and said: 'I got a friend that's got a farm that's got a fence, and the fellow on the next farm tears it down every night. I told him to git a club and break his head the next time he done it. That'll hold in law, won't it?' 'Sure,' answered the lawyer abstractedly, his mind on the draft of a motion which he was to present in court.

"A day or so later the questioner summoned the lawyer to the jail, where he sat moodily behind the bars. 'Say,' he ejaculated, 'you remember what you told me about that fence deal the other day?' 'No,' answered the lawyer, honestly enough. 'You told me when he tore down my fence to thump him over the head, and I done it, and they pinched me.' 'Did I really tell you that?' 'You sure did.' 'Well,' said the lawyer, turning away reflectively, 'isn't that just like one of my damned curbstone opinions?'

"Such is curbstone law. Unrecognized by the courts and textbook writers, it is none the less a system of jurisprudence that numbers its votaries by the millions."

Long Live the King! ---

Mathilde, haunting the market with its gayly striped booths, its rabbits hung in pairs by the ears, its strings of dried vegetables, its lace bazaars—Mathilde was in touch with the people. It was Mathilde, and not one of his agents, who had brought word of the approaching revolt of the coppersmiths' guild, and enabled him to check it almost before it began. A stoic, this Mathilde, with her tall, spare figure and glowing eyes, stoic and patriot. Once every month she burned four candles before the shrine of Our Lady of Sorrows in the cathedral, because of four sons she had given to her country.

On the evening of the day Hedwig had made her futile appeal to the King, the Chancellor sat alone. His dinner, almost untasted, lay at his elbow. It was 9 o'clock. At something after 7 he had paid his evening visit to the King and had found him uneasy and restless.

"Sit down," the King had said. "I need steadying, old friend."

"Steadying, sire?"

"I have had a visit from Hedwig. Rather a stormy one, poor child." He turned and fixed on his Chancellor his faded eyes. "In this course that you have laid out, and that I am following, as I always have"—irony in this, but some truth, too—"have you no misgivings? You still think it is the best thing?"

"It is the only thing."

"But all this haste," put in the King querulously. "Is that so necessary? Hedwig begs for time. She hardly knows the man."

"Time! But I thought"—— He hesitated. How say to a dying man that time was the one thing he did not have?

"Another thing. She was incoherent, but I gathered that there was someone else. The whole interview was cyclonic. It seems, however, that this young protege of yours, Larisch, has been making love to her over Otto's head."

Mettlich's face hardened, a gradual process, as the news penetrated in all its significance.

"I should judge," the King went on relentlessly, "that this vaunted affection of his for the boy is largely assumed, a cover for other matters. But," he added, with a flicker of humor. "my granddaughter assures me that it is she who has made the advances. I believe she asked him to elope with her, and he refused!"

"A boy-and-girl affair, sire. He is loyal. And in all of this, you and I are reckoning without Karl. The Princess hardly knows him, and naturally she is terrified. But his approaching visit will make many changes. He is a fine figure of a man and women"——

"Exactly," said the King, dryly. What the Chancellor meant was that women always had loved Karl, and the King understood.

"His wild days are over," bluntly observed the Chancellor. "He is 40, sire."

"Aye," said the King. "And at 40 a bad man changes his nature and purifies himself in marriage! Nonsense. Karl will be as he has always been. But we have gone into this before. Only, I am sorry for Hedwig. Hilda would have stood it better. She is like her father. However"—his voice hardened—"the thing is arranged, and we must carry out our contract. Get rid of this young Larisch."

The Chancellor sat reflecting, his chin dropped forward on his breast. "Otto will miss him."

"Well, out with it. I may not dismiss him. What, then?"

"It is always easy to send men away. But it is sometimes better to retain them, and force them to your will. We have here an arrangement that is satisfactory. Larisch is keen, young and loyal. Hedwig has thrown herself at him. For that, sire, she is responsible, not he."

"Then get rid of her," growled the King.

The Chancellor rose. "If the situation is left to me, sire," he said, "I will promise two things: That Otto will keep his friend and that the Princess Hedwig will bow to your wishes without further argument."

"Do it, and God help you!" said the King, again with the flicker of amusement.

The Chancellor had gone home, walking heavily along the darkening streets. Once again he had conquered. The reins remained in his gnarled old hands. And he was about to put the honor of the country into the keeping of the son of Maria Menrad, whom he had once loved.

So now he sat in his study and waited. A great meerschaum pipe, a stag's head with branching antlers and colored dark by years of use, lay on his tray; and on his knee, but no longer distinguishable in the dusk, lay an old daguerreotype of Maria Menrad.

When he heard Nikky's quick step as he came along the tiled passage, he slipped the case into the pocket of his shabby housecoat, and picked up the pipe.

Nikky saluted and made his way across the room in the twilight, with the ease of familiarity. "I am late, sir," he apologized. "We found our man, and he is safely jailed. He made no resistance."

"Sit down," said the Chancellor. And, touching a bell, he asked Mathilde for coffee. "So we have him," he reflected. "The next thing is to discover if he knows who his assailants were. That, and the person for whom he acted. However, I sent for you for another reason. What is this about the Princess Hedwig?"

"The Princess Hedwig!"

"What folly, boy! A young girl who cannot know her own mind! And for such a bit of romantic trifling you would ruin yourself. It is ruin. You know that."

"I am sorry," Nikky said simply. "As far as my career goes, it does not matter. But I am thinking of her."

"A trifle late."

"But," Nikky spoke up valiantly, "it is not romantic folly, in the way you mean, sir. As long as I live, I shall—— It is hopeless, of course, sir."

"Madness," commented the Chancellor. "Sheer spring madness. You would carry her off, I dare say, and hide yourselves at the end of the rainbow! Folly!"

Nikky remained silent, a little sullen.

"The Princess went to the King with her story this evening." The boy started. "A cruel proceeding, but the young are always cruel. The expected result has followed: the King wishes you sent away."

"I am at his command, sir."

The Chancellor filled his pipe from a bowl near by, working deliberately. Nikky sat still, rather rigid.

"May I ask," he said at last, "that you say to the King, that the responsibility is mine? No possible blame can attach to the Princess Hedwig. I love her, and—I am not clever. I show what I feel."

He was showing it then, both hurt and terror, not for himself, but for her. His voice shook in spite of his efforts to be every inch a soldier.

"The immediate result," said the Chancellor cruelly, "will doubtless be a putting forward of the date for her marriage." Nikky's hands clenched. "A further result would be your dismissal from the army. One does not do such things as you have done, lightly."

"Lightly!" said Nikky Larisch. "God!"

"But," continued the Chancellor, "I have a better way. I have faith, for one thing, in your blood. The son of Maria Menrad must be—his mother's son. And the Crown Prince is attached to you. Not for your sake, but for his, I am inclined to be lenient. What I shall demand for that leniency is that no word of love pass again between you and the Princess Hedwig."

"It would be easier to go away."

"Aye, of course. But 'easier' is not your word nor mine." But Nikky's misery touched him. He rose and placed a heavy hand on the boy's shoulder. "It is not as simple as that. I know, boy. But you are young, and these things grow less with time. You need not see her. She will be forbidden to visit Otto or to go to the riding school. You see, I know about the riding school! And, in a short time now, the marriage will solve many difficulties."

Nikky closed his eyes. It was getting to be a habit, just as some people crack their knuckles.

"We need our friends about us," the Chancellor continued. "The carnival is coming, always a dangerous time for us. The King grows weaker day by day. A crisis is impending for all of us, and we need you."

Nikky rose, steady enough now, but white to the lips.

"I give my word, sir," he said. "I shall say no word of—of how I feel to Hedwig. Not again. She knows—and I think," he added proudly, "that she knows I shall not change. That I shall always"—— "Exactly!" said the Chancellor. It was the very pitch of the King's dry old voice. "Of course, she knows, being a woman. And now, good-night."

But long after Nikky had gone he sat in the darkness. He felt old and tired and a hypocrite. The boy would not forget, as he himself had not forgotten. His hand thrust into his pocket, rested on the faded daguerreotype there.

Peter Niburg was shot at dawn the next morning. He went, a coward, to his death, held between two guards and crying piteously. But he died a brave man. Not once in the long hours of his interrogation had he betrayed the name of the Countess Loschek.

Daring Exploit of Three Italian Destroyers

It is like an earthquake in a well-stocked crockery shop, a tremendous clatter. We see the dark mass heave over among some quivers of light. A confused cry, a scattered shouting, a lighting up and agitation of searchlights, a few shots here and there—the alarm!

I place the first bottle in the water. I drop the second on our return route before doubling the headland of Babri. I watch the third wabbling in our insolent wake as we issue from the narrows and head towards the mouth of the bay, passing under the battery of Porto Re, which lights up but does not thunder. The alarm has missed fire.

Outside we inhale the stars as a smith inhales the sparks from his forge. The wind of our speed has the keenness of early spring. If the alarm has been transmitted to Farasina there is a fine hour ahead of us!

At 2:15 we approach the narrows of the channel. We have no arms but the two rapid-firers at the bow and one at the stern. They are ready, with their cases of cartridge bands. But along the whole shore, port and starboard, not a sign of alarm appears. We try to preserve our formation, but the third torpedo boat loses speed and cannot keep up.

Suddenly, from the heights of Prestinezze, a volley or rifle fire bursts out. An outburst of raillery replies. Besides, we light the stern lantern and slow down, the third boat not being in sight behind us.

What has happened? We turn about to go back and seek the laggard. And again pass before the Prestinezzi and right back into the enemy's throat. The sentinels fire no more. Our maneuvers must have made them suspect we were Austrians. We stop in the middle of the well-fortified, well-guarded Farasina Channel, and we remain there, as if we were masters, for a long quarter of an hour.

We listen. We go on still farther to the north. Not a signal for help, not a call is heard. So, for the fourth time we pass through the barriers laughing at the bewildered sentinels.

A little before 5 the lights of the third torpedo boat shine through the haze as it rejoins its companions. So the naval trinity is unhurt. Behind us we leave the rocks of Quarnaro. Our little square flag flutters like a hand, continuously waving. It has its red turned towards Istria.

Dawn is not the same for all. From Italy we are voyaging towards Italy.

Cleaning Warships' Hulls by Electricity

THE old methods of cleaning ships' hulls, which was a laborious and lengthy process, is being replaced by electrical methods. Formerly, it was customary to allow 170 to 200 man-days for the work, but recently several electrically-driven machines have been found to be both speedy and effective. Brushes and scrapers are used, and by their means, at a moderate expenditure of electricity in driving the operating motors, an 18,000-ton battleship can be completely cleaned in twelve hours, and vessels dry-docked after having been cleaned by this method have been found to have remained quite free from any subsequent marine growth.

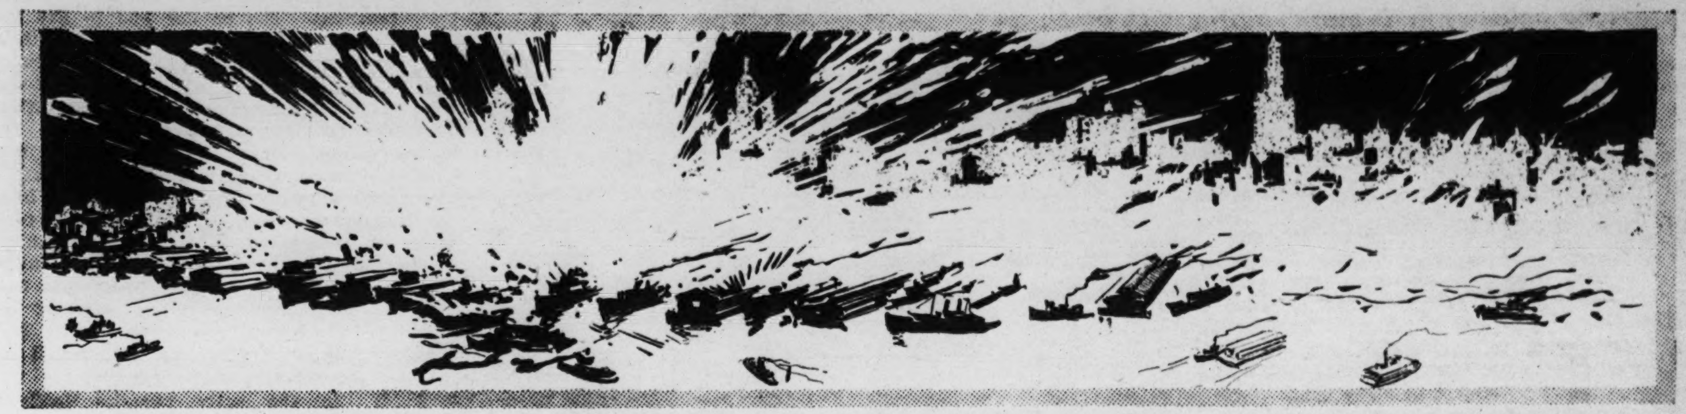
Why Rice Powder in Face Powder Is as Bad as White Lead

To avoid white lead face powders many women have used rice powder. Today specialists say rice powder is almost as bad as white lead. Rice powder is starchy, and, like bread flour, it is quickly turned in a gluey paste by the moisture of the skin. It clogs the cuticle, swells in the pores, causing enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. Prove this yourself. Ask a number of your friends who have enlarged pores blackheads or pimples what face powder they use. Nine out of ten will say rice powder or they use "Poudre de Riz," which is French for rice flour. If you value the charm of a lovely complexion, never use rice powder. You can now use a pure face powder that really beautifies your complexion, and is guaranteed not to injure the most delicate baby skin. La-may Face Powder (French, Poudre L'Ame) is the only powder sold in America at any price guaranteed not to contain nice flour or bismuth or white lead. The specialist who makes this improved powder uses an ingredient that doctors prescribe to heal the skin. Every time you apply this new powder you give your complexion a real beauty treatment. It helps to prevent enlarged pores, blackheads and pimples. It is also remarkably astringent; it tightens the skin, discourages flabbiness, crows' feet and wrinkles. And it really stays on better than any of the old-fashioned powders. If you honestly want a perfect complexion powder, go to any good dealer and ask for Poudre L'Ame (La-may). All big stores sell the twenty-five or fifty-cent size. When you use this delightful Powder La-may you will be surprised how wonderfully it beautifies your complexion. Refuse substitutes. Remember, dealers make more profit on the old-fashioned powders. If you live out of town and your best dealer has not yet got it, you can order white, flesh or brunette by mail of the American agent, Herbert Roystone, 16 E. 18th st., New York. Save this notice.

DR. GARFIELD TELLS THE INSIDE STORY -- OF HIS FAMOUS FUEL ORDER --



"If one of those ships had gone up, all would have gone up, and Brooklyn would have been blown off of Long Island."

After the best minds in Washington had struggled with the problem of moving coal-laden cars to the seacoast, and given it up, he decided that the only way to end freight congestion was to stop production — Secretaries Baker and Daniels thought his plan would precipitate a "whirlwind," but the President received it calmly and gave it his sanction — Hastened by the menace of six ships laden with explosives, stranded in New York harbor -:- -:- -:- -:-

IN the following article Dr. Harry A. Garfield, National Fuel Administrator, tells in his own words why he issued his famous order of last January which closed down all American industries east of the Mississippi River for a period of five days and for several Mondays thereafter. It is the first time that the public has been privileged to hear, straight from headquarters, the reasons for a procedure which caused widespread amazement and called down upon Dr. Gerfield's head a tornado of bitter criticism such as few public men ever have been called upon to endure.

Dr. Garfield accepts full responsibility for the order, and declares that, could time be turned-back, he would issue it again; moreover, he asserts, that if conditions warrant it he will take similar action in the future.

One of the interesting things brought out is the fact that just before he caused the factories to be closed down he discovered that in the harbor of New York six ships, laden to the gunwales with munitions, were anchored, waiting for fuel. A month before had occurred the holocaust at Halifax, caused by the explosion of only one munitions-laden ship. Had the explosives on the vessels in New York harbor let go, the Halifax disaster would have been mild in comparison, and "Brooklyn would have been blown off of Long Island," Dr. Garfield says.

Here is the story, as he told it to a correspondent in Washington the other day:

"COULD time be turned back to Jan 16," Garfield was asked, "would you give the order that closed for five days most of the industries of the country?"

"I would."

"And will you repeat the order?"

"I will, if such an order ever seems to be necessary. If it is, I will, provided I have the power, act promptly and vigorously."

"In the knowledge that you will again be condemned most bitterly?"

"Yes."

"You know, of course, that your fuel order of January is said to have cost the American people several billion dollars?"

"Yes, I know. The figures, even if they are accurate, do not impress me. A vital thing was to be done and was being done by France and Great Britain. I mean that civilization was preparing for the spring battle on the western front.

"The allies had been promised the support of the United States—promised troops, food and war material. That support was not being given. Our troops had to be trained. They could not in large numbers be sent across the Atlantic at that time. But our supplies of food and war material were ready.

"Ready, but they could not be transported because the ships that were to carry them were unable to obtain coal. The ships could not get coal because our railroads were blocked by thousands of loaded cars. Terminals were choked with freight. Docks were piled with freight. Warehouses were filled to the roofs.

"Coal could not reach the ships. And the allies were waiting for those ships to bring them wheat and meat, powder and shells for the armies at the front.

"Whatever else may be said of the order of Jan. 17, it got coal to the ships and the ships sailed and the allied armies on the western front received some of the important things they required for the drive of the Germans that began in March.

"The superwar board, as the newspapers call it, was meeting daily. This board, an offspring of the Council of National Defense, was composed at the time of Secretary Baker, Secretary Daniels, Secretary Lane, Secretary Redfield, Secretary Wilson, Daniel Willard, Mr. Hoover of the Food Administration, Mr. Hurley of the Shipping Board, and myself.

"Relief might be obtained, we agreed, if nonessentials were kept off the railroads. I suppose that every man occupying an important post in Washington has wrestled with the list of some 525 items which the railroads have said could, without great injury to the country, be denied shipping privileges during the time of war.

Dr. Harry A. Garfield.

"I have studied that list frontward and backward and toward each end from the middle. Candy, musical instruments, pleasure automobiles, shotguns, golf balls, jewelry and so an are easily disposed of, but judgments conflict over scores of other articles classified as nonessential.

"Out of the confusion and the pressure of those interests in the production of unnecessary products came the thought that we had been toiling over the wrong list. What was needed was a list of essentials. And even on ground apparently so safe there were perplexities from day. I remember a discussion as to which establishment, the Du Pont powder works or the Bethlehem steel mills, should on a certain occasion first receive supplies of raw material.

"We debated, in this superwar board, the one great problem of the hour, namely, the getting of coal and war material to the seaboard and into ships and the ending of the freight blockade on the railroads. I had talked about the matter as much as anybody and had thought about it in bed at night.

"I didn't see then, strange as it may seem, that the congestion on the railroads was increasing and would continue to increase hour by hour, so long as new products were loaded into cars and supposedly started for their destination. All of the members of the board felt, I am sure, that nothing should be done that would slow down the manufacture of war supplies.

"The railroads, we hoped, would catch up or at least get a hole through the blockade, and that the weather would moderate. Indeed, I believed, from the feel of the air, that we should have a thaw in January. The thaw did not occur and I have ceased to think that I am a weather prophet.

"Ships, I knew, bare of coal with which to get up steam, were laden and idle in our ports. I caused a list of them to be made. Careful and accurate men were assigned to the task. The figures were then checked by the Shipping Board.

"It was learned that 480 ships with cargoes aboard were without coal. They contained great quantities of war material which the armies of France and Great Britain wanted for the German drive on the western front that was certain to begin early in the spring. As a matter of fact, the number was considerably larger than 480, but we did not find all of the ships at the time, and so they could not be included in our report.

"Officers from the French embassy, here in Washington, informed me that 22 vessels under their flag were unable to leave American ports because their bunkers were empty. The cargoes consisted of food and munitions.

"There was plenty of coal, you understand, but it was locked behind thousands of cars laden with other war freight and could not reach the waiting ships. And all the time we were discussing nonessentials and hoping that the railroads would break the jam.

"Then, all at once, the means of relief became clear. If production could be stopped temporarily and the flood of products hourly pouring out upon the tracks held back, the railroads could clear their lines and coal could reach the seaboard.

"My first thought was to stop production during two blocks of three days each—six days in all—and during Mondays through a certain period. January had come, the thaw had not appeared and the East and Middle West were frozen hard and fast.

"Word reach me then that six ships, laden to the gunwales with explosives, were anchored in the harbor of New York. Winds were blowing and ice was moving. If one of those ships had gone up, all would have gone up and Brooklyn would have been blown off of Long Island. I did not wait to verify this report. I had reason to believe that it was true.

"An investigation would have wasted several days. Furthermore, it might not have been conclusive. The confusion was so great that harbor rules were not always strictly enforced. Clearance papers were often made out to cover merchandise and no one could tell

More Remarkable Finds in the Ruins of Pompeii

A REPORT has just been made of the latest discoveries in the little Roman city of Pompeii, a place of 20,000 inhabitants, buried by the eruption of Vesuvius in 79 A. D. The most interesting are in the Street of Abundance, where the interiors of the houses have recently been cleared and where a complete tavern was discovered.

Most important finds have been made at the house of a rich personage named Trebius Valens. On its long front, protected by a broad roof of tiles, is painted in red letters an extraordinary display of advertisements of all kinds. One announces that a gentleman and patron of Pompeii, Lucretius Satius, will give a feast in the amphitheater, providing 30 pairs of gladiators, while his son will add 10 more pairs. This seems to have been the usual number, as similar announcements have been found by other advertisers on other walls.

Trebius' entrance hall, dining hall and garden are now intact, as they were on that day of fire and terror 1800 years ago.

Another remarkable find is a public armory, with a municipal guard in charge. It has a very large room lined with cupboards to hold weapons. On the outer wall are frescoes representing trophies taken from barbarians in Roman triumphs. There is here an allusion to Britain, for the paintings of the trophies, as Prof. Spinazzola has demonstrated, are copied from painting which have been found in Rome celebrating the victories of the Romans in England.

In the recently excavated houses frescoes on the outer walls are common, while in the earlier excavations they were very rarely found, and have all vanished. The tiles which protected the inscriptions and painting were for the most part found in the ashes, but have been carefully removed and replaced in their original position.

The fuller's house, opened up in 1912, has been further excavated to a parallel street. In a bedroom a bed was discovered which had wooden end boards and a wood panel closing the side next to the wall. No other of such date has been found before. All the woodwork and even the mattress and mark of the sheet have been preserved and covered with glass. The bed was richly ornamented, as it had ivory decorations.

At the side of the house is an underground passage decorated with figures and episodes from the Iliad, with the names of the heroes beneath the figures. Large openings gave access to the garden. The inhabitants first took refuge in the passage and then made their way up to the garden, only to die there of suffocation and exhaustion. The bodies of a mother and child, whose skeletons were found there, have been reproduced in the usual way by pouring plaster into the cavities left by the decay of the corpses, and they are a pitifully lifelike group.

The number of balconies on the south side of the Street of Abundance is very noteworthy. It must have given the street a very Tuscan appearance and a most cheerful air. Between the balconies of the different houses are walls to keep out an uninvited intruder.

One very fine house is quite modern in its air. There were no fewer than six rooms in its upper story, and they were large, with paintings on the walls. The pavement of one room was of pale-red cement with a smooth surface, decorated with white marble fragments to form a mosaic pattern.

Making Real Names Over Into Stage Names

HOW many times have you said, in regard to your favorite actor or actress, "I wonder what his real name is?" To one born Sarah Gubb, skepticism is likely to lurk as to the realness of an euphonious name like Hazal Dawn. And it's true, many of our actors and actresses have added to, or detracted from, or changed altogether, their baptismal name.

Hazel Dawn's real name is Hazel Trout; Julia Marlowe early changed her name from that of Frost; Ina Claire was once Claire Faban; Maxine Elliott was born Jessie Dermott; Helen Ware preferred that name to Helen Remer; Trixie Friganza was once Delia O'Callahan.

And the men, too, have changed their nomenclature, but they seem satisfied to make minor changes, feeling, no doubt, some degree of responsibility for the "family name." George Arliss merely cut off the latter half of his hyphenated surname, which is Arliss-Andrews; Arnold Daly cut the first part of his name off, and perhaps it was as wise. Peter Christopher Arnold Daly is rather awkward for newspaper or program uses. Lawrence d'Orsay is really William Lawrence Dorset; Eddie Foy's real name is Edward Fitzgerald; Andrew Mack is really A. McAloon, while Willard Mack preferred that name to Charles McLoughlin. Tully Marshall is another actor who merely dropped his surname, Phillips; while Chauncey Olcott merely changed his given name, which was Chancellor.

No one has done more tricks with a name than Lou Tellegen, whose real handle is Idior Louis Bernard Edmund Van Dammeler; and no one has changed her name more gracefully than Mme. Melba, who adopted it from the name of the city in which she was born—Melbourne, Australia.

The Barrymore family, so well known for two generations, was named Blythe until the elder Barrymore adopted the more unusual name, to which his children have clung.

Maude Adams, one of the most popular actresses on the American stage, changed Kiskadden for the more euphonious Adams.

Julian Eltinge, whose name I have always thought very expressive of his female impersonations, must have chosen it with that end in view. His own name, William Dalton, is more reminiscent of bank robbers and highwaymen.

Actresses, whose married names are unknown to their admiring public, are legion. Did you know that Blanche Bates is Mrs. George Creel? Marie Doro is Mrs. Elliott Dexter. Kitty Gordon is the Hon. Mrs. Henry William Walster Horsley-Beresford. Virginia Harned, who has recently returned to the stage after an absence of several years, is Mrs. William Courtney, wife of the actor. Edith Wynne Mathison is Mrs. Charles Kennedy; while all the world probably knows that Julia Marlowe is wife of E. H. Sothern; Gertrude Elliott is Lady Forbes-Robertson, and Laurette Taylor is Mrs. J. Hartley Manners.

whole business, anyhow, Freddy, and as a starter he has the right of way always."

"O, as to that," said Adam, cheerfully, "I didn't start it. Frederick started it himself by asking me how I came to call the rhinoceros a rhinoceros, and I told him. But it's all right. He and his kind frequently start things without really knowing just where they are going to end. It's a family characteristic. Where he made his mistake was in picking the rhinoceros, instead of the hippopotamus, whose designation was purely physical, and in no sense ethnological."

"Well, you fell down there, anyhow, Adam," said Frederick. "The hippopotamus doesn't look in the least like a horse, and yet you called him the river horse."

"That wasn't my mistake," said Adam, with a grin. "That was a mistake of the Greeks, who thought I meant hippo, a horse, when I meant nothing of the sort. The word I used was hippy, not hippo. I called the beast hippypotamus, because the first time I saw him all I could see was his hips sticking up out of the river, and besides that the poor creature always looked as if he were hipped about something, anyhow, and the name seemed to fit him fore and aft."

"Well, anyhow," interjected Penn, "you showed positive genius when you named the hen."

"Thanks, William," replied Adam, modestly, "but you mustn't give me too much credit for that. There was no genius in it. I couldn't possibly have done anything else. You see, when the first one I saw started rushing around the garden, cackling away like a house afire, prouder than Lucifer, just because she'd laid an egg, an achievement she seemed to think greater than the building of the pyramids, or the discovery of wireless telegraphy, an absurd bundle of fuss and feathers, but a useful member of society for all that, I knew at once she was a hen, because nothing but a hen could think and act that way."

"Simplicity itself!" said Ananias, his eyes green with envy.

"Which gives me the chance to ask," said Dr. Johnson, "which came first, grampa, the chicken or the egg?"

"Ladies first, always," said Adam.

"Then Eve was created before you, eh?" persisted the doctor.

"There are exceptions to all rules, Samuel," said Adam. "Especially when there is a good reason for it. I preceded Eve, but only because in those pioneer days it was a man's job to go ahead and blaze the trail, so that when his wife came along he'd have things ready to begin housekeeping without unnecessary delay."

"Tell 'em about the pig, pa," said Cain.

"Oh, there's nothing to tell about the pig," said Adam. "The same rule prevailed with the pig as operated in respect to the hen and the rhinoceros. A study of his habits merely showed me what he was. He was a pig, and I knew it the minute I saw him."

"And you took him right into your drawing room," said Dr. Johnson.

"No," said Adam. "I didn't like his manners, so I gave him a pen, Sam. It seemed more appropriate."

It was at this point that Nero braced himself for the fateful question.

"There's a question I'd like to ask," he said.

"Go ahead and ask it," said Adam.

"How about that notion of Darwin's, Adam? Were you a monkey?" said Nero.

A thrill of horror swept through the room. Indignation seethed from nearly everybody's face.

"Put him out! Put him out!" came a score of voices.

"Not at all, not at all," said Adam, raising his right hand to stay the tumult. "I'm glad he asked the question, for it has required an answer for a number of years, and I am not afraid to tell the truth. The answer is: No, I am not and never was a monkey. What is more, having had a paternal ancestor, I think I may safely say that my dad wasn't one, either."

"Then Darwin's theory, lacking a tail to swing on, falls to the ground," said Dr. Johnson.

"No," said Adam, "I can't say that. I really believe there was something in Darwin's theory—I hope there was, anyhow, for as I look around the world and see what men do—men like Nero here, and Herod, and Tiberius, and Blue Beard and Bill Hohenzollern—I like to think that two races having the semblance of man inhabit the earth, the human race and the inhuman race. As the father of the human race, I have no responsibility for the paternity of the inhuman race. I am proud of my own family, and it pleases me to think that the others do not belong to my family at all, but, as Darwin suggests, sprang from some primeval ape whose gorilla-like instincts have been transmitted to his posterity, just as mine have been transmitted to mine. Offended by Nero's question? On the contrary—I rejoice in it as I rejoice in Darwin's theory. They help me to establish my alibi in these days of the beast!"

"By Jove!" said Napoleon, with fervor, "he's a resourceful old boy, isn't he?"

"He had to be," said Cain. "When a man starts in to float a corporation such as this world has become out in the wilderness, with no capital but his finger nails to work with, I tell you, Boney, it's some stunt!"

And the cheers that followed showed that the sons of Adam were proud of their ancestry.

The Daring Exploit of Three Italian Destroyers

Told by Gabriele d'Annunzio, Famous Poet and Airman, Who Was Aboard One of Them

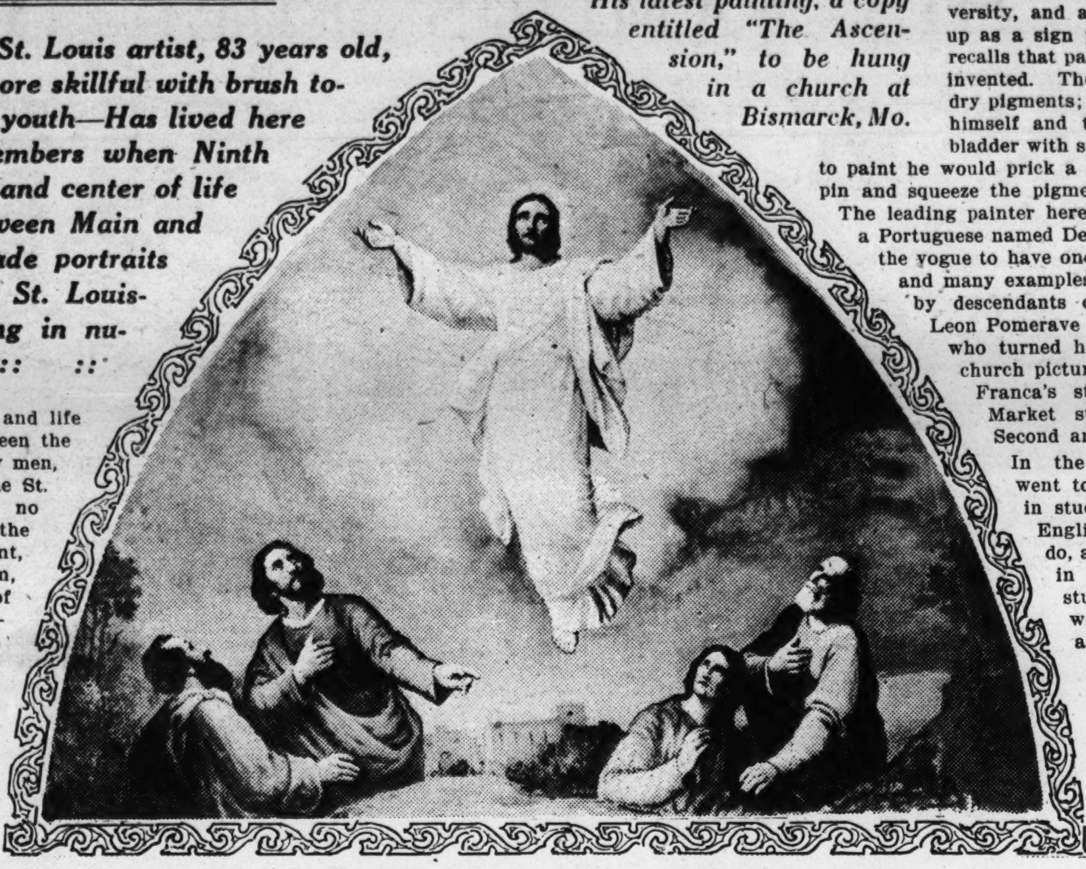
Has Painted Picture a Month for 50 Years

Astonishing record of St. Louis artist, 83 years old, who believes he is more skillful with brush today than he was in youth—Has lived here 78 years, and remembers when Ninth street was city limit and center of life was on Market between Main and Fourth streets—Made portraits of many prominent St. Louisans and works hang in numerous churches :: ::



His latest painting, a copy entitled "The Ascension," to be hung in a church at Bismarck, Mo.

THAT art is long and life but brief has been the lament of many men, but at least one St. Louisan has no reason to utter the classic complaint. If art has been long with him, so has his life. At the age of 83, exceeding by 13 years the alloted span, Matthew Hastings is still painting portraits and religious pictures with youthful zest of line and liveliness of color. It is his confident belief that he is today a better painter than he was in what others would mistakenly call his prime.

Hastings is one of the oldest residents of the city, having lived here continuously, save for two years spent in Europe, since 1840. For a quarter of a century he had a studio at Eighth and Chestnut streets; for the last 10 years he has been established in the Temple Building, at 19 South Broadway. He therefore has many entertaining reminiscences of the city in its early days, and has told some of them to the Post-Dispatch.

He was born Dec. 31, 1834, at Georgetown, District of Columbia, soon after his father, Matthew Marcus Hastings, a school teacher in Dublin, had emigrated to this country with his family. When the boy was 6 years old—which was 78 years ago—the family moved to St. Louis.

At that time, he recalls, Ninth street was the western city limit, and beyond was open country, with farmhouses scattered here and there. Market street and Franklin avenue were country roads, with houses standing every half-mile or so. At many of the street corners were wells, which were the sources of the village's water supply, and every morning householders and servants would throng about them with buckets and take their turns at the windlasses. It was not until many years later that the practice was recognized as dangerous to the public health, and a reservoir was built on Mound street.

In his boyhood the center of life was on Market street, between Main and Fourth streets. The belles in their new clothes had a promenade from Fourth down Market to Main, north to Olive, west to Fourth and south to Market, repeating the round again and again, while the youths stood by in admiration or else joined their favored fair one on the parade.

Music stores and confectionery shops were the recognized gathering places. Nathaniel Phillips had a music store on Market street, between Main and Second, which was a popular resort. But the prime place of social gathering was Concert Hall, on Market street, between Second and Third. It was a two-story building, with stores on the first floor and a dance hall on the second. The structure, by the way, is still standing, Hastings says, and is used as a warehouse.

This dance floor, according to the painter, was the finest on which he ever tripped the light fantastic toe. It was unique in that it was hung on chains, which passed under the floor, so that it swayed and swung under the tramp of dancing feet. "It gave you the nicest feeling," recalls Hastings. One Prof. Xaupi was the impresario of the hall, and held his dancing classes there.

One evening, says the painter, a prize was offered to the gentleman who would bring the most women guests. It was won by Dick Connor, an engraver, who was highly popular with the fair sex, and had no trouble in persuading no less than 13 to accept his invitation. Prof. Xaupi was so struck with admiration that he provided carriages to bring all of them to the hall. Connor afterward went to Europe with Hastings. He has been dead many years.

Nearby, at Third and Market streets, was Jacobi's saloon, the favorite resort, Hastings relates, of the newspaper men of the day. The levee was always packed with boats from Memphis or New Orleans, and steamboating was all the rage. It was often said that river captains and pilots ran the town. They were the lions of every social gathering. However, Hastings never met Mark Twain in those days, and made his acquaintance for the first time only a few years ago.

The Mill Creek Valley was occupied by the Chouteau Pond, which Hastings describes as having been a beautiful lake. The Chouteau residence was on a peninsula extending into the lake, where the old Four Courts building stands. On the peninsula on Sundays the negroes held their baptisms. Most of the houses were of two stories, brick or frame, with an occasional three-story mansion. For entertainment the youth of the city attended panoramas or went on steamboat excursions to Indian Cave, Alton and Ste. Genevieve. Hastings recalled a saying in St. Louis at the time that if one wanted a first-class mechanic he would have to send to Ste. Genevieve to get him.

Young Matthew went to school at St. Louis University, and after he was graduated set up as a sign painter and decorator. He recalls that paint tubes had not then been invented. The painter had to buy the dry pigments; he ground and mixed them himself and tied them up in pieces of bladder with silk cords. When he wanted to paint he would prick a hole in the bladder with a pin and squeeze the pigment out.

The leading painter here at the time, he says, was a Portuguese named De Franca. It was altogether the vogue to have one's portrait painted by him, and many examples of his work are preserved by descendants of old St. Louis families. Leon Pomerave was a less popular painter, who turned his hand to panoramas and church pictures as well as portraits. De Franca's studio was at Fourth and Market streets and Pomerave's at Second and Olive.

In the early twenties Hastings went to Europe. He spent a year in study at Dusseldorf, under an Englishman named Joseph Lindo, and then lived for 15 months in Paris, where he did not study under any teacher, but worked with several artists and copied many paintings in the Louvre and Luxembourg galleries. He returned to St. Louis just before the Civil War broke out, and remembers going to the courthouse to see what was advertised as and proved to be the last slave sale in this city. Several men, women and children were sold. A painter friend of his, Thomas Noble, was present, and afterwards turned the scene into a well-known painting, now in a New York private gallery.

Hastings did not go to war, but joined the Home Guards, who drilled in a basement under the old Planters House. He remembers that it was common for an officer to stop a man on the street, demand to see his pass showing that he was a member of the militia, and then, if he had no pass, register him and assign him to a company.

The young artist did newspaper work for a time as a cartoonist for the old St. Louis Times. But he gradually built up a clientele as a portrait painter and as a maker of religious pictures installed in churches. Until the European war broke out, he declares, he prospered satisfactorily. His portrait of David R. Francis, now Ambassador to Russia, was hung in the State Capitol at Jefferson City and was burned when that structure was destroyed by fire. Another of his well-known works is a portrait of the late Archbishop Kenrick. He painted the portrait of Bryan Mullanphy which hangs in the Mullanphy Hospital, and works from his brush may be found in many Catholic churches in the city, among them St. Teresa's, St. Patrick's and St. Matthew's. The other day he was putting the finishing touches on a painting of heroic size, lively draftsmanship and vivid coloring, entitled "The Ascension." It is to be hung in a church at Bismarck, Mo.

Another widely known work is called "The Blue and the Gray" and shows two aged veterans hobnobbing together and fighting their campaigns over in memory. It hangs in a business house at 816 Pine street.

Hastings attributes his longevity to the fact that he comes of sturdy, long-lived stock, and that he has always lived a temperate life, though smoking many cigars and enjoying an occasional drink of whisky. Cynics might draw a moral from the fact that he has never been married. He has never dieted, eating whatever he likes, including plenty of meat, but giving his preference to vegetables.

He still makes a practice of walking a mile every day, and every summer for 25 years he has spent two months at Arcadia, Mo., tramping about the hills with his sketch book and breathing the fresh air. His way of life, he believes, has made it possible for him to turn out a painting once a month on an average for the last half century or more.

Matthew Hastings.

HOW MUCH COAL IN YOUR BIN?

HERE is a little information, given by the Popular Science Monthly, which will help you to solve the vexing problem that is apt to be a hardy annual, i. e., how much coal can be put in the bin in your cellar. A ton of egg coal contains from thirty-two to thirty-eight cubic feet, averaging about thirty-five. By measuring the cubical contents of your bin you will be able to estimate how much to order to fill it. This may be done by multiplying together the length, breadth and depth of the bin.

AT THE HOUSEBOAT on the STYX

Doings Reported by Wireless to
JOHN KENDRICK BANGS

NUMBER NINE
Adam and His Great Task

THERE was a good deal of suppressed excitement at the Houseboat on the Styx. An unusually full membership was on hand, and for the very excellent reason that the rumor had gone forth that Adam was going to be there, and as the head of the very first world's first families, everybody wanted to be seen shaking hands with him whether they liked him or not. That is always the way in polite society. A man may be no end of a bore, or an unmitigated ass, but if he is the unquestioned head of a first family people like to bask in the sunlight of his presence. It was a much-regretted fact throughout hades that Adam seldom went out into society, and his visits to the Houseboat on the Styx were few and far between. It was not that he was at all snobbish about his social position, nor was he averse to the companionship of kindred spirits, but on the whole he was of domestic inclination, and because of tastes acquired early in his career he preferred out-of-door to indoor life. The reason for his seeming aloofness in matters social was wholly connected with the matter of dress. He was not exactly what you would call progressive in the matter of his personal adornment, and still clung fondly to his original style of garment, the ancient fig leaf.

"What's the use?" he had once protested to Methuselah, who had begged him to buy a suit of clothes more in keeping with modern requirements than his one-piece suit. "I am much more comfortable just as I am and I am blest if I can see any good reason why I should dress myself up to look like a Monday bargain sale, as Sir Walter Raleigh does, or blossom out like an animated tin can after the fashion of your shivering sons of chivalry, who lived when maids were bold and knights were cold, all at a cost of ten or twenty dollars a square inch, when all I need to do to dress in the style to which I am accustomed is to reach out of the spare bedroom window and pick all the clothes I happen to want off a tree. You boys go ahead and dress as you please, but let me alone."

"But, grampa," said Methuselah, "you ought to conform to the times."

"Why should I?" demanded the old man. "You don't. You go around in an old homespun mother hubbard all the time. Socrates invariably appears in an old cotton nightshirt. Caesar wears what he calls a toga, but is really nothing more than a highly tittivated bathrobe. Raleigh and Shakspeare, with their frills and furbelows, look like a department store off on a hike. Warwick, the King maker, has to use a can opener to go to bed at night, and as for your modern folks who come down here dressed up in boiled shirts, starched collars, looking for all the world like a collision between a conference of head waiters and a convention of undertakers—no, siree, Methey! None of that for the founder of the family. I'll conform to the times, all right, but it'll be my times, nobody's else."

Latterly, however, the old man had been willing to make a concession or two. He had seen Daniel Webster walking up the main street of Cimmeria with a shiny stovepipe hat on his head, and he had taken a violent fancy to it as a handy sort of an arrangement to carry things in—"like apples and chestnuts," he said—and he had yielded to Eve's solicitations that he adopt the flowing gown of the chief patriarch merely to maintain the dignity of his position.

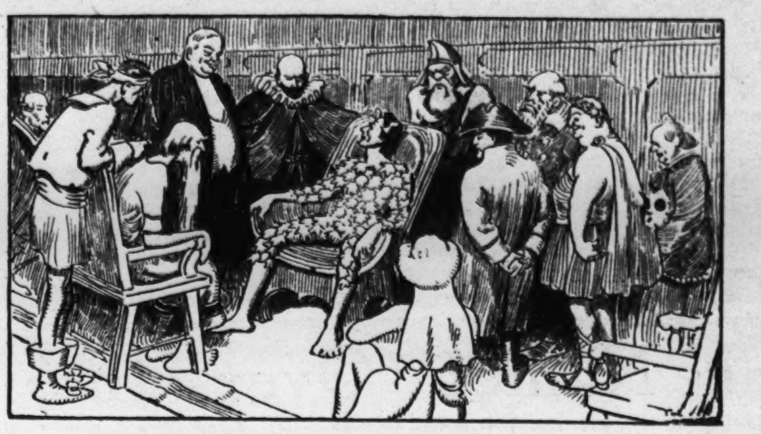
"A fig leaf is all right for a negligee, dear," she had said, "but for full dress your dress should be a trifle fuller."

"All right," said Adam, "but if I catch cold getting overheated with a multiplicity of duds it'll be your fault."

"Same old Adam, aren't you, dear?" smiled Eve. "Well, I take the blame, as usual. That's what I was made for."

When P. T. Barnum heard that Adam was going to appear at the Houseboat he smiled broadly.

"Glad to hear it," said he. "I've often wanted to ask him how he came to name the animals so successfully that you would know them for what they are at a glance."



"I knew at once she was a hen."

"And I," said Nero, "wish to ask him flatly if he agrees with Darwin that he was a monkey."

"It will be some night if you do," laughed Benjamin Franklin, "and I guess we'd better notify the police to have a couple of patrol wagons ready."

And Barnum was true to his word. Hardly had Adam got himself comfortably seated in the big armchair they had constructed for his special use, when the great showman began:

"Say, grampa," he said, "that was a bully old stunt you pulled of when you named the animals. It nearly killed me finding a name for the egress, and the amontillado, but you—why you seemed to run the thing off as easily as though you were reading a telephone book."

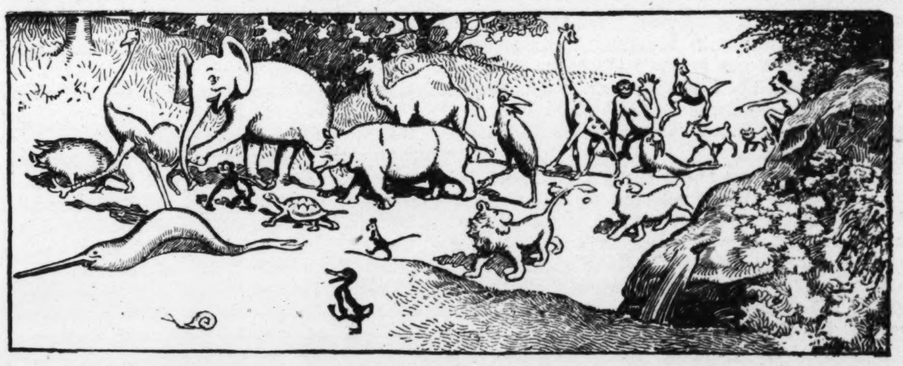
"I am glad you feel that way about it, Pete," said Adam. "It wasn't quite as easy as you seem to think. Indeed, it required a lot of headwork, to which I was not wholly unaccustomed, but on the whole I don't think I made more than two or three mistakes at the outside."

"What I've admired most about the Governor's work in that matter was that he did so well with such limited material," said Noah.

"In the matter of animals?" asked Barnum.

"No, stupid, in the matter of names," said Noah. "He not only had to name the beasts, but he had to invent the language to express them in at the same time."

"O, that wasn't so very hard, Noah, laughed Adam. "You see, we worked our speechifying in those days on the true phonetic system, rather than on a philological line, the way you think you do nowadays. If we hadn't a word to express a thought we could always fill up the gap by making some kind of a noise that served the purpose just as well."



"When you can't think of anything to say—roar!"

"Like some after-dinner speaker?" suggested Napoleon.

"Exactly," said Adam. "When you can't think of anything to say, roar! That is what I did when the hyena came along. I didn't know what he was, and he didn't suggest anything I could connect him up with, so I just ejaculated hy—ena! Hy—ena!" said I, and that was all there was to it. Hyena he became, and hyena he remains. But there were others that were more reasoned than exclamatory, such as the animal I named which gave me the Z, and he looked so like a toasted jackass that I finished him up with the bray end of it, getting the compound zee-bray, or zebra."

"Gosh!" said Ananias. "He's in form tonight, ain't he, Munch?"

"I fear me yes," replied Munchausen, gloomily.

"How about the rhinoceros?" queried Frederick the Great.

"Well, that required some thinking," said Adam. "It took me about a week to figure him out, and it wasn't a pleasant job, at that. If I'd a had my way he'd have been published anonymously, and gone out of style like the ichtyoppowotamus, and the rambunctious dinodithyram. But I finally reduced him to terms by a hard and disagreeable study of his habits, his manners, his hide and his inclinations. In the first place, I discovered that his chief habit was to go after any old thing he happened to want, and take it whether it belonged to somebody else or not, relying wholly upon his superior brute strength to put the job through, without any thought of the equities involved. That was clew number one."

"And a mighty good one," said Frederick, patronizingly.

"Yes," said Adam, "but that was only the first step. I next discovered that he hadn't any manners in his relation to the rest of the animal kingdom. He was a shover, a pusher and a trampler. He'd destroy anything that stood in his way, and would have considered any system of etiquette that required him to be considerate of others, no matter what their sex, as a weakness unworthy of the strong. His purpose of getting through to his ultimate goal was a sufficient justification of anything he might do in violation of the amenities on the way. That was clew number two—equally good, you will see, my dear Frederick."

"It sounds fine," said Frederick.

"The third clew," said Adam, "was revealed in the thickness of his hide. It was impenetrable. You couldn't pierce it. You could beat him. You could poke him. You could lambast him with a club for his misdeeds, and he'd never let on he knew you were there. Criticism left him unmoved, and through it all he appeared to be nothing more than a rather simple-minded, stupid, sleepy old creature, stolidly intent upon living alone, seeking a nice warm place in the sun, with an occasional splosh under water. And, of course, when I got these facts in hand the conclusion was inevitable. The solution was perfectly clear."

"Ha," said Frederick, scratching his head in a puzzled sort of way. "Clear to you, perhaps—but—er—I can't quite see it."

"No, Freddy," said Adam. "I didn't think you would. But to me it was different. I saw at once that with all these characteristics so supremely developed he must have come from the Rhine, so I named him the rhinoceros."

"Gott mitt uns!" cried Frederick, wrathfully, as the old man's trap revealed itself to him. "If you weren't an old man"——

"Well, what?" growled Cain, rising from his chair. "I'm an old man, too, Frederick, and if you're anxious to start something with old men, either with boxing gloves, gott-mittens or plain common garden fists, let it begin right now, say I. What about it?"

"O, nothing—nothing at all," replied Frederick, with an uneasy glance at the exits. "I was only going to say that if Father Adam were not an old man, I should be less ready to accept his—er"——

"Remarkably logical conclusions," said Napoleon, trying to help Frederick out. "As a symbol of the pure egotisticus Teutonicus the rhinoceros is a scream."

"You were some armadillo yourself," growled Frederick.

"Don't quarrel, gentlemen," said William Penn, in his soft, soothing manner. "Grampa doesn't come to us very often, and we mustn't spoil his evening with our own petty quarrels."

"There is no quarrel," said Frederick, as he gloomily realized how unpopular was the end of the stick he himself held, "but if there were one I think I should not be wide of the mark if I said that grampa started it himself with that rhinoceros stuff of his."

"That's his privilege," said Noah. "He started the

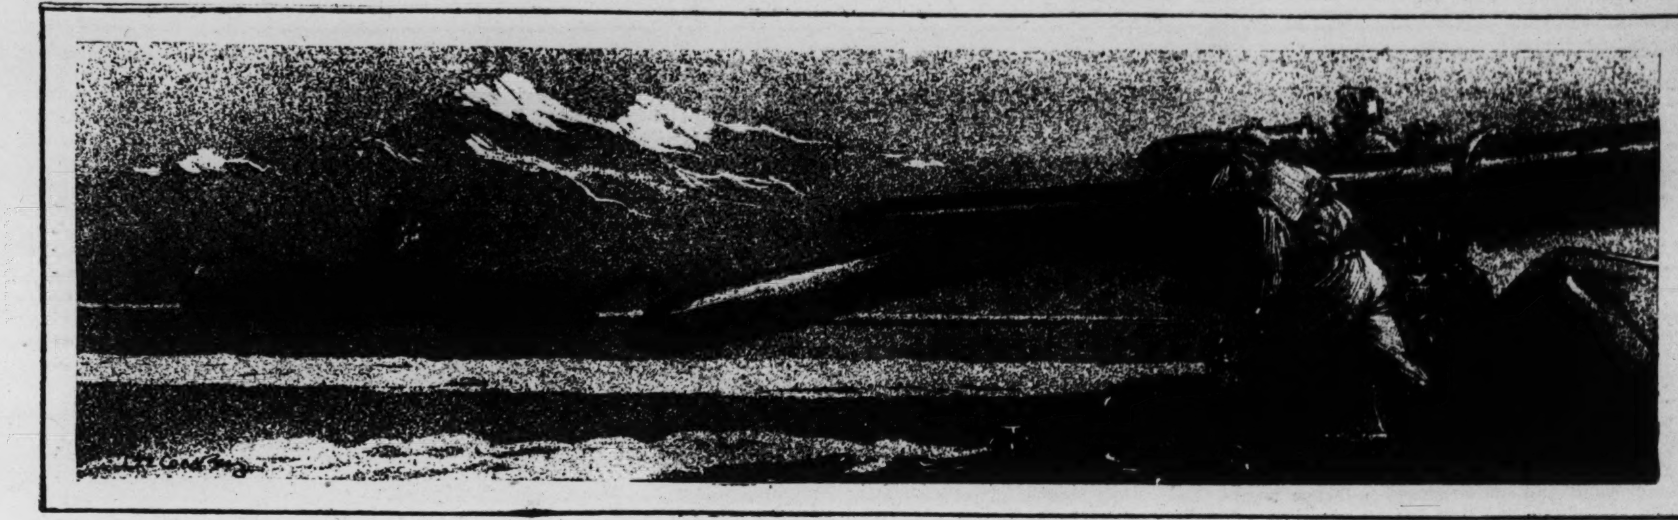
Told by Gabriele d'Annunzio, Famous Poet and Airman, Who Was Aboard One of Them



In the dead of night the little vessels entered the Gulf of Quarnero, got in Buccari Harbor unperceived, sank a big Austrian transport at anchor there and escaped—The jeering message left by d'Annunzio for the Austrian navy :-:

THREE Italian torpedo boats sneaked across the Adriatic on Feb. 10, entered the Gulf of Quarnero after nightfall, got into Buccari harbor unperceived, sank a big Austrian transport there at anchor and escaped untouched. On one of them, commanded by Costauzo Ciano, were Luigi Rizzo, who had sunk the Austrian battleship Wien with one shot, and Gabriele d'Annunzio, the poet-airman, who had flown over the Austrian naval ports of Pola and Cattaro and bombed the vessels lying therein. D'Annunzio went to leave a jeering challenge to the Austrian navy. The following is his story of the daring raid, translated and slightly condensed from the account of it he wrote for the Corriere della Sere of Milan:

By Gabriele d'Annunzio.

THE long wait has made us keen. Delay dulls our edge.

We spent the moonless nights of January gulping fog, disputing over weather forecasts. Even other hazards did not tempt us. We were caught now by the fascination of this alone, and dreamed of nothing but that little distant bay shaped like an ocarina, not of terra cotta, but of silver.

Tonight I awoke with a start, leaped out of bed, threw the window wide open and drank in the sky. Clear as a diamond, stars magnified as in an Oriental firmament; not the slightest breath of wind.

But the warship, which the aerial observer was certain he recognized among the steamers, in a coat of grey, is it still at anchor in Buccari harbor?

No matter. I get ready. The customary toilet becomes as profound as a funeral service. I have two pots of ointment for frostbite; one is unopened, into the other Muarizio Pagliano (since killed) had dipped his fingers to anoint his face when it was frozen in a flight over the Carso Plateau. I hesitate between them for a moment, then make use of that in which the imprint of his first and middle fingers remains. Tonight my body may be a bag of salt water at the bottom of the Gulf of Quarnero. On the azure water I see our grey frigates with their bronze-muzzled torpedoes glistening, well greased.

As a token for the enemy we are carrying three bottles, sealed and crowned with tri-colored pennons. We shall leave them floating tonight, over there, in the cracked mirror of water among the debris and wreckage of the ships that we shall have struck.

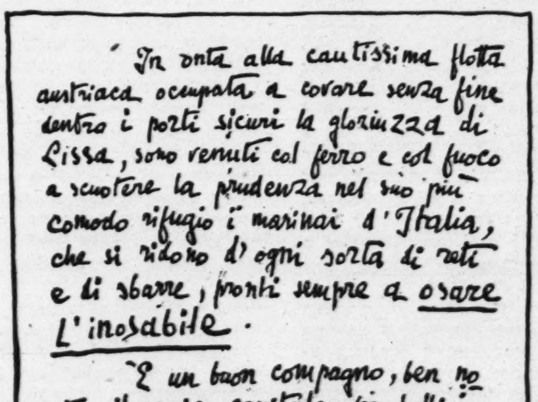
In each of these is inclosed this jeering challenge:

"To the shame of the very cautious Austrian fleet, occupied in its safe harbors with endlessly warming over the little glory of Lissa, the Tailors of Italy, laughing at every kind of net and barrier and ever ready to dare the undareable, have come with fire and steel to startle prudence in its surest refuge. And a good comrade, well known to the Austrians—the chief enemy, the most inimical of all enemies, he of Pola and Cattaro—has come with them to mock at the price set upon his head."

Gabriele d'Annunzio.

We embark, we become taciturn and watchful. Each takes his post, and at his post he has little more room than he will have between the final planks. The harbor is limpid, just suffused with blue, as pure as the whites of a baby's eyes.

Commander Costanzo Ciano rejoins us while we are finishing taking on a supply of benzine. * * * With him we are sure to reach our goal. We are already masters of the Quarnero as we steer into the track of the south wind in a calm over which broods an ever uniform haze.



'In onta alla cautissima flotta austriaca occupata a covare senza fine dentro i porti sicuri la gloriuzza di Lissa, sono venuti col ferro e col fuoco a scuotere la prudenza nel suo più comodo rifugio i marinai d'Italia, che si ridono d'ogni sorta di reti e di sbarre, pronti sempre a osare l'inosabile.

d'Annunzio's challenge.

The even course between sea and sky begins. Attention to every sign upon the sky. If we were observed by an enemy ship or discovered by an aerial scout, we should have to give up the enterprise, for this is nothing if not a surprise.

(The details of the voyage, how they approached the shore and turned into the Gulf of Quarnero and smelled the laurels on shore after sunset, how they ran unnoticed through the well-fortified straits of Faresina and found themselves about midnight right in the Gulf of Fienna, must be omitted.)

The coast is crowned with lights. Reflections innumerable reach our wake and are shattered. All the haze has vanished. The Great Bear glistens extraordinarily above the black muzzle of the port gun.

We increase our speed as we head toward the shore of Buccari. At about a mile's distance, we slow down. The heights of Vegtia are visible on our right.

We have been at sea for 14 hours and for five hours we have been in the waters of the enemy, a handful of men on three tiny ships, alone, unescorted, far from our base, 60 miles from the most powerful defenses of Faresina, a few hundred yards from the batteries of Porto Re. An alarm and we are lost.

Silence is now our pilot, our motors running slow. Meanwhile, Volpi is examining again the starboard torpedo, like a player who puts the neck of his violin against his cheek and adjusts the pegs.

We are skirting the coast at less than 50 yards' distance. It lies lightly upon a sea of oil. There is no moon, not an indication of life. Costanzo Ciano stands erect at the prow, scanning the shore for the opening.

There it is. We are in the narrows. Midnight passed 35 minutes ago. The boat is now nothing but keen-eyed, armed determination. Are those nets? Are those batteries? We slow down. We try. No sort of obstructions. We skirt Cape Sersica and sail a few yards from the western shore. Porto Re is dark. Vigilance is asleep. The battery is silent.

"Good fellows, these Austrians!" whispers Yuigo Rizzo.

We are inside the enemy bay, right at the northern extremity of the gorge of Buccari, close to the anchorage, unobserved, unsuspected!

The commander stands erect in the bows looking for the targets. The warship is no longer there. The shapes of four steamships are outlines against the hills. Calm and silence. We approach still closer. Orders are spoken from boat to boat. Each prow takes up its position for firing. It is an hour and a quarter after midnight.

I have my bottle handy, ready for the joke—strong, black bottles, of thick glass, pot-bellied, with the message inside in a roll, written in my own hand in good ink. I prepared them myself, each with two strong corks and three long tri-colored pennons fastened around their necks with pins and wax.

The heart leaps at the merry swish of the first torpedo that darts from its tube. One at the foremast, one amidships, below the smokestack.

The moments are an eternity. The bronze-nosed beast is heard snoring against the target, its screw moving and shaking up angry air, caught against a protective net.

One at the second's midships.

One at the midships of the third.

Again the great snoring and whirling under water against the hull, as when a whale strands on a shoal and blows and snorts and struggles.

Two at the smokestack of the fourth.

Both take the same route and reach the mark at the same point. The first succeeds in smashing the net, the second passes through the rent and explodes.

When the Turtle Turned Loose - -

reminded Mr. Bowers of an erratic genius with whom he had had dealings, and thus, for the first time, the conversation touched upon the business in which all three of the men present were interested. The ball swung lightly, but at the point of contact it interrupted the breath of at least two of the party.

"The most indefatigable inventor I ever met," began Mr. Bowers, "was a man in my own line. I don't know how familiar you are with the possibilities of electrical apparatus, Mr. Welles?" He paused for the reply.

To the younger guest the question seemed a bit of quizzical humor, indicative of the increasing complacence of one whose good will he desired; and he replied in kind, dryly smiling:

"I once took a course in electrical engineering—by correspondence."

"Then you are probably in a position to appreciate the sublime audacity of my man Melvin's proposition. One step farther would have carried him over into the bottomless abyss of insolence, but he stopped on the brink, and, by Jupiter! his pluck was his salvation. I pulled him back, and he's working for me yet."

Louise endured the subsequent narrative, after one sharp glance at her husband, with the immutable smile of a lay figure, while her mind crouched, ready to spring the instant opportunity should offer. At the same time she wondered whether she dared suggest that the men should accompany the ladies to the drawing room. Mr. Bowers, she knew, regarded a dinner simply as a more or less elaborate and delightful prelude to the cigars; but Ellery was ill at ease, and she felt that if left alone with the other men, his success as an insulator would not be conspicuous.

The end of the story was greeted with laughter, through which Welles' voice was heard asking:

"Is he the originator of the Melvin commutator?"

Mr. Bowers' brows met over a flashing glance, and the mellow social cadence of his voice was reduced to the level tone of the counting room. "You seem remarkably familiar with electrical devices, sir," said he. "I hold the patents of the Melvin commutator, but it has never been put upon the market."

"By the way, Welles," hastily interrupted the host, "I saw in the paper the other day that one John Stillwell had taken out a patent on something or other. I wonder if that's the Stillwell we know?"

As the Chicagoan turned to reply, Louise knew that Mr. Bowers bent upon her a suspicious glance. The time for concealment was obviously past. Telltale claws had pierced the silken pouch in which she had hidden them, and she perceived that the cat would out, and quickly, too. Better untie the strings herself than to have the bag torn open.

"Welles?" Mr. Bowers' tone was low but tense. "What Welles?"

"Lancaster Welles of Chicago, manager for George H. Boltwood & Co." The angle of Mrs. Jordan's chin bespoke a lively skirmish for the attacking party; her color was brilliant, and she looked directly into the blazing eyes of her elderly guest. She had forced the initiative upon him; a truce was possible, but if he insisted upon action, he should have it. At the moment he seemed not to perceive the apparent deliberation of the challenge. Quick temper impelled him to speech, although his utterance was impressively slow.

"I must believe this premeditated?"

"Certainly." Her mind quivered under the strain. Evidently hope for the future was futile; all her endeavor must be to prevent an immediate scene, and as far as possible to save her husband from the wrath to come by placing the responsibility for this disastrous dinner where it belonged, on her own shoulders, without compromising the position of her other guests. She plunged into the inversions and transpositions required to reconcile her own position to the situation, with little anticipation of the point to which that devious path would ultimately lead her. Two things alone were clear: Ellery must be absolved of the initial intention, and Welles' welcome must not be discounted. "Certainly," she repeated, gaining time. "The plan to invite Mr. and Mrs. Welles to meet you, was, however, entirely mine. Even my husband knew nothing about it until all my arrangements were made. I am entirely aware that I have done a daring thing, but when it became necessary for us to consider the possibility of Mr. Jordan's leaving your company and accepting a position with the Boltwood people, I did feel very strongly, Mr. Bowers, that you should be given an opportunity to meet Mr. Welles and to decide whether or not you would consider certain proposals which would make such a change unnecessary." She paused, appalled at the sheer bravado of her defense, but, as he simply stared at her in silence, the necessities of the situation swept her on. "Mr. Welles, as you have said, is a brilliant man, and we feel that he will achieve a large success in business, and that an alliance with him cannot fail to be profitable. If the fact that he was once employed by George H. Boltwood"——

"Madame! You are venturing very near that ground where angels fear to tread!" His voice shook. "George Boltwood was"——

"Was once your dearest friend and is now dead," she swiftly supplied, in terror, lest the conversation directed toward the other side of the table should languish. "And it is inconceivable to suppose that you will permit a feeling that has deprived you for years of the companionship of the only close friend you ever had, and that has, through that bitterness, prevented the proper development of your business along certain lines"—her auditor gasped slightly, and she leaned toward him, flushed, bright-eyed, desperately trying to shock him into a quiescence that should outlast his stay under her roof. "Mr. Bowers, it is inconceivable to me that a man like you should permit such a feeling to continue to influence him, not only to mental disquiet, but to the last detriment of his business interests."

Mrs. Welles, who had been holding the attention of the others, now turned toward her hostess with a question, and Louise, inwardly quaking, but with indomitable front, met the inquiry with gay quips.

Twisting a wine glass in his fingers, Mr. Bowers long sat speechless, watching Mrs. Jordan through narrowed eyes.

"And if I do?" he asked, enigmatically, when at length opportunity offered.

"If you do?" The strain was beginning to tell on her, and her mind fumbled for the connection.

"Yes." His lips twisted in a wry smile. "If I, who alone, of all living men, know the causes leading to that separation of which you have spoken, continue to conduct my own business in my own way, regardless of the visits of angels—and the visitations of fools"——

"Why, then," driven into a corner, but denying defeat, she glanced around the table, preparing for flight, "then—Ellery will have but one course open to him—to resign his position with you and to accept one more promising under Mr. Welles."

She pushed back her chair, and the ladies arose. Mr. Bowers held the door open for them, and as she passed him Louise was aware that he still regarded her through half-closed eyes. She felt that the keen gaze penetrated her very soul, and that he read there her whole shallow artifice.

It was an hour or more before the men joined them—an hour during which Mrs. Jordan vainly strained her ears in an effort to catch the sound of voices in the dining room, while the subconsciousness developed by much social experience supplied her lips with a torrent of glib speech. When the door finally swung open, she instantly perceived that the younger men were somewhat flushed, and were manifestly making an effort to control strong excitement. Ellery laughed too often—an unfailing indication, she well knew, that his spirits were forced. Mr. Bowers stopped a moment to speak to his wife, and then they came together to where the hostess stood.

"Mrs. Jordan, we bid you good-night," said the old man with stately formality. "We lingered too long in the dining room, and Mrs. Bowers and I promised to stop at our nephew's on the way home." In his voice was neither resentment nor cordiality, and his face was like a mask. He passed on around the little circle, followed by his wife, and a moment later Ellery accompanied them to the elevator. In the reaction following climax, when the door had actually closed upon them, Louise was conscious of an impulse toward tears, but the obligations of the hostess still lay heavy upon her, and, taking up a book at random, she was in the midst of a voluble description of its author when her husband re-entered the room and paused, alertly glancing from one to another.

"Well!" he exclaimed.

The cord of Mrs. Jordan's self-control parted, and she turned toward him, crying: "Oh, what did he say? I can't wait! What happened?"

Bewilderment overtook Mrs. Welles, but no one observed her. The men were wringing each other's hands, punctuating their broken laughter with inarticulate ejaculations.

"By George! What do you suppose struck him, Welles? You must be a wizard!"

"Why? Wasn't it all put up?" Welles' face evinced his surprise.

"Put up! Oh, Lord! Why, man alive"——

"Ellery!" Louise grasped his coat lapels and shook them. "Ellery, if you don't tell me! What happened?"

"Everything! We exchanged patents, so Welles is happy; I'm a member of the firm; and maybe—just maybe—we consolidate."

"Why, Louise! Dear girl, don't cry about it! Louise!"

"Oh, never mind! I—it doesn't matter about me. I'm—I'm rather tired, I think."

"Well, I should think you might be, after all this! But what do you suppose struck him?"

A little laugh gurgled up through the sobs.

"You know you said he was a turtle, and I guess—I guess it thundered some."

Dr. Garfield Tells Story of Famous Fuel Order

"On Jan. 12, which was Saturday, one of my voluntary associates, P. B. Noyes, president of a large manufacturing establishment at Oneida, where 2500 men are employed, started for New York and Boston for the purpose of getting the judgment of certain persons of wide experience in those cities. How long would it take partly to clear the tracks? was to be one of his inquiries. Would the closing of all industries for a limited time result disastrously to the country? was to be another.

"We talked by telephone, Mr. Noyes and myself, on Sunday and Monday, and on Tuesday he returned to Washington. His report was satisfactory and was discussed at length. On Wednesday I called on Secretary Baker and informed him of the plan I had in mind and asked him to arrange for a meeting with the President.

"When Secretary Baker learned what I purposed to do, with the consent of the President, he said something about a whirlwind that would surely sweep over the land. Then I went to see Secretary Daniels of the navy. Strangely enough, he also spoke of whirlwinds.

"At 5 o'clock that afternoon, Secretary Baker, Secretary Daniels and myself had a conference with President Wilson, who heard what I had to say and asked many questions. I shall never forget the calm courage with which he met my proposal.

"My idea, as I have said, was to close all industries east of the Mississippi River during two blocks of three days each and on a number of Mondays following. The country, I was reminded, would thus receive two 'shocks.' A single period of five days, in which there would be a Saturday and a Sunday, it was suggested, would reduce the 'shocks' to one and might be wiser under all the circumstances.

"I left the conference with the President, and going to my office, dictated an announcement to the public that as an emergency measure preference and priority in the use of coal on Jan. 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22 would be given only to those consumers whose consumption of coal was absolutely necessary. It was also stated that during the five days designated no manufacturing industry would be permitted to operate even if it had a supply of coal on hand.

"This notice was published in the newspapers on the morning of Jan. 17. On the following day the regulations in detail were made public."

"Then what happened?" he was asked.

"The deluge," Dr. Garfield answered. "It was not unexpected," he quietly added. "Big business has always believed that it has the right of way. It was amazed. It couldn't speak; it could only gasp.

"The order closing the industries east of the Mississippi River proved indeed to be a 'shock' to the country. I understood perfectly well that it would be and that is the reason I acted as quickly and quietly as possible. If it had been known that such an order was being considered, the deluge would have burst prematurely and might have stopped the order altogether."

"And the waiting ships received coal?" the interviewer remarked.

"They did," Dr. Garfield replied. "On Jan. 17, the day on which the order was sent to the country, 480 ships, as I have previously said, were in our harbors. They were laden with 2,000,000 tons of food, munitions and war supplies. During the 12 days following, 40 ships carrying food, 71 carrying oil, gasoline and other fuel and 369 carrying munitions and war supplies filled their bunkers and sailed for Europe."

"Did you receive any words of commendation with respect to that order?" he was asked.

"In the storm of brickbats I heard a kind note occasionally," Dr. Garfield replied, "but the order was out and it was obeyed patriotically and conscientiously. It is still being denounced by many good men, but I stand by it and am glad that it was sent to the country.

"While the order has caused me no regrets, I trust another like it will not be necessary. The Government is trying hard to bring about conditions that will keep freight moving—to get it to the seaboard and to get coal to all the ships. If this can be done, our industries will not have to be closed temporarily. If it cannot be done, I am willing to take the responsibility, so far as I can, of another order like the one of Jan. 17."

WHEN THE TURTLE TURNED LOOSE.

By MARGARET CAMERON

THE calm confidence in her position that enables a woman to visit her husband's place of business without self-consciousness, and to enter his private office unannounced, is not acquired in two months. Hence Ellery Jordan experienced a new sensation, at once delicious and perplexing, when, with no previous warning, his office door was flung open by an impetuous hand and he looked up to find his wife upon the threshold.

"Hello!" was his involuntary exclamation.

"Who is Lancaster Welles?" she demanded.

He perceived her excitement, but, still enmeshed by the novel and delightful realization of all that such an unexpected and unannounced entrance meant, he densely gave back question for question.

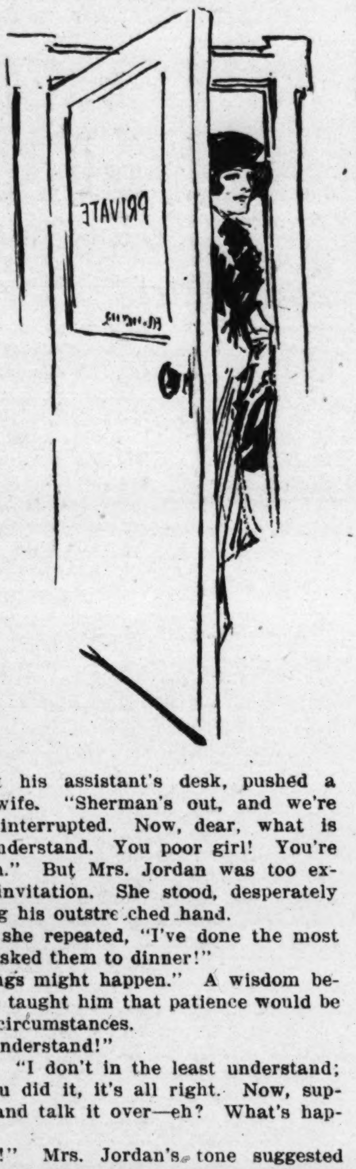
"Why?"

"Tell me! Who is Lancaster Welles?"

Wonder began to sharpen Jordan's mental faculties at the expense of his tenderer emotions.

"Chicago man. New manager for the Boltwoods. Why?"

"For the Boltwoods! The Chicago Boltwoods, whom Mr. Bowers hates so?" As she spoke she gripped the edge of the desk with nervous fingers.



"Yes. Why?"

"Ellery Jordan, I've done the most awful thing! I've asked them to dinner!"

"Why — how — what on earth! You don't know them!"

"I didn't—but I do! And I did!"

Incoherence threatened to end in tears, and Jordan swung sharply about in his swivel chair, where amazement had still held him.

"That will do, Miss Calder. I'll send for you again," said he. The stenographer picked up a handful of pencils and left the room, discreetly closing the door after her, as Ellery, glancing at his assistant's desk, pushed a chair toward his wife. "Sherman's out, and we're not likely to be interrupted. Now, dear, what is all this? I don't understand. You poor girl! You're shaking! Sit down." But Mrs. Jordan was too excited to heed the invitation. She stood, desperately facing him, ignoring his outstretched hand.

"Ellery Jordan," she repeated, "I've done the most awful thing! I've asked them to dinner!"

"Well, worse things might happen." A wisdom beyond his experience taught him that patience would be a virtue in these circumstances.

"But you don't understand!"

"No," cheerfully. "I don't in the least understand; but, anyhow, if you did it, it's all right. Now, suppose we sit down and talk it over—eh? What's happened?"

"The impossible!" Mrs. Jordan's tone suggested that the memory of all previous human calamity must dissipate like vapor when confronted by this palpable presence of living tragedy.

"Good! It frequently does," exclaimed her husband, determined to preserve the family balance, "and it's always interesting. Go on. But, first, sit down."

"Oh, I can't!" She wandered to a window and looked out, while he, swinging one foot from a corner of his desk, regarded her curiously.

"Well?" he suggested.

"I'll have to begin at the beginning, or you'll never understand. And it's all so silly—and so impossible! You see, I was going down to get that set of plates we talked about last night"—he nodded—"when, just as I got to Twenty-third street, who should overtake me but your Aunt Julia! She had been in a shop somewhere along Broadway, and when she saw me pass she proceeded to race after me. Of course, she wanted to know where I was going and what I was going to get, and—well, you know Aunt Julia!" She turned toward him with a pretty gesture of impotence, and he smiled, nodding appreciatively. "Of course, Aunt Julia is—Aunt Julia, and all that, but she wouldn't understand why I should want an extra set of plates, just because the Bowerses were coming to dinner, after we'd had all that lovely china given to us when we were married. You know, Ellery," her tone pleaded for comprehension, "to Aunt Julia a plate is a plate, and she wouldn't see why"——

"Of course. That's all right. I understand."

"Well, those I wanted were rather expensive, and I knew she'd ask why I wanted them, and what I paid for them, and if I thought a young man on a salary, and if a dozen more things, and then she'd go and talk it all over with the rest of the family, and—Ellery, I just couldn't stand it! Besides, I was in a hurry. I wanted to get home—I never would have come down this morning if it hadn't been for those wretched plates. But I didn't want to be rude, you know, or to hurt her feelings, or anything like that, so I just thought of a—well, of a sort of ruse, you know."

"I see," mischievously commented Ellery, "you lacerated your conscience rather than scratch her sensibilities."

"Well, I tried to—but I hadn't counted on Aunt Julia. You see, we were just at the entrance of the Silverbrand Hotel when she overtook me, and it seemed so easy! So, when she asked where I was going, I said I was going shopping, but first I was going to see a friend who was staying at the Silverbrand, thinking, of course, that I could simply walk through the hotel—in at Fifth avenue and out at the side street, you know. She'd never be the wiser, and it would save a lot of wear and tear on my nervous system."

Jordan smiled broadly, and shook his head. "You don't know Aunt Julia," he chuckled.

"Oh, yes I do—now! She said she'd go in with me, and if my friend wasn't there we'd go shopping together."

"Every time!" murmured Aunt Julia's nephew.

"Well, there I was."

"Hoist by your own petard," he suggested.

"Precisely! Of course, after that there was nothing to do but walk in there and send up my card to somebody—anybody—and when word came back that the lady was not staying at the hotel, express polite surprise and walk out again."

"With Aunt Julia!" That Jordan was enjoying the recital was obvious.

"With Aunt Julia. Then, also, of course, we weren't inside the door before she asked my friend's name. Well, naturally my friend had to have a name, and on the spur of the moment I said 'Mrs. Lancaster Welles.' I don't know why I said that!" she cried, turning toward him with expressively wide-stretched arms. "It was just fate! I didn't know there was a Mrs. Lancaster Welles! I wondered at the time why that particular name occurred to me. I suppose now that I must have heard you mention it sometime, and that it stuck in my wretched memory minus any connection. Anyway, that's what I said, and I called a boy and sent my card to Mrs. Lancaster Welles."

"And when word came back that she was not in the hotel, you left an invitation to dinner, to be given to her when she should arrive, just by way of nailing Aunt Julia's conviction, and now you're doing penance for the taradiddle," supplied Jordan, who was somewhat familiar with the intricacies of his wife's conscience.

"Oh, my land! If only I had! Ellery," again tragedy loomed, "that boy came back and said that Mrs. Welles would see me in her room."

"Great Caesar!" Jordan straightened up and stared at her. "You don't mean to say she was there?"

"She was there! Naturally, I couldn't run away then."

Her husband gave way to peals of mirth.

"You had lived up to Aunt Julia's expectations, not to mention the boy's—and Mrs. Welles'!" he exclaimed. "Heavens, Louise, why don't you laugh? Can't you see how funny it is?"

"Wait!" ominously. "Just wait!"

"Don't tell me Aunt Julia went with you!"

"No; Aunt Julia, mercifully, departed, and I went alone to face Mrs. Welles."

The Douglas in his hall,'" chuckled Jordan.

"Don't, Ellery! It isn't funny." He made an obedient but ineffectual effort to subdue his laughter, which still broke forth occasionally. "In the elevator I decided that when I saw her I'd look surprised and say: 'Oh! Oh, I beg your pardon! This isn't the Mrs. Welles I know!' You know, that sort of thing—and pretend that I had an old schoolmate who was also Mrs. Lancaster Welles, and lived in Borneo or Van Dieman's Land, or somewhere."

"That time you didn't count on Alicia Welles."

"No, I didn't."

"Look out for women, Louise. They're always x in the problem, and you never know what they'll amount to until it's finished."

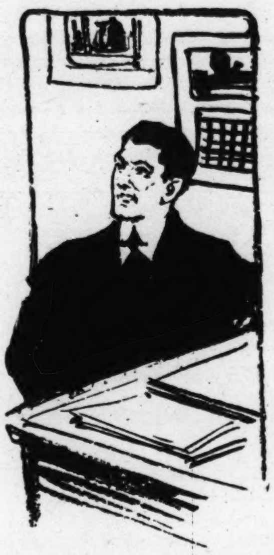
"Ellery, she didn't give me a chance to say a word!"

"Of course she didn't! That's Alicia Welles all over!"

"She fairly fell on my neck, and said that one of the pleasures to which they had looked forward in New York was meeting Ellery Jordan's bride. Then I knew that they must know you, and that I was in for it in earnest!"

"I'll bet you carried it off so she never knew the difference!"

"I'm afraid I did. I wish I hadn't. I wish I'd told her plainly just how and why I went there."



"Why? The rest looks simple enough."

"Ellery, I asked them to dinner tonight!"

"Tonight!" As he lifted himself slowly to his feet, staring at her, consternation wiped the lines of laughter from his face. "Tonight! Why, Louise, tonight the Bowers"——

"I know it," she broke in desperately, "but I didn't know who the Welleses were. All the time I sat there I racked my brain trying to remember, and I haven't the least idea what we said or how it happened. She talked and talked, and I suppose I answered, and somehow I must have mentioned Mr. Bowers' name, for she said Mr. Welles had never met Mr. Bowers and was very anxious to do so. By this time I was ready to clutch at any expedient, and I remembered that Mr. Bowers liked pretty women; I knew you had planned this dinner especially to please him, and to make him very good-natured—and she is charming, Ellery—and—and I couldn't seem to see any other way out—I was all mixed up and confused—so—I asked them to dine with us tonight, to meet Mr. and Mrs. Bowers."

"My Lord!" ejaculated her husband. "You might better have asked the old original serpent! He'd make less trouble. This settles my schemes!" His hand mechanically sought that mysterious comfort lying in the depths of trousers pockets, the while he dejectedly kicked at a piece of crumpled paper on the floor.

Louise regarded him mournfully. "I'm so sorry, dear! It was stupid, but I didn't know, and—I had to do something. Anyway, I thought I had to."

The trembling voice and piteous, tear wet eyes smote him into loving mendacity. Even if she had unwittingly undermined the walls of a castle he had laboriously builded, and must suffer with him the consequences of its threatened downfall, the poignancies of self-reproach need not be added to her regret. Bending over her, he took her hands in a close clasp, and murmured: "Of course you didn't know. There's no reason why you should," and warmly kissed her. For a moment she clung to him, hiding her face against his coat. Then, comforted but not deceived, she whispered:

"You're such a love! We'll make it come out right, somehow," and, mopping her eyes, prepared again to

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

"You heard me," she said.

He turned, half sullen, half terrified, and paused. "Which do you refer to, madame?"

She had seen only the one. Then there were others. Who could tell how many others?

"The one who drove here."

So he went, leaving her to desperate reflection. When he returned, it was to usher in the heavy figure of the spy.

"Which of you is in authority?" she demanded.

"I, madame." It was the spy who spoke.

She dismissed the caretaker with a gesture.

"Have you any discretion over me? Or must you refer matters to those who sent you?"

"I must refer to them."

"How long will it take to send a message and receive a reply?"

He considered. "Until tomorrow night, madame."

Another day gone, then, and nothing determined!

"Now listen," she said, "and listen carefully. I have come here to decide a certain question. Whether you know what that question is or not, does not matter. But before I decide it I must take a certain journey. I wish to make that journey. It is into Karnia."

She watched him. "It is impossible. My instructions"——

"I am not asking your permission. I wish to send a letter to the Committee. They, and they alone, will determine this thing. Will you send the letter?"

When he hesitated, perplexed, she got up and moved to her writing table.

"I shall write the letter," she said haughtily. "See that it is sent. When I report at the end of the time that I have sent such a letter, you can judge better than I the result if it has not been received."

He was still dubious, but she wrote the letter and gave it to him, her face proud and scornful. But she was not easy, for all that, and she watched from her balcony to see if any messenger left the castle and descended the mountain road. She was rewarded, an hour later, by seeing a figure leave the old gateway and start afoot toward the village, a pale-faced man with colorless hair. A part of the hidden guard that surrounded her, she knew, and somehow familiar. But, although she racked her brains, she could not remember where she had seen him.

For the next 24 hours she waited. Life became one long endurance. She hated the forest, since she might not visit it alone. She hated the castle, because it was her prison. She stood for hours that first day on her balcony, surveying with scornful eyes the procession of the devout, weary women, perspiring men, lines of children, going to something they did not comprehend, and carrying clenched in small, warm hands drooping bunches of early mountain flowers.

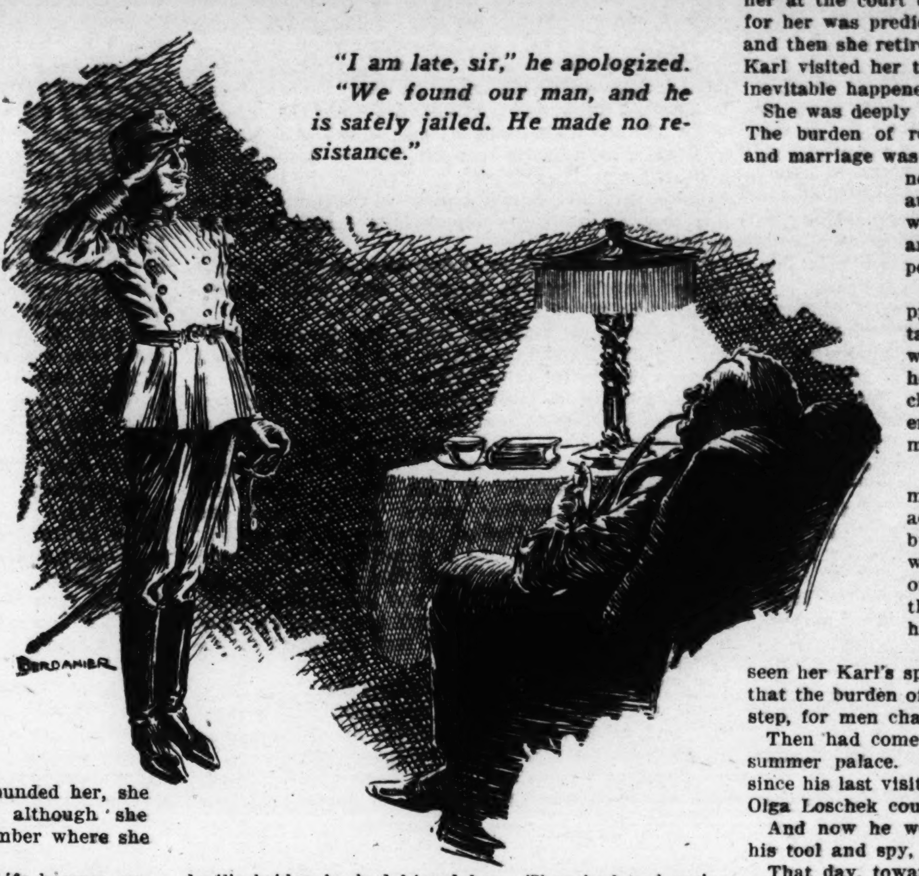
And always, calling her to something she scorned, rang the bells for mass or for vespers. The very tower below beckoned her to peace—her, for whom there would never again be peace. She cursed the bell savagely, put her fingers in her ears, to be wakened at dawn the next morning to its insistent call.

There was no more sleep for her. She lay there in her bare room and gave herself to bitter reflection. Here, in this very castle, she had met Karl. That was 11 years before. Prince Hubert was living. During a period of peace between the two countries a truce had been arranged, treaties signed, with every prospect of permanence. During that time Karl and Hubert, glad of peace, had come here for the hunting. She remembered the stir about their coming, her father's hurried efforts to get things in order, the cleaning and refurbishing, the peasants called in to serve the royal guests, and stripped of their quaint costumes to be put into ill-fitting livery.

They had brought her a new frock for evening wear, the father who was now dead, and the old aunt who had raised her—an ugly blacq satin, too mature for her. She had put it on in that very room and wept in very despair.

Then came the arrival, her father on the doorstep, she and her aunt behind him, and in the hall, lines of uneasy and shuffling peasants. How awkward and ill at ease they must have seemed! Then came the carriage, Hubert alighting first, then Karl. Karl had seen her instantly, over her father's bent back.

Lying there, seeing things with the clear vision of the dawn, she wondered whether, had she met Karl later, in her sophisticated maturity, she would have fallen in love with him. There was no way to know.



"I am late, sir," he apologized. "We found our man, and he is safely jailed. He made no resistance."

He had dawned on her then, almost the first man of rank she had ever seen. She saw him, not only with fresh eyes, but through the halo of his position. He was the Crown Prince of Karnia then, more dashing than Hubert, who was already married, and had always been a serious youth, handsomer, a blond in a country of few blond men. His joyous smile had not taken on the mocking twist it acquired later. His blue eyes were gay and joyous.

When she had bowed and would have kissed his hand, it had been Karl who kissed hers, and straightened to smile down at her.

"This is a ver yhappy day, Countess," he had said.

Then the old aunt had bustled forward, and the peasants had bowed nervously, and bustle and noise had filled the old place.

For four days the royal hunters had stayed. On the third day Karl had pleaded fatigue, and they had walked through the pine woods. On that very devil's bridge he had kissed her. They had had serious talks, too. Karl was ambitious, even then. The two countries were at peace, but for how long? Contrary to opinion, he said, it was not rulers who led their people into war. It was the people who forced those wars.. He spoke of long antagonisms, old jealousies, trade relations.

She had listened, flattered, had been an intelligent audience. Even now, she felt that it was her intelligence as much as her beauty that had ensnared Karl. For ensnared he had been. She had dreamed wild dreams that night after he kissed her, dreams of being his wife. She was not too young to know passion in a man's eyes, and Karl's had burned with it.

Then, the next day, while the hunters were away, her aunt had come to her, ugly, dowdy and alarmed. "Little fool!" she had said. "They play, these Princes. But they are evil with women, and dangerous. I have seen your eyes on him, sick with love. And Karl will amuse himself—it is the blood—and go away, laughing."

She had been working with the satin dress, trying to make it lovely for him. Over it her eyes had met her aunt's, small and twitching with anxiety. "But suppose he cares for me?" she had asked. "Sometimes I think—Why should you say he is evil?"

"Bah!"

She had grown angry then and, flinging the dress on the floor, had risen haughtily. "I think he will marry me," she had announced, to be met with blank surprise, followed by cackling old laughter.

Karl had gone away, kissing her passionately, before he left her, in the dark hall. And many things had followed. A cousin, married into Karnia, became a lady-in-waiting to the old Queen. Olga Loschek had visited her. No accident all this, but a carefully thought-out plan of Karl's. She had met Karl again. She was no longer the ill-dressed, awkward girl of the mountains, and his passion grew, rather than died.

He had made further love to her then, urged her to go away with him on a journey to the eastern end of the kingdom, would, indeed, have compromised her hopelessly. But, young as she was, she had had courage and strength; perhaps shrewdness, too. Few women could have resisted him. He was gentleness itself with her, kindly, considerate, passionate. But she had kept her head.

And because she had kept her head, she had kept him. Through his many lapses, his occasional mad adventures, he had always come back to her. Having never possessed her, he had always wanted her. But not enough, she said drearily to herself, to pay the price of marriage.

She was fair enough to him. Nothing but a morganatic marriage would be possible, and this would deprive his children of the throne. But less than marriage she would not have.

The old Queen died. Her cousin retired to the country, and raised pheasants for gayety. Olga Loschek's visits to Karnia ceased. In time a place was made for her at the court of Livonia and a brilliant marriage for her was predicted. But she did not marry. Now and then she retired to the castle near the border, and Karl visited her there. And, at last, after years, the inevitable happened.

She was deeply in love, and the years were passing. The burden of resistance had always been on her, and marriage was out of the question. She was alone now. Her father had died, and the old aunt was in seclusion in a nunnery, where she pottered around a garden and knitted endless garments for [illegible] poor..

For a time Olga had been very happy. Karl's motor crossed the mountains, and he came on foot through the woods. No breath of scandal touched her. And, outwardly, Karl did not change. He was still her ardent lover. But the times when they could meet were few.

And the court of Livonia heard rumors—a gamekeeper's daughter, an actress in his own capital, these were but two of the many. Olga Loschek was clever. She never reproached him or brought him to task. She had felt that, whatever his lapses, the years had made her necessary to him.

The war that followed the truce had seen her Karl's spy at Livonia. She had undertaken it that the burden of gratitude should be on him—a false step, for men chafe under the necessity for gratitude.

Then had come another peace, and his visit to the summer palace. There he had seen Hedwig, grown since his last visit to lovely girlhood, and having what Olga Loschek could never again possess, youth.

And now he would marry her, and Olga Loschek, his tool and spy, was in danger of her life.

That day, toward evening, the huge man presented himself. He brought no letter, but an oral message. "Permission is given, madame," he said. "I myself shall accompany you."

CHAPTER XXIII.

NIKKY MAKES A PROMISE.

THE Chancellor lived alone, in his little house near the palace, a house that looked strangely like him, overhanging eyebrows and all, with windows that were like his eyes, clear and concealing many secrets. A grim, gray little old house, which concealed behind it a walled garden full of unexpected charm. And that, too, was like the Chancellor.

In his study on the ground floor, overlooking the garden, the Chancellor spent his leisure hours. Here, on the broad, desk-like arm of his chair, where so many state documents had lain for signature, most of his meals were served. Here, free from the ghosts that haunted the upper rooms, he dreamed his dream of a greater kingdom.

Mathilde kept his house for him, mended and pressed his uniforms, washed and starched his linen, quarreled with the orderly who attended him, and drove him to bed at night.

"It is midnight," she would say firmly—or 1 o'clock, or even later, for the Chancellor was old, and needed little sleep. "Give me the book." Because, if she did not take it, he would carry it off to bed, and reading in bed is bad for the eyes.

"Just a moment, Mathilde," he would say, and finish a paragraph. Sometimes he went on reading, and forgot about her, to look up, a half-hour later, perhaps, and find her still standing there, immobile, firm.

Then he would sigh and close the book.

At his elbow every evening Mathilde placed a glass of milk. If he had forgotten it, now he sipped it slowly, and the two talked—homely things, mostly, the garden, or moths in the closed rooms which had lost, one by one, their beloved occupants, or of a loose tile on the roof. But now and then their conversation was more serious.

face the situation. "Now, tell me how bad it is. Just what have I done? I suppose you've told me all about it before, but somehow it didn't seem so real, and I'm afraid I've got the names all jumbled up. I don't see why Mr. Bowers should take such violent exception to Mr. Welles, if he's never met him."

"Welles is practically George H. Boltwood & Co., now, since Boltwood's death."

"And just because Mr. Bowers quarreled with Mr. Boltwood when they were partners, is he going to hate forevermore everybody who ever worked for him, even after he's dead?"

"Well, that's Bowers," you know. He's like the turtle; when once he takes hold, he 'never turns loose 'til it thunders.' And Bowers is deaf to thunder. In the first place, he never forgave Boltwood for whatever it was they quarreled about"——

"What was it?"

"Nobody has ever told. Probably something personal. They were lifelong friends, you know. And then Boltwood added gall to the vinegar when he went straight to Chicago, as soon as the dissolution here was settled, and organized a competitive company. Old Boltwood was a fighter, too. By George, what a combination those two men would have made if they hadn't quarreled! As it was, they fought, tooth and nail, for 10 years."

"But where does Mr. Welles come in?"

"He didn't come in much until Mr. Boltwood's death. I guess the old man depended upon him more or less for several years, though he's not been with them very long—not as long as I have with Mr. Bowers, by the way. But Boltwood was a good deal like Bowers in one respect; as long as he lived he was the whole thing. So nobody heard much about Welles until the head of the firm died, a few months ago, when it was found that he had arranged to have Welles made manager of the business. It was a big step for him."

"Well, I think it's perfectly shameful!" Indignation snapped in Mrs. Jordan's eyes. "Why don't you go and work for the Boltwoods, too? Here is Mr. Welles, manager after just a little while, and here you are, not even a member of the firm, after slaving all your life for that evil-tempered old man! Ellery, I wouldn't endure it! Just see what other men do for their old employes!"

"Yes, Boltwood died," dryly responded her husband.

"Oh, well—of course, I didn't mean that exactly, but Mr. Bowers ought to do something for you. Would Mr. Welles give you a position if you asked him?"

"He might. Welles and I are old friends, but I don't want"——

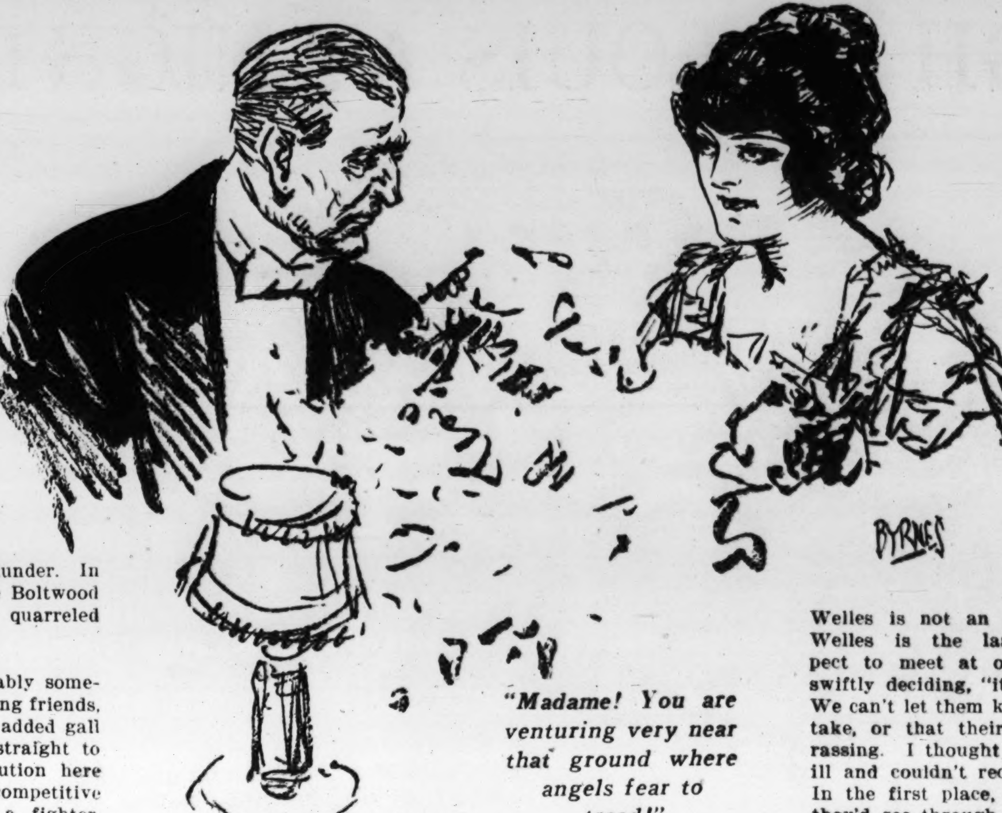
"Oh, Ellery, listen! Why don't you get Mr. Welles to make you an offer, and then tell Mr. Bowers that unless he lets you have an interest in the firm you'll go to the Boltwoods?"

"He'd tell me to go and be eternally condemned! Why, Louise, when Welles took the management of that business he found that the Bowers company held certain patents that were very important to the Boltwood people. We don't use them, and they need them badly. He wrote a very civil letter to Bowers, asking for a conference on those and some other matters. Bowers refused to read the letter and refused to answer it, and, when King and Jeffry and other members of the firm insisted that some reply must be made, all he would permit was a curt statement, in the third person, that the Bowers Manfacturing Co. refused to consider, now or at any future time, any proposition made by George H. Boltwood & Co."

"Old tyrant! I don't care if it does make him cross I'm glad the Welleses are coming to dinner tonight. It'll do him good to be put where he'll have to be civil to some of the Boltwood connection. He would, wouldn't he, at our table?"

"Oh, yes, I think so—if he couldn't get away. One of his redeeming traits is that whatever he may say or do among men, he is very courteous to women. That wouldn't prevent his firing me bright and early the next morning, however."

"Who cares?" Mrs. Jordan tossed her head in reckless defiance. "Mr. Welles would snap you up and be glad of the chance. Oh!" The reclouding of her husband's face brought a responsive shadow into hers, and a correspondingly swift change of mood ensued. "I forgot, dear! This dinner was to be the beginning of your campaign for a partnership, wasn't it?"



"Madame! You are venturing very near that ground where angels fear to tread!"

"Oh, well, never mind." Jordan's tone was weary. "That's all off now. Did you get your plates?"

"I will mind! Even if Mr. Bowers is an unappreciative old pachyderm, if you want a partnership with him you ought to have it. I've mixed things all up, but there must be some way out. Let's think."

Evidently inspiration did not wait upon reflection, for after a moment she broke forth again, petulantly: "I don't see why I couldn't have asked for Mrs. Peter Brown or Mrs. Reginald Vere de Vere!" Another pause. "Why on earth do they go to the Silverbrand anyway? Talk about the total depravity of inanimate things!"

Moodily pacing to and fro, contemplating the miscarriage of his hopes, Jordan had almost lost consciousness of his wife's presence, when a timid voice broke the gloomy silence.

He halted, looking at her without expectation.

"I—I'm afraid I don't know just what it was you meant to do tonight. I know," hastily, "you told me, but I don't understand business very well, and it didn't occur to me that it was anything I'd ever have a hand in. But I'm not really stupid, and if you'll tell me again—please, dear!"

"It doesn't make any difference."

"But I want to know! I'm your wife, dear, and I do want to understand!"

"Very well. It's about the patents Welles wants for the Boltwoods. We don't need them; they do. They have some we need." He did not intend that his explanation should lack cordiality, but at that moment he could have narrated the story of Israel's captivity with equal enthusiasm, and every perfunctory word fell on her sensitive ear like a reproach. "As long as Boltwood was alive Bowers would have starved rather than buy directly of him; but he did try, at one time, to gain possession of them indirectly. Boltwood then hoped to use them himself and wouldn't sell. Welles sees that our patents are more valuable to them than those they hold will ever be. Because he's my friend, I could make a better deal with him than anyone else in our concern. My scheme was to get Mr. Bowers here to dinner, and when he got to feeling good and amiable over the cigars, to tell him that I could get the Boltwood patents. I happen to know that our possession of them would straighten out some difficulties in the mechanical department that threaten to be mighty troublesome and expensive."

"And then you thought he'd offer you the partnership?"

"No; Bowers isn't giving away partnerships. My intention was to acquire the Boltwood patent myself from Welles, and then to offer them to Mr. Bowers in payment—or part payment—for my stock and for the patents Welles wants, which are absolutely useless to us."

"Oh, I see. How silly, if he needs the patents, to let a personal quarrel with a man who's dead—Mr. Bowers' temper must have cost him something before now?"

"Thousands."

"Then I suppose it's no use hoping"—— The half-formed thought behind the words gave place to one of sturdier growth, and the sentence remained incomplete. Presently she spoke again, her eyelids contracted over unseeing eyes, her perceptions focused inward. "His name's too long. What does she call him?"

"Who?" Jordan's mind was still pursuing the path of his frustrated hopes.

"Mrs. Welles."

"Oh, she probably calls him Cass. Most people do."

She caught her breath and stood for an instant poised on tiptoe, aglow with inspiration.

"Ellery! I—I believe it's possible! Did Mr. Bowers ever see Lancaster Welles?"

"Not that I know of."

"Nor Mrs. Welles?"

"Guess not."

"Then—don't you see?—we must simply keep the conversation in such channels that he won't find us out. Welles is not an uncommon name, and Lancaster Welles is the last man Mr. Bowers would expect to meet at our table. Do you suppose—no," swiftly deciding, "it wouldn't do to tell the Welleses. We can't let them know that the invitation was a mistake, or that their presence is in any way embarrassing. I thought once of sending word that I was ill and couldn't receive them, but—that wouldn't do. In the first place, I hate to lie; and in the second, they'd see through it. We must simply let them all come, keep the conversation in our own hands, and dodge personalities."

Her husband regarded her speculatively. "It will be a bit like playing with dynamite; but, by George, Louise," his glance kindled, "I believe you can do it if anybody can! Anyhow, it's worth trying. It can't make things much worse."

"Goody! I'll run now and spend the rest of the day vibrating between the kitchen and the library. Cocktails and Panama, oysters and Russia, consomme and Japan, fish and the latest novel, entrees and recent art, politics with the roast, fads, fancies, philosophies! Brush up, brush up, Ellery! You'll need 'em all and more, for tonight we converse!" Flushing, dimpling, excited, she whirled through the office and ended in his arms. "Kiss me, you blessed boy, and don't worry! We'll pull through somehow. Goodby."

Radiant with triumph, sparkling with excitement in which there was still the consciousness of danger, Mrs. Jordan flashed an occasional comprehensive glance across the table at her husband. Between them lay the circle of embroidered damask and a bridal array of dining appurtenances. From the daffodil-shaded candelabra lines of lambent light stretched across the cloth, yellow glints played among the glasses, and the very sunbeams of Marne danced in the wine. Tempered rays mellowed the resolute lines of James Bowers' face and fell softly upon the features of his gentle, stately wife, whose white hair rose above her gray draperies like the crest of a noble wave. Mrs. Welles was Aurora, smiling from a haze of amethyst, and the folds of Louise's white gown gave back a faint glow where the light caught them. Both Mr. and Mrs. Welles proved to be ideal dinner guests, of quick wit and wide interests, and the talk had ranged from Tammany hall to the bronze god in a certain Japanese temple.

There had been moments of suspense, as when Mr. Bowers, who seemed to have yielded the tribute of complete response to the subtle influence surrounding him, had returned to his hostess, asking in an undertone: "Who is this young Welles? He appears a brilliant fellow. What's his business?"

"Citizen of the world and heir of the ages," she had replied, lightly laughing. "He seems to have canvassed the earth, and I suspect him of having designs on Mars, the planet of war," she added, glancing audaciously at her husband's employer.

"Are you discussing Mars?" Welles, at her left, had caught the last word. "Have you seen the article in the current Aeon?" The talk swept easily to theories of interplanetary communication, and Mrs. Jordan's heart resumed a fairly regular rhythm.

In natural sequence followed a discussion of aerial navigation and its possibilities, including the achievements and hopes of M. Santos-Dumont; and here again Welles showed an intimate knowledge of detail and breadth of comprehension that led Mr. Bowers to whisper to Louise further comment and question concerning the stranger within her gates. An allusion to the characteristics common to most inventors

LONG LIVE THE KING!

BY MARY ROBERTS RINEHART

CHAPTER XXII.

AT ETZEL.

THE following morning the Countess Loschek left for a holiday. Minna, silent and wretched, had packed her things for her, moving about the room like a broken thing. And the Countess had sat in a chair by a window, and said nothing. She sent away food untasted, took no notice of the packing and stared, hour after hour, ahead of her.

Certain things were clear enough. Karl could not now be reached by the old methods. She had, casting caution to the winds, visited the shop where Peter Niburg was employed. But he was not there, and the proprietor, bowing deeply, disclaimed all knowledge of his whereabouts. She would have to go to Karl herself, a difficult matter now. She would surely be watched. And the thousand desperate plans that she thought of for escaping from the country and hiding herself—in America, perhaps—those were impossible for the same reason. She was helpless.

She had the choice of but two alternatives, to do as she had been commanded, for it amounted to that, or to die. The Committee would not kill her, in case she failed them. It would be unnecessary. Enough that they place the letter and the code in the hands of the authorities, by some anonymous means. Well enough she knew the Chancellor's inflexible anger, and the Archduchess Annunciata's cold rage. They would sweep her away with a gesture, and she would die the death of all traitors.

A week! Time had been when a week of the dragging days at the palace had seemed eternity. Now the hours flew. The gold clock on her dressing table, a gift from the Archduchess, marked them with flying hands.

She was, for the first time, cut off from the gossip of the palace. The Archduchess let her severely alone. She disliked having anything interfere with her own comfort, disliked having her routine disturbed. But the Countess surmised a great deal. She guessed that Hedwig would defy them, and that they would break her spirit with high words. She surmised preparations for a hasty marriage—how hasty she dared not think. And she guessed, too, the hopeless predicament of Nikky Larisch.

She sat and stared ahead.

During the afternoon came a package, rather unskillfully tied with a gilt cord. Opening it, the Countess disclosed a glove box of wood, with a design of rather shaky violets burnt into the cover. Inside was a note:

"I am very sorry you are sick. This is to put your gloves in when you travel. Please excuse the work. I have done it in a hurry.

"FERDINAND WILLIAM OTTO."

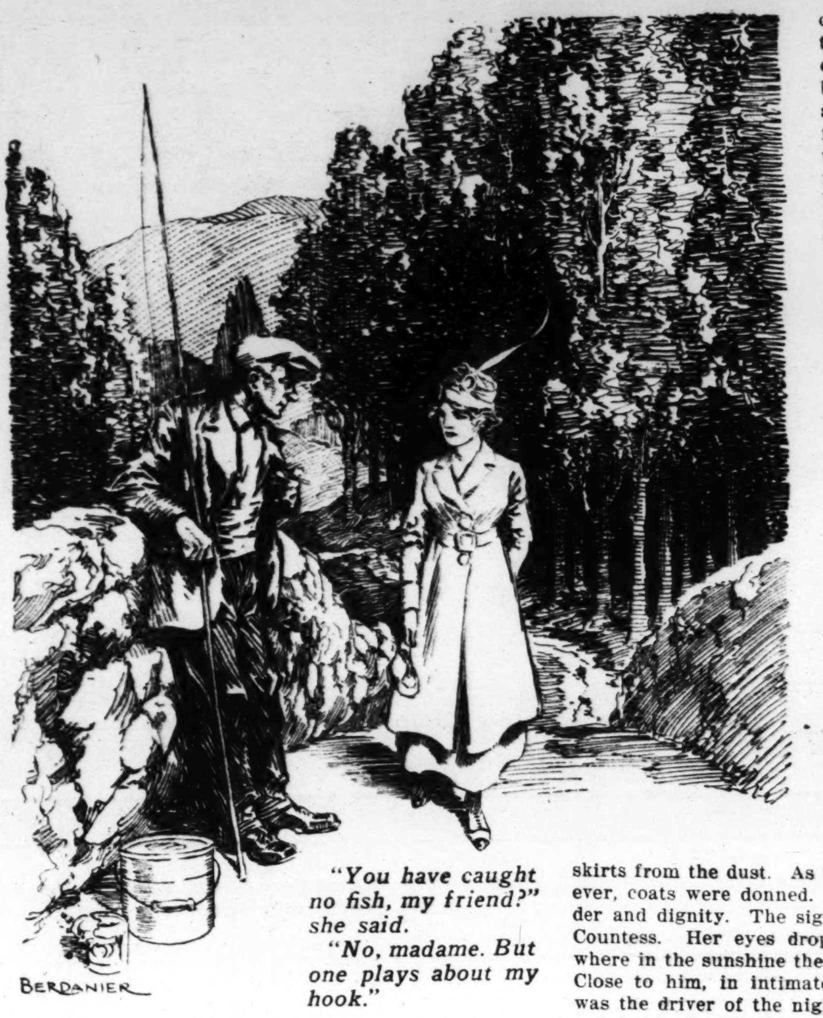
Suddenly the Countess laughed, choking, hysterical laughter that alarmed Minna; horrible laughter, which left her paler than ever, and gasping.

The old castle of the Loscheks looked grim and inhospitable when she reached it that night. Built during the years when the unbeliever overran Southern Europe, it stood in a commanding position over a valley, and a steep, walled road led up to it. The narrow windows of its turrets were built, in defiance of the Moslem herds, in the shape of the cross. Its walls had been hospitable enough, however, when the crusaders had thronged by to redeem the Holy Sepulcher from the grasp of the infidel. Here, on its stone hall, they had slept in weary rows on the floor. From its battlements they had stared south and east along the road their feet must follow.

But now, its ancient glory and good repute departed, its garrison gone, its drawbridge and moat things of the past, its very hangings and furnishings moldering from long neglect, it hung over the valley, a past menace, an empty threat.

To this dreary refuge the Countess had fled. She wanted the silence of its still rooms in which to think. Wretched herself, its wretchedness called her. As the carriage which had brought her from the railway turned into its woods, and she breathed the pungent odor of pine and balsam, she relaxed for the first time.

Why was she so hopeless? She could escape. She knew the woods well. None who followed her could know them so well. She would get away, and somewhere, in a new world, make a fresh start. Surely, after all, peace was the greatest thing in the world.



"You have caught no fish, my friend?" she said.
"No, madame. But one plays about my hook."

Peace! The word attracted her. There were religious houses where one would be safe enough, refuges high-walled and secure, into which no alien foot ever penetrated. And, as if to answer the thought, she saw at that moment, across the valley, the lights of Etzel, the tower of the church, with its 13 bells, the monastery buildings behind it, and set at its feet, like pilgrims come to pray, the low houses of the peasants. For the church at Etzel contained a celebrated shrine, none other than that of Our Lady of Angels, and here came, from all over the kingdom, long lines of footsore and weary pilgrims, seeking peace and sanctity, and some a miracle.

The carriage drove on; Minna, on the box, crossed herself at sight of the church, and chatted with the driver, a great figure, who crowded her to the very edge of the seat.

"I am glad to be here," she said. "I am sick of grandeur. My home is in Etzel." She turned and inspected the man beside her. "You are a newcomer, I think?"

"I have but just come to Etzel."

"Then you cannot tell me about my people." She was disappointed.

"And you," inquired the driver, "you will stay for a visit?"

"A week only. But better than nothing."

"After that, you return to the city?"

"Yes. Madame, the Countess—you would know if you were Etzel-born—Madame, the Countess, is lady-in-waiting to her royal highness, the Archduchess Annunciata."

"So!" said the driver. But he was not curious, and the broken road demanded his attention. He was but newly come, so very newly that he did not know his way, and once made a wrong turning.

The Countess relaxed. She had not been followed. None but themselves had left the train. She was sure of that. And looking back, she satisfied herself that no stealthy foot traveler dogged their slow progress. She breathed quietly, for the first time.

She slept that night. She had wired ahead of her coming, and the old caretaker and his wife had opened a few rooms, her boudoir and dressing room, and a breakfast room on the first floor. They had swept the hall, too, and built a fire there, but it had been built for a great household, and its emptiness chilled her.

At 4 o'clock in the morning she roused at the ringing of a bell, telling that masses had already begun at the church. For with the approach of Lent pilgrimages had greatly increased in numbers. But she slept again, to waken to full sunlight, greatly refreshed.

When she had breakfasted and dressed, she went out on a balcony and looked down at the valley. It was late. Already the peasants of Etzel had gone out to their fields. Children played along its single street. A few women on the steps of the church made rosaries of beads which they strung with deft fingers. A band of pilgrims struggled up the valley, the men carrying their coats, for the sun was warm, and the women holding their skirts from the dust. As they neared the church, however, coats were donned. The procession took on order and dignity. The sight was a familiar one to the Countess. Her eyes dropped to the old wall below, where in the sunshine the caretaker was beating a rug. Close to him, in intimate and cautious conversation, was the driver of the night before. Glancing up, they saw her and at once separated.

Gone was peace, then. The Countess knew—knew certainly. "Our eyes see everywhere." Eyes, indeed—eyes that even now the caretaker raised furtively from his rug.

Nevertheless, the Countess was minded to experiment, to be certain. For none is so suspicious, she knew, as one who fears suspicion. None so guilty as the guilty. During the forenoon she walked through the woods, going briskly, with vigorous, mountain-bred feet. No crackle of underbrush disturbed her. Swift turnings revealed no lurking figures skulking behind the trunks of trees. But where an ancient stone bridge crossed a mountain stream, she came on the huge driver of the night before reflectively fishing.

He saluted her gravely, and the Countess paused and looked at him. "You have caught no fish, my friend?" she said.

"No, madame. But one plays about my hook."

She turned back. Eyes everywhere, and arms, great hairy arms. And feet that, for all their size, must step lightly!

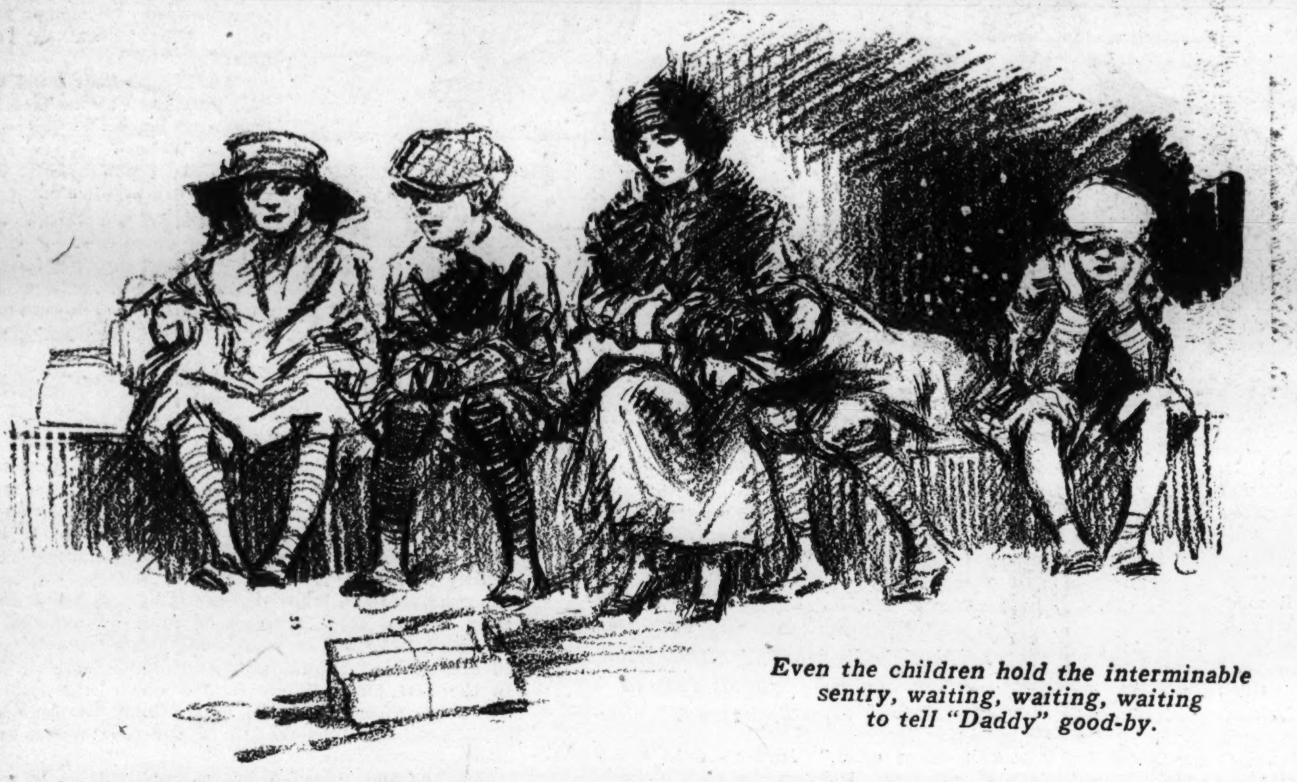
Restlessness followed her. She was a virtual prisoner, free only in name. And the vigilance of the Terrorists obsessed her. She found a day gone, and no plan made. She had come here to think, and consecutive thought was impossible. She went to vespers at the church, and sat huddled in a corner. She suspected every eye that turned on her in frank curiosity. When, during the "Salve Regina," the fathers, followed by their pupils, went slowly down the aisle, in reverent procession between rows of pilgrims, she saw in their habits only a grim reminder of the black disguises of the Terrorists.

On the second day she made a desperate resolve, and characteristically put it into execution at once. She sent for the caretaker. When he came, uneasy, for the Loscheks were justly feared in the countryside, and even the thing of which he knew gave him small courage, she lost no time in evasion.

"Go," she said, "and bring here your accomplice."

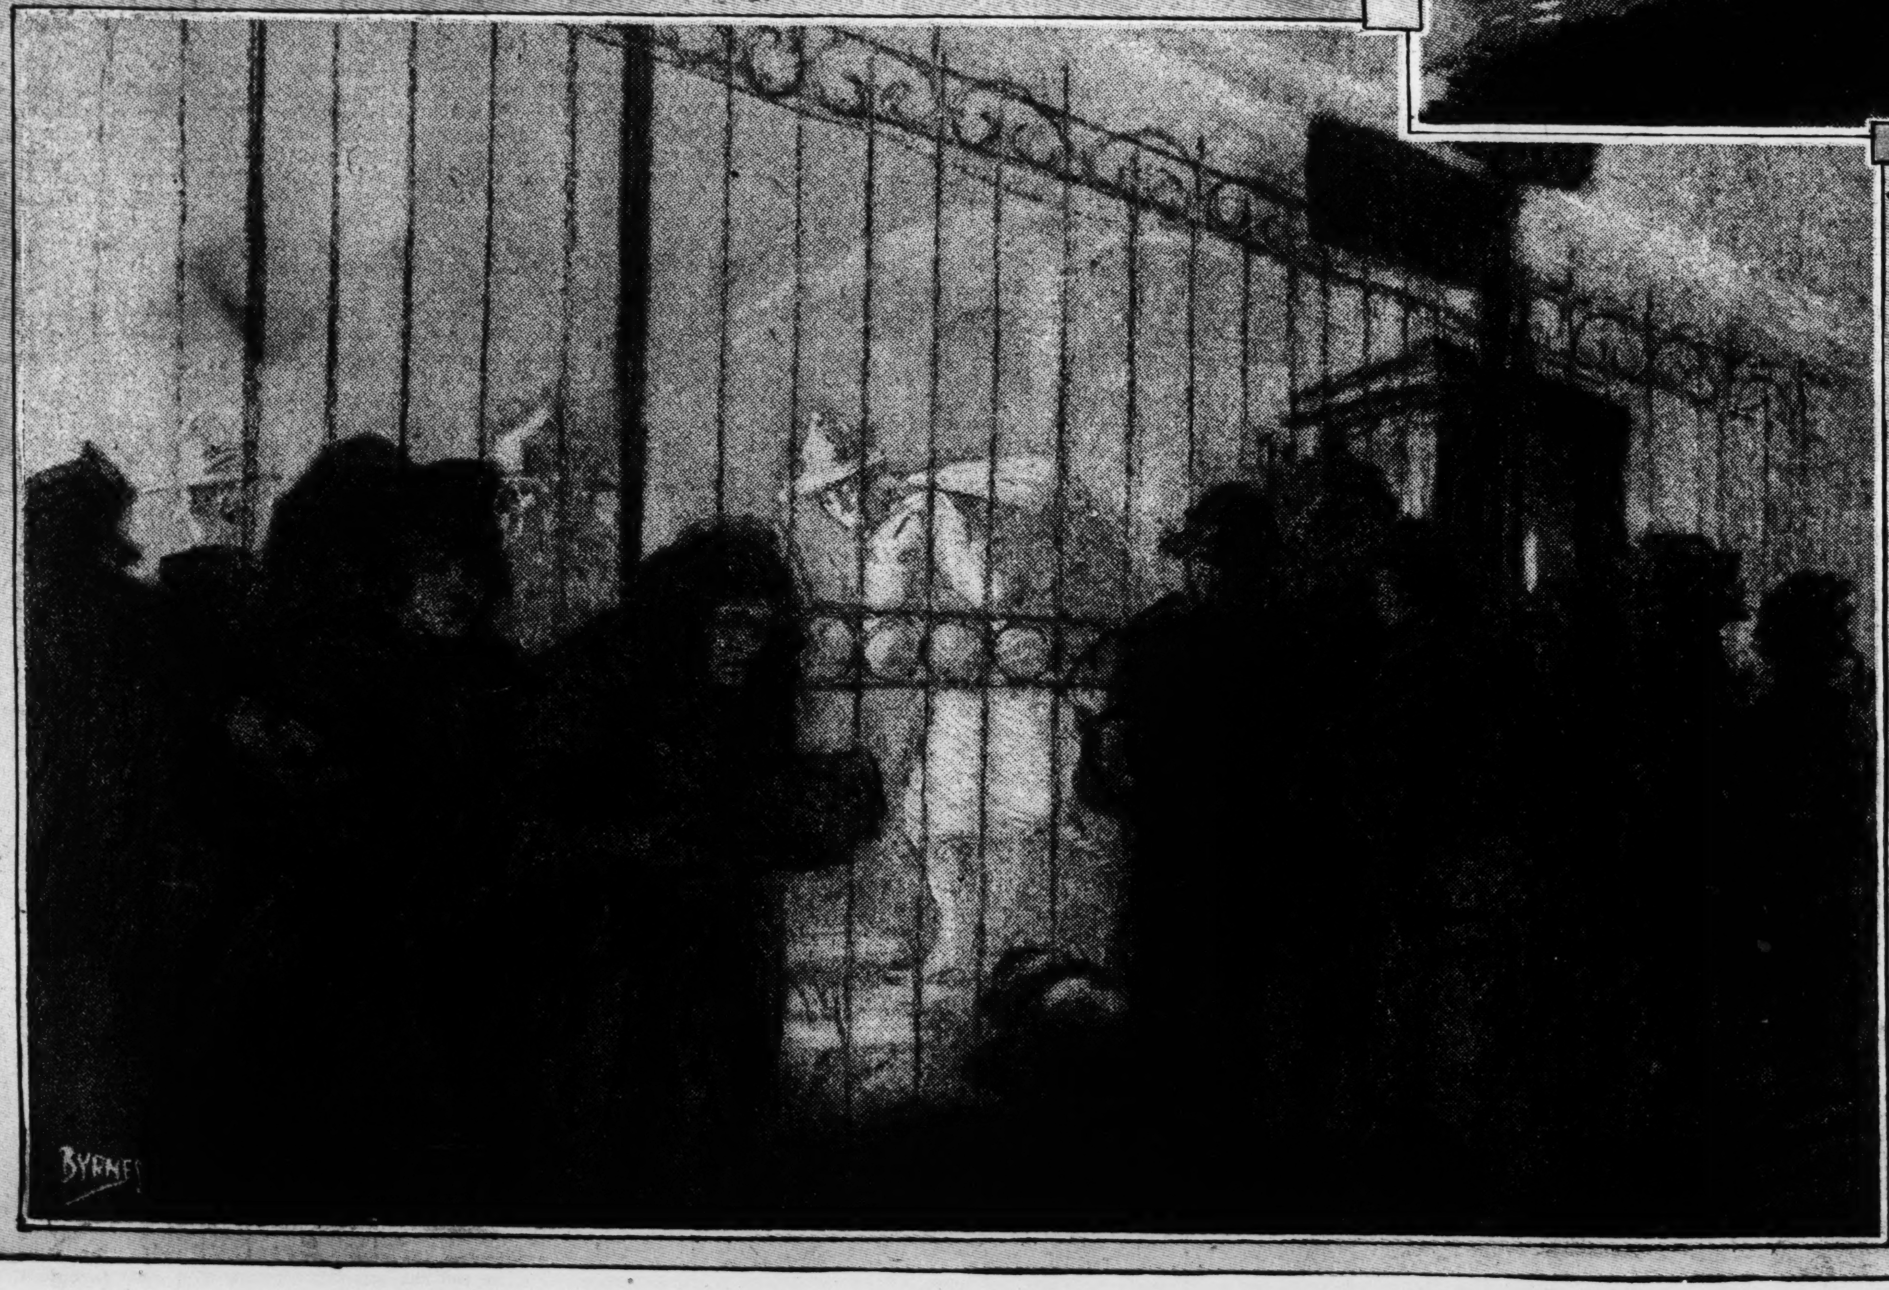
"My accomplice, madame! I do not"——

WHEN TROOP TRAINS PASS THROUGH ST. LOUIS AT NIGHT



Even the children hold the interminable sentry, waiting, waiting, waiting to tell "Daddy" good-by.

In the "No Man's Land" at Union Station, where anxious relatives outwait the night in hope that the next train will bring their boys "over the top."



Keeping vigil at the Midway railing, with a faith that is not weakened by repeated disappointments.

IF one went prowling through the yards at the Union Station in the nights of early April, he was likely to see, under the sudden flashing of a light, a cluster of men, women and children, standing or sitting in attitudes of stolid patience, and most of them clutching tightly boxes and packages. Or he would see old women and little children picking their way across the network of rails and switches, oblivious of danger, towards some train that was backing in.

These were the St. Louis relatives of soldiers in the army camps, keeping vigil night after night in the hope that their own boys would pass through on the way to France. Sometimes the watchers numbered only a few scores; sometimes they assembled by hundreds. Nearly all carried gifts—a cake baked by mother, pastry cooked by wife, or boxes of cigarettes provided by father.

Every day rumors had flown through the city subterraneously that at such an hour a certain detachment would arrive at the station, and then there followed a mobilization of watchers. They never gave up hope, despite repeated disappointments. One aged woman for weeks remained at the station from early morning until late at night, waiting for her son. A police sergeant, with two sons in the army, went to the station when he was relieved at 11 p. m. and sat there until morning. Another woman frequently got a "hunch" at midnight that her son was coming, and promptly set off for the station, often followed by a flock of neighbors.

The pathos of the situation, according to army officers, was that there was but a slender chance for the watchers to find their loved ones, as the authorities, discouraging heart-rending farewells, route the soldiers whenever they can through other points than their home towns. But the faith of the mothers, fathers, wives and sisters could not be shaken; and once in a while one of them was rewarded by finding her soldier boy, telling him good-by and loading him with gifts.
